Poetry.

DARE TO DO RIGHT.

We may have courage, all of us,
To start at honor's call,
To meet a foe, protect a friend,
Or face a cannon ball;
To show the world one hero lives—
The foremost in the fight—
But do we always manifest
The courage to do right?

To anwer, No, with steady breath,
And quick, unfaltering tongue,
When fierce temptation, ever near,
Her syren song has sung?
To care not for the bantering tone,
The jest, or studied slight;
Content if we can only have
The courage to do right?

To step aside from Fashion's course,
Or custom's favored plan,
To pluck an outcast from the street,
Or help a fellow man?
If not, then let us nobly try,
Henceforth, with all our might,
In every case to muster up
The courage to do right!

Receipts, Wit, &c.

COOKIES. Two cups white sugar, one cup butter, one egg, one-half cup sweet milk, flour enough to roll; flavor to suit the taste.

ANOTHER WAY. One cup butter, one and one-half cups sugar, then mix until creamy, one cup of sour milk, one egg, one teaspoon of soda, and enough flour to make it roll out easily.

☞ Disappointment is the lot of mortality. This is an old saying, and to some extent it expresses the experiences of every human being. There is no one in whose life some morning of sunshine and brightness has not proved the opening of a day overcast with clouds, and perhaps made gloomy and terrific with storms.

☞ A Hartford paper thus felicitously tells how a lady saw stars: A new planet was discovered yesterday in the central heavens the exact constellation and position not discovered. The discoverer weighed 200 pounds, and was coming out of the market when she was interrupted by a watermelon rind. She named it "Gosh!"

☞ The chief of the Hudson police received the following message from John Van Vechten of Catskill; "Please to go to Frank Paine's and get my wife and send her home on the day boat down. If she will not come home send her up for six months; but if she will come home, let her go. She has short black hair and dark eyes.

☞ At the marriage of an Alabama widower, one of the servants was asked if his master would take a bridal tour.—"Dunno, sah; when old missus alive he took a paddle to her; dunno if he take a bridle to de new one or no."

☞ "You didn't laugh at my stupidity before we were married; you always said I was a duck of a lover," grumbled a complaining husband. "Yes, that's so," replied the wife; "and a duck of a lover is almost sure to make a goose of a husband."

☞ "My dear doctor," said an Irishman, "it's no use giving me an emetic. I tried it twice in Dublin, and it would not stay on my stomach five minutes."

☞ The more a man works, the less time he will have to grumble about hard times.

☞ The tear of a loving girl is like a dew drop on the rose; but that on the cheek of a wife is a drop of poison to her husband.

☞ What a marked distinction there is between brutal courage and the intrepid conduct of principle; yet they are frequently confounded by the undiscerning, who set down blustering for bravery.

☞ It never was a wise thing yet to make men desperate, for one who hath no hope of good, hath no fear of evil.

☞ He who marries for beauty only, is like a buyer of cheap furniture—the varnish that caught the eye will not endure the fireside blaze.

☞ That which makes man so discontented with his own condition, is the false and exaggerated estimate he is apt to form of the happiness of others.

JOHN SHIPLEY'S REVENGE.

"If you ever darken my doorway again, John Shipley, I will horsewhip you; and as for my daughter Amy, I shall forbid her holding any more communication with you whatever; you are a stubborn, self-willed, insolent dog."

These unkind and unjust words were addressed to a noble and intelligent looking young man who stood before the door of old Judge Marvin, and who lingered for a moment as the cruel language fell upon his ear, as if reluctant to depart, and then raising his eyes and fixing them full upon the Judge's with a look more of sorrow than of anger, he exclaimed,—"Listen, Judge, and mark well my words; for all your unkind treatment to me to-day, I will be revenged," and thus saying he walked away.

In the little village of Sterling there was no more intelligent, more truthful or noble young man than John Shipley, consequently there was none more popular among all classes than he. His light heart, happy smile, and his seemingly inexhaustible fund of mirth made him an especial favorite among all the young people of the village, while his respectful manner, his readiness to converse on almost any subject, and at the same time, his willingness to listen to others, which, by the way, is one of the secrets of pleasing, caused many an invitation from the 'Papas' and 'Mammas' to be extended to John, "to drop in and spend the evening."

But although John Shipley was thus ever kind and striving to please; there was nothing weak or vascillating in his character. He could say no as easily as yes when his judgment told that was the proper answer, and whatever were his convictions of duty he was firm in following them out, let the consequences be what they might, or however great the sacrifice. It is not to be wondered at that sweet Amy Marvin, the Judge's only daughter, and the belle of Sterling, justly so called, should have learned to look with pleasure upon the attentions which John, whose visits at her father's house was very frequent, showed towards her, nor that her cheek should flush, and her heart beat rapidly when she heard his footsteps. And as for John, with all his ready command of words, he had been for months trying to frame that old story which Adam told to Eve in Eden's garden, in order that he might tell it to Amy, but as yet it remained unsaid. Unsaid, but not unknown, for Amy had read it all, more than once in the fond glance of John's eye as it rested upon her.

Judge Marvin was a kind old man, generous and courteous when not upon his hobby, but woe to the luckless individual who laid a stick or straw in his way at such a time. The Judge's hobby was politics, and until within a few months previous to the time of this story John Shipley and the old man had not differed materially in their political views and the old Judge looked with evident satisfaction upon John as his future son-in-law.

But there had been an exciting political campaign, in which John had seen fit to differ with the Judge, and had not hesitated boldly to express his views. He renounced all party lines and regarded only measures and principles; consequently his choice for men to fill those offices which were in the gift of the people had fallen upon different candidates from those whom the Judge, adhering rigidly to party, wished him to vote for. The old man had believed John would finally yield, but when the day of election came and he saw him cast in his ballot for the candidates whom he, the Judge, opposed, John had crossed his path, and his wrath knew no bounds. And when on the evening of the same day John strolled over to see Amy, a scene had occurred which terminated as we have shown at the commencement of this sketch.

"Yes," said John to himself as he walked dejectedly homeward, "I will have my revenge, and if the good Lord will but give me the opportunity I will show the unreasonable old man how noble a revenge I can take." It is true, that at the first the blood had boiled indignantly in his veins as he listened to the unkind words, but he had command of himself and gained the victory over passion. John was a christian, and though the victories gained through faith in the Son of God, are often bloodless, yet they are none the less grand, and the greatest conqueror is he who has learned to conquer self.

Months passed by, which to John seemed ages, shut out as he was from the society of his beloved Amy, while she, too, became changed from the light joyous, happy creature she had once been, and seemed like one to whom life had lost its charms. Judge Marvin noticed this change in his beloved daughter, yet, while he surmised the cause, he was too self-willed and proud to relent toward John, whom he passed very frequently in the village without ever noticing.

There were other aspirants for the hand and smiles of Amy, but while she treated all cautiously, she gave no encouragement to any of them, and even her father was compelled to admit to himself that not one of the young men who visited his house would he be so willing to look upon as a candidate for his daughter's hand as John Shipley.

A few rods to the rear of Judge Marvin's mansion was a little glen through which ran a small stream, and where the noble old oaks which had been left standing stretched their branches across from either side of the stream until the intermingling foliage formed in summer time a shade that was almost impenetrable to the rays of the sun. To this pleasant and secluded spot had the lovers often strolled together in former days, and here Amy came one beautiful sunny day in June, with a book in her hand, but her eyes were not upon its pages. A sigh escaped her as she remembered the happy hours spent here with one to whom she was now forbidden to speak, and seating herself upon the mossy bank beneath a venerable old oak, she gave way to her feelings in tears. Supposing herself alone she sobbed aloud, and turning her eyes heavenward, exclaimed, "Oh my God! give him back to me again, the joy and sunlight of my life." As she uttered this petition a familiar voice murmured her name, a manly arm encircled her waist, and John Shipley was kissing away her tears. "My own Amy," said he "I have now learned what I have long wished to know, that you love me, and, please God, no hand of man shall keep us apart, or debar us from loving each other."

It is hardly necessary to state how John had tired of his law books, and had wandered out to the glen to recall the old and pleasing associations connected with the spot, and how he had thrown himself upon the ground beneath the trees and remained there in a revery until Amy's approach had aroused him from it. Some impulse led him to remain quiet until her tears and exclamation had revealed to him that which he most desired to know.

This interview was but the first of many stolen meetings which the lovers held with each other in their trysting place. One beautiful moonlight evening as John was returning to his home after one of these meetings with his beloved Amy, his attention was arrested by the sound of voices in an old barn near which he was obliged to pass as he crossed the fields to reach the public road leading to the village. Hearing Judge Marvin's name mentioned he stopped to listen, and, to his horror, heard a plot to rob and murder the Judge on the following evening as he should be on his return from a neighboring town about ten miles distant, whither he had gone to draw a large sum of money from the bank. John was able to distinguish from the voices that one of these villians was a man who had been working for the Judge several months and knew of his absence, and when he expected to return, and also that he would have money with him. John had soon made up his mind how to act, and stealing quietly away from the place he reached his home. On the following morning he procured two revolvers, and then proceeding to the residence of the Judge, whom he knew to be absent, he gained an interview with Amy, and from her obtained a suit of her father's clothing telling her he would explain everything at their next meeting. Placing this in a valise he saddled a horse in his father's stable and was soon on his way to the town of Westfield.

The highway between Westfield and Sterling was a lonely road and for a considerable distance lay through a dense piece of woods. About half way between the two towns was an old saw mill which had long since fallen into disuse; an old stone house had stood near it; but after the death of its owner, many years before, it had gone to decay, and only a portion of the walls remained standing. The plot which Shipley had so timely overheard was that one of the villians who boasted of being a sure shot, should station himself behind the ruins of the old building with a rifle, and await the coming of the intended victim, while the other should station himself at a little distance and, on the approach of the Judge, should give notice to his comrade by imitating the hooting of an owl. Their intentions were to shoot the Judge, and after robbing him to conceal his body beneath the dust and refuse matter of the old saw mill.

When John arrived at Westfield he proceeded at once to the hotel where he supposed he should find Judge Marvin.—He was not disappointed, but as he had expected, the old man although looking surprised on seeing him enter the hotel, seemed to take no further notice of him. John knew that the Judge would not set out on his return home much before evening, as he had business which must detain him. He watched the opportunity however, and as soon as he saw the old man take his hat after dinner, and go out, he followed him, and overtaking him upon the street, said: "Judge, you must listen to me, I have followed you to save your life." He then proceeded to detail the plot which he had overheard on the previous night, while the Judge listened with horror. "And what do you propose that we shall do, young man," said he, as John finished. John then stated his plan of action, which was that they should go an hour or two before dusk to the house of a farmer, living a mile or two out of town on the Sterling road, and there procure straw with which the suit of clothes John had brought should be stuffed. This straw image was then to be firmly bound to the saddle of Judge Marvin's horse, and at dark the horse should be led out a mile or two upon the road by the farmer, and let loose with his head toward home. In the meantime, after preparing the image and getting things in readiness, John and the Judge were to go on, and on nearing the spot where the villians had agreed to meet, were to make a detour through the woods and come up in the rear of the old stone house and conceal themselves among the ruins. As John detailed his plan the old man grasped his hand in a manner which said more than words could have told him, and gave him a look which said "I trust you."

Everything worked well: the image which they prepared and bound to the horse would have, in the dim light penetrated the foliage of the trees along the lonely road, the appearance of a man, and the Judge's hat upon it would complete the deception. The Judge procured another hat, and he and John set out for the ruined building. This they reached in due time and cautiously approaching from the rear concealed themselves.

They had been here about half an hour when they heard voices, and the sound of approaching footsteps and soon two men made their appearance, one of them carrying a rifle. One of these men the Judge, who cautiously peered out from his hiding place, recognized at once as his hired man. The other who bore the rifle was a stranger and wore every appearance of a villian. The ruffians having fortified their courage by repeated draughts from a black bottle, next proceeded to mask themselves. This was unnecessary for the shades of night now began to fall around them; but villiany can never sufficiently cloak itself. The men then separated, one going a few rods out upon the Westfield road, to give the signal on the approach of the expected horse and rider. John Shipley also stole quietly forth from his hiding place, and stealthily followed him and secreted himself near him in the woods, but a few steps from the road.

A half hour passed, and now was heard the sound of a horse approaching. As he neared the spot, trotting along at an easy gait, the dim outline of a man's figure could be seen in the saddle; at this instant the hoot of an owl broke upon the night and the next moment the sharp crack of a rifle was heard, but the figure only swayed a little from side to side, and the horse, startled by the report of the piece, dashed rapidly forward.

The would be murderer looked amazed at the result, and stood cursing his rifle for failing him at this time, when suddenly a heavy blow from behind felled him to the ground, and he came to his senses to find himself securely bound. Young Shipley had secured the other villain in like manner immediately after his giving the signal, and now they only awaited the coming of the farmer, whom they had instructed to be not far distant, and to approach on hearing the report of the rifle. They were not compelled to wait long, for he soon appeared riding in his farm wagon, and leading Shipley's horse behind. The precious pair of ruffians were placed in the bottom of the wagon and in an hour were securely lodged in the county jail.

John Shipley entered Judge Marvin's house that night with its owner, and it is hardly necessary to state, did not receive the promised horse whipping, but instead a salute from Amy's sweet lips, which had such a terrible effect, that I believe he has not recovered therefrom to this day; and often his little pet sunny-haired girl, Amy the second, clambers upon his knee and wants "papa to please show her Grandpa's hat with a bullet hole through it, and tell her all about it just once more."

Kindness in Little Things.

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams, that are bright all the time. In the nursery, on the play-ground and in the schoolroom, there is room all the time for little acts of kindness that cost nothing, but are worth more than gold or silver. To give up something, where giving up will prevent unhappiness; to yield, when persisting will chafe and fret others; to go a little round, rather than come against another; to take an ill word or a cross look, rather than resent or return it—these are the ways in which clouds and storms are kept off, and a pleasant smiling sunshine secured even in the humble home, among poor people, as in families in wealthier homes. Much that we term the miseries of life would be avoided by adopting this rule of conduct.

Born in Him.

Old Sambo Jute, long since gone across the dark valley, was a worthy man in his way, and genial withal; but Sambo occasionally got drunk. One day his employer took him to task and read him a lecture at the close of which he asked him if he didn't think he would do better in the future.

"Dunno, mass'r," said the darkey, scratching his head.

"But what do you think?"

"Well, mass'r," I'se afeared I think not."

"Sambo, what do you mean. Do you mean that you will not try?"

"'Twouldn't be no use, mass'r. Fact is, 'twas born in me. Rum is my nat'ral drink. Yer see, afore I was born, my father and mother were boff bought on de coast of Africa, and paid for in rum."

A Word to Housekeepers.

Our spring cleaning is at hand. Busy hands will sweep, wash and garnish our homes and yet we may not be clean.—Dr. Simon in his little work on "Filth Diseases," just published, startles us with a revelation of many hidden causes of sickness and death from household impurities, such as neglected offal, excremental deposits and defective drainage. But the one from which the writer's family believes themselves to have suffered the past few weeks in sickness and death was the plumber's blunder in opening the slop pipe and bath room overflow into the privy vault. This, as Dr. S. shows, and as any one sees, opens a cause of poisoning that may result in diphtheria, typhus or other diseases.

While then cleaning "the outside of the platter," windows and floors, lawn and garden, forget not the hidden but deadly sources of disease found in faulty sewerage. No more timely little volume has been issued for years by Campbell of Boston, than this, and with earnestness we desire to call attention to the central facts which is its aim to unfold.

HOUSEKEEPER.

For the Patriot.

MR. EDITOR:

Sir,—I would like to inquire in your columns, why it is that men are allowed to sift and empty their ashes into the streets? filling our eyes full of dust as we pass on the way to the depot to attend to our daily labors. It seems to me that it only shows a mark of extreme laziness, as it is only a step to the rear of their places of business. This morning as I passed down, I had my eyes completely filled near the place known as the "Hollow." I should think that the Selectmen would now take the matter in hand, and put an injunction upon it, as it only fills up the gutters which have been cleaned out the past year, stopping the flow of water, and making it very muddy for any one crossing the street. So hoping these lines will meet the eyes of those for whom they are intended, and that they will see that we have good causes for alluding to the matter, I remain,

Very respectfully,
ANDREW FLOYD.
March 9th, 1876.

It Don't Pay.

It don't pay to have fifty working men poor and ragged, in order to have one saloon-keeper dressed in broad cloth and flush of money.

It don't pay to have these fifty working men live on bone soup and half rations, in order that the saloon-keeper may flourish on roast turkey and champagne.

It don't pay to have the mothers and children of twenty families dressed in rags, starved into the semblance of emaciated scarecrows and live in hovels, in order that the saloon-keeper's wife may dress in satin, and her children grow fat and hearty and live in a bay window parlor.

It don't pay to have one citizen in the county jail, because another citizen sold him liquor.

It don't pay to have ten smart, active and intelligent boys transformed into hoodlums and thieves, to enable one man to lead an easy life by selling them liquor.

It don't pay to give one man, for $15 a quarter, a license to sell liquor, and then spend $20,000 on the trial of Tip McLaughlin for buying that liquor, and then committing murder under its influence.

It don't pay to have one thousand homes blasted, ruined, defiled and turned into hells of disorder and misery, in order that one wholesale liquor dealer may amass a large fortune.

It don't pay to keep six thousand men in the penitentiaries and hospitals, and one thousand in the lunatic asylum, at the expense of the honest, industrious tax-payers, in order that a few rich capitalists may grow richer by the manufacture of whiskey.

It don't pay to permit the existence of a traffic which only results in crime, poverty, misery and death, and which never did, never can, and never will do any good.

It never pays to do wrong; your sin will find you out; whether others find it out or not, the sin knows where you are, and will always keep you posted of the fact. It don't pay.—California Rescue.

Don't be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything, to run against all the sharp corners and find out all the disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growling would often set things right. You may as well make up your mind, to begin with, that nobody ever found the world quite as he would like it; but you are to take your share of the trouble and bear it bravely. You will be very sure to have burdens laid upon you that belong to other people, unless you are a shirk yourself; but don't grumble. If the work needs doing and you can do it, never mind about the other boy who ought to have done it and didn't. Those workers who fill up the gaps and smooth away the rough spots, and finish up the job that others leave undone—they are true peacemakers, and worth a whole regiment of growlers.

The Woman's Convention.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts held a Norfolk County Convention in the Town Hall in this place on Thursday afternoon.

The meeting was called at one o'clock. The President being absent the meeting was opened by prayers by several ladies, followed by singing by the audience. Mrs. M. A. Livermore arrived by 1.30, and after informing the assembly what was to be done at the meeting, introduced Mrs. Ward of Salem, agent of the Massachusetts Woman's Temperance Association. She made a brief review of the work being done in Essex County, and said the clergy in Salem were opposed to them.

Mrs. Richards of Charlestown was then introduced. She stated that since the reform movement was inaugurated, 2000 names had been obtained, mainly through the influence of the Ladies' Association. The saloons there were not paying their way at the present time.

Mrs. Barrett gave an interesting account of the noble work done at the [illegible] North End,—Boston [illegible]n. The ladies had established a prayer meeting and held conference in an unoccupied saloon, and had already converted a great many. The rumsellers of the district offered as an inducement, to furnish liquor free to the members of the meeting if they could lure them.

Mrs. McCoy of South Boston, urged the women to aid in the fair to be held in Boston soon, under the auspices of the M. W. T. A.

Mrs. Livermore then made a stirring speech, in which she said she thought if the Legislature would meet only once in two years, and then last only six weeks, a great deal of mischief would be avoided. She said the liquor sellers had to keep the curtains up in their windows in Iowa, by authority, in order to let the people know how they carried on their nefarious traffic. She said she was invited to a dinner party of an Ex-Senator, where there were seven ministers. Wine was placed by her plate, but she refused to drink it for the following reasons:—First, it changed a sensible woman into a fool. Second, she believed that rum was the father of all evils, and did more damage than all the other evils put together.

The subject was instantly taken up and for two hours the dinner party was turned into a temperance meeting.

She said if the ladies wished to carry the movement in this state, they must face the opposition of some of the clergy.

Mrs. Nichols of Chelsea next spoke. She thought that place the hardest in the State. The pastors and many of the people were against them. But the ladies were bound to overcome all obstacles.

Mr. Chapin of North Weymouth, said there was not a place in the district, where liquors were sold. In East Weymouth, the Ladies went to the prominent liquor seller in the place, and by prayers and solicitations, induced him to close his shop. He remarked, as he did so, that he didn't want to stay where the women were so much against the rumseller.

Mrs. Bieler, President of the Woman's Temperance Club, of Quincy, said they had not learned yet to walk; but were very earnest in the work, and expected to do a great deal before they got through.

Many other ladies made interesting remarks, but room does not permit us to notice them.

In the evening, the hall was filled to overflowing, by an appreciative audience. The gallery was reserved for the Reform Club. Mrs. Livermore, Mrs. Doutney and Mrs. Harper, spoke to the assembly. Very able addresses were delivered and listened to with marked attention. At the close, the Club was invited to a collation in the Lyceum Room.

THE TRIAL. A small hand engine manufactured by the Chase Manufacturing Company of Boston, was on exhibition and trial in our village, on Thursday afternoon. Quite a large gathering of gentlemen were present to witness its working. The machine would throw a good handsome stream over a two story building, but it worked hard,—no two men, or four, could work it more than a few moments at a time,—and it was a good deal like drawing teeth at that,—a decidedly unpleasant duty at the best. It might answer tolerably well in a small village where the inhabitants did not wish to go to any great expense. The price of the engine was $300.

FOR SALE. The Quincy Reform Club in excavating under their new building, have run against a bank of loam, sand and clay, and Mr. John Q. Bent has been appointed agent by the Board of Trustees, to sell the same by the load. Any one wishing either of the articles will help the Club by ordering the same at once.

PEWS. All persons desirous of renting pews in the Universalist Church, for the ensuing year, are invited to be present at the auction sale on Fast Day, at 3 o'clock.

PROPOSALS. It is expected that the Trustees of the Quincy Reform Club,—Messrs. John R. Graham, John P. Bigelow and James McGrath,—will be ready next week to receive bids for the stone, brick and carpenter work in the contemplated repairs on the building owned by the Club, corner of Sea and Canal streets. All those who propose contracting for any part will do well to call upon the Trustees for particulars.

TEMPERANCE ON FAST DAY. The Advisory Committee of the Massachusetts Temperance Alliance have voted unanimously to invite the clergymen of the State of all denominations to use the approaching Fast Day in the interests of temperance, by preaching on the subject or holding special temperance meetings.

APPOINTMENTS. The following appointments have been made by the new Board of Selectmen for the year ensuing:—

Measurers of Wood and Bark,—Richard Newcomb, Christopher A. Spear, Edward A. Adams, H. Walter Gray, Nathaniel H. Beals, E. H. Doble, Seth B. Bass, S. F. Newcomb, George B. Pray, James C. Russell.

Weighers of Hay and Granite,—W. W. Ewell, Freeman Josephs.

Weigher of Vessels,—George Saville.

Sealer of Weights and Measures,—George Saville.

Weigher of Grain,—Warren W. Adams.

Special Police,—John C. Easton.

Superintendent of the Lock-Up,—W. M. French.

Sexton and Undertaker,—John Hall.

Superintendent of Town Hall,—Jacob Flint.

Care of Town Clock,—John O. Holden.

To take charge of the Poor at Almshouse,—J. A. Gordon, M. D.

PARISH MEETING. The annual meeting of the Evangelical Congregational Society, was held on Monday evening, Mar. 20th.

Dea. Elbridge Clapp, was chosen Moderator, and the following officers were chosen for the year ensuing:—

Clerk, James S. Baxter.

Standing Committee, C. W. Carter, J. O. Jones, H. Walter Gray.

Treasurer, Franklin Hardwick.

It was voted that the pews should be rented by a committee chosen for that purpose; and James S. Baxter and John A. Pratt, were appointed that Committee.

This society we are glad to say commences its new year unburdened by debt, and warmly united in their attachment to their earnest and devoted Pastor.

AMENDMENTS. The members of the Quincy Reform Club have so amended their Constitution as to admit any gentleman becoming an Honorary Member of the Club, whether he has drank intoxicating liquors to excess or not. This we believe to be a move in the right direction, for there are many good citizens, who are desirous of helping the Club and will join their ranks and lend their aid and influence, in lifting the Club to a position that will command the respect of the townspeople.

The amendments read as follows:—

ART. XXVII. Any person may become an Honorary Member, by paying one dollar and signing pledge.

ART. XXVIII. Honorary Members are subject to Constitution and By-Laws, and allowed voice at all meetings.

☞ The Selectmen have given the contract to build the new barn at the Almshouse to Mr. Thomas, who has commenced work on the same. The building will be 32 by 35 feet.

NEW SHOP. George G. Souther has raised and boarded the present week a two-story building for his own use. It is on land of Henry H. Faxon, near the Old Colony railroad, and in the rear of Mr. Chubbuck's store. It is designed for a general wood-working establishment. Bracket and scroll work will be attended to.

☞ The Club holds its regular public meeting at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening next, at which the public are cordially invited to attend.

☞ Great bankrupt sale at Cushman & Brooks, 35 to 39 Temple Place, Boston. Read their advertisement in to-day's paper, and when you visit the city secure good bargains.

INVITATION ACCEPTED. The Quincy Reform Club have received an invitation from Rev. S. L. Bieler to attend service at his churches. It was a unanimous vote of the Club to visit his church at the Point to-morrow forenoon. Probably the following Sunday they will accept his invitation to attend services at Wollaston Heights.

ALFRED TISDELLE, a French carpenter, of Worcester, Mass., has a checker-board, the result of his leisure time for two years, which he proposes to exhibit at the Centennial. It is made of 33 kinds of wood in 3,843 pieces, one side being the American board, and the other the French, using 60 checkers. At each end are small drawers for the checkers, while one side is made to open on hinges, disclosing a finely-carved frame and a portrait of the maker.

☞ Every recruit for the British army has to spend four hours in gymnastic exercises each day during the first three months of his service. The various gymnasiums provided for this purpose by the Government are fitted up with all the common athletic appliances and skilled instructors.

☞ This year will be a great year for this American nation. It is leap year, Presidential election year and the Centennial Anniversary of our Independence, and for the purpose of giving us a rest during so much excitement there will be one extra Sunday, or fifty-three in all.

☞ The favorite Fall River steamers, Bristol and Providence are being repaired for the summer season at a cost of $75,000. They will soon be placed on the route, and the Old Colony and Newport, the winter boats will not be withdrawn for repairs, until about the 1st of June.

☞ They have a pretty tough Dutchman in Dedham jail. He has persistently refused to do his allowance of work, though he has been punished by confinement in the "solitary" four or five times.

☞ A rare chance to secure a pleasant home, in one of the best localities in town, is offered through our columns to-day. Read advertisement of furnished house to let.

SOCIABLE. The complimentary party to the young ladies of Quincy, given at the Town Hall Wednesday evening, as an appropriate close to the dancing season, was participated in by about seventy couple, and was a select and very enjoyable affair.

A Good Meeting.

The Quincy Reform Club had an excellent meeting at their Hall, corner of Sea and Canal streets, on Wednesday evening last. The President being absent, Vice President Bent, called the Brothers to order, and invited their attention to an address by our townsman, Joseph T. French. Few better lectures have the Club had the pleasure of listening to, than that which fell from his lips.

Mr. French is a native of Quincy. His father, as is well known, kept the old country tavern, where all travellers found all they desired, both to eat and drink. The speaker, we might say, without great stretch of language, was born and brought up in a bar-room, and unfortunately early learned the effects of strong drink. We think he said at the tender age of twelve he first became intoxicated; and, from that time, until he was forty, he became very familiar with the evil effect of the intoxicating cup. Numerous incidents connected with this unfortunate period of his life he related, which many knew to be too true.

He said it was now nine years since he abandoned "the cup." He tried the third time before he succeeded. Once, he went a year, and the second time about two, and then fell back to his old habits. But now he had conquered the demon, and meant to keep it under his feet. He hoped all the members would keep their pledge, but if the tempter should lead them astray, do not give up, but try again,—even to the third time, as he had done.

On concluding his speech, Mr. French was greeted with long and hearty applause. The cheers were well deserved, for his remarks were to the point, and must have good effect upon his attentive listeners.

Mr. Lewis G. Mackintire, of West Quincy, a member of the Reform Club, related a few incidents connected with his life. One quite interesting story, although deplorable, was his attempt to carry home a leg of bacon. Mr Mackintire said he received it at the store and started for home; but instead of going directly home, he took the longest way round, so as to get several drinks by the road. As he wended his course homeward in the middle of the night, with crooked steps, he fell into the gutter, the ham accompanying him. He had all he could do to pick himself up,—the ham was obliged to remain in the slum. The next morning he asked his wife to cook some ham for breakfast, having forgot where he had left it. But now he has taken a decided stand, and was bound to keep his pledge. He found no trouble in carrying home his provisions, and that which was good, and what was better he could earn good wages, and have plenty of money to pay for them.

Messrs. Henry H. Faxon, George S. Phillips, Albert G. Dolliver, Florence Crowley, Charles A. Follett, and others spoke on this occasion, but room will not permit us to give our readers the many good things that were said.

DISTRICT COURT. John Welch, of Weymouth, arrested for being drunk.—Found guilty, and fined $3 and costs.—For non-payment was committed to the House of Correction, kept by Sheriff Thomas of Dedham.

Charles Bond, of Brockton, for a similar offence, was also carried to Dedham.

Several parties who have been convicted, but appealed, have come forward and withdrawn their appeals, and paid the fines imposed,— varying from $50 downward.

William A. Gardner, of Milton, for drunkenness. He signed the pledge, tied on the red ribbon, and the kind Judge placed the case on file.

DIRECTORY. The Quincy Directory will be published this year by Messrs. C. W. Calkins & Co., of Boston, and will be made as complete and useful a volume as possible. No expense or pains will be spared on the part of the Publishers, and we trust that our citizens will accord the work a liberal patronage.

Messrs. Calkins & Co., have a high reputation in their line, and business men may be sure of prominent and attractive notices in the advertising department.

We trust our citizens will aid the canvassers by any information they may require.

RECOVERED. The son of Alexander Mason, who was so seriously injured by falling from a bridge, on the West Quincy railroad, has so far recovered as to be able to be up and walking around. It was thought at the time the little fellow was hurt, that he would not survive, but, by careful attendance, he is now enjoying good health.

☞ An empty car attached to a freight train on the Old Colony road jumped the track near Taunton, Monday. It was instantly followed by 34 others, which were smashed into kindling wood on each side of the track. The trains were obliged to transfer passengers around the wreck until night.

CONGRESSIONAL. Gen. Banks presented in the House Tuesday the resolution of the Massachusetts Legislature in favor of a metric system of weights and measures.

REAL ESTATE SALES. Peter Wainwright sold twenty-five acres of land in East Braintree, to Mrs. Jeanne P., wife of William Amory, Jr., for $8000.

Henry T. Bicknell and John A. Holbrook, sold thirty-four square rods of land, off Sea street, in Weymouth, to Arthur W. Phillips for $1700.

SPRING. Now the month of smiles and tears having arrived, we may expect some settled, pleasant weather. March has been variable; as usual, the disagreeable unpleasantness prevailing. During its reign we have had the four seasons presented, and as it drew to a close, heavy rains in abundance, which have caused great damage. Bluebirds and robins came to their summer homes some two weeks since, and in some localities the frogs have crawled from their warm, soft beds and piped their spring songs. Crocuses and other early flowers are now peeping above ground, and the organ grinder, with his tune of "spring gentle spring," is heard on our streets. All hail! thou glorious spring.

For the Patriot.

Base Ball in the Streets.

The practice has again opened, of devoting our chief thoroughfare during a portion of the day, to the purposes of base-ball playing.

Are the citizens of Quincy, disposed to quietly submit to this imposition, which during its continuance endangers the lives and limbs of the passers-by?

The exercise in itself is highly commendable as a means of physical development, but the public streets hardly seem to be the proper field for its operation.

It is a matter for the attention of the Selectmen and it is to be hoped that their action will be prompt and satisfactory.

TRAVELER.

For the Patriot.

Wollaston Heights.

The entertainment given by Prof. S. R. Kelley at the M. E. Chapel, on last Monday evening, proved to be a decided success. Prof. K's selections from Mark Twain, Mrs. Browning, were the especial delight of the audience the first part of the evening. He certainly excels in the comic department. Sad indeed must have been a soul who could not laugh,—few we think left without a merrier heart than when they came.

The second part, was devoted to Longfellow's beautiful poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," illustrated by tableaux vivants. In this [illegible] part the tableaux were paramount. One could fancy themselves living over the days of the good old colonial times. The Parson, Priscilla, John Alden, the Captain and the Indians all contributed to confirm it.

Especial thanks and credit are due to Miss Anna D. Smith and Mrs. Bracken in preparations of habits for the Indians, "who out-Indianed all the Indians of these latter days."

The scenes were so accurate, the characters all so well selected, that it is doubted if the old worthies themselves acted it out so well.

B.

Complimentary.

The following abstract is from a letter to the London (Eng.,) Telegraph, and pays a high compliment to one of our citizens, Mr. Arthur Swan.

"Doubtless many knights of the pencil will remember Arthur Swan; he has made wonderful progress and is at the head of his profession in Boston. Some of his recent works are wonderfully life-like, and as it has been undoubtedly proven that large photographs will fade or small either for that matter, he is likely to have his time fully occupied. Among his latest portraits is one of Charles Francis Adams, formerly minister to England. The Adamses are very dear to the people of Massachusetts and rank here as those representative worthies, Brougham and Cobden do with you. The Quincys, (old English stock,) are another representative family of this State. Mr. Swan has finished portraits of J.P. Quincy and Mrs. R.C. Waterston, (I apologize to your lady readers for placing the gentleman first. I am a thoughtless bachelor.)

These pictures have been much admired and are crayonic triumphs, if I may coin a word. Portraits of Grant and Sumner will most likely be at the Centennial. Grant, the man of few words, but great deeds, looks imperturbable as ever. The modern sphynx, and Sumner, "Sumner of the lionine look" as his friends call him, looks simply grand, with face so noble (as he appeared when making his celebrated Alabama speech) so unlike the common herd; his was indeed a model face, fit subject for an artist.

Swan's studio is in Boston, and Boston as you know is the modern Athens, and here in centennial year, an Englishman is busily engaged in perpetuating the memories of the great ruler of this Nation. What a difference a hundred years makes! Then we were invited to view America from a distance, now she invites us with honest pride to visit Philadelphia, and view the progress of labor and art of a hundred years.

EDITOR OF PATRIOT:—I am pleased to learn that the good people of Braintree are becoming more liberal in their views of Sunday. Many years ago, the late Rev. Dr. Storrs was requested to read a notice of a temperance meeting to be held at Weymouth Landing, Sunday evening, by one of the old Washingtonian speakers. The Rev. Doctor was an advocate of Temperance, but declined to read the notice, and respectfully gave his reasons in a letter to the gentleman who made the request. He said:—"I have a firm conviction that such meetings, to be addressed by Laymen on the Lord's day tend directly to the desecration of the day, and the destruction of the institutions of religion * * * * * and so to employ any portion of the day on which Jesus rose from the dead seems to me bordering on the sacrelegious."

I was glad to hear that his successor in the ministerial office gave notice last Sunday, both forenoon and afternoon, of the lecture in the Town Hall, by Luther Benson, the "Hoosier Orator." I was pleased to learn by a Boston daily, that an audience of over 400 assembled to hear him on that evening.

If I mistake not the old Washingtonian movement did not reach nearer Braintree than Weymouth Landing.

B.

A FEARFUL TRAGEDY. A terrible tragedy occurred in Boston, on Wednesday morning last, the details of which shows the fearful power of rum to inflame the human passions. A man named Joseph F. Hall and a woman supposed to be his wife, lived in a small and scantily furnished apartment at No. 40 Carver street, Boston. They were both intoxicated on Tuesday and were quarrelling. On Wednesday morning, Hall beat his wife with a wash bowl, and a small knife, bruising and cutting her fearfully until life was extinct. After committing the fearful tragedy he cut his own throat, and when the officers entered the room, they found him in a dying condition. The appearance of the room told of a terrible struggle.

NORFOLK AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Norfolk Agricultural Society was held at Hyde Park Wednesday, at the Everett House. There was a large attendance. The meeting was called to order at 10.30 A. M., by Hon. Otis Carey of Foxborough, who presided—the President, Col. Henry S. Russell, being absent. A nominating Committee brought in the following list of officers, who were elected:—President, Henry S. Russell of Milton; Honorary President, Hon. Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester; Vice Presidents, Hon. Otis Carey of Foxborough, Alonzo W. Cheever of Wrentham, John Quincy Adams of Quincy, Henry L. Pierce of Milton, Theodore Lyman of Brookline, Wm. R. Mann of Sharon; Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Henry O. Hildreth of Dedham; Treasurer, Chauncy C. Churchill of Dedham; Executive Committee, E. C. R. Walker of West Roxbury, Abel F. Stevens of Wellesley, Charles F. Curtis of West Roxbury, Augustus P. Calder of West Roxbury, William T. Cook of Foxborough, Henry M. Mack of Dorchester, David W. Tucker of Milton, Atherton F. T. Brown of Brookline; Finance Committee, Eliphalet Stone of Dedham, William J. Stuart of Hyde Park, A. B. Endicott of Dedham; Delegate to State Board of Agriculture, Henry S. Russell of Milton.

The Treasurer made the following report:—Balance in treasury March 27, 1875, $239.56; receipts, borrowed money, $9103.33; from the Commonwealth, $600; grounds of fair of 1875, $1487.89; from new members, $123; sale of hay, grain and straw, $18.75; rent of room, $50; manure sold, $65; rent of house on fair grounds, $40; total, $11,729.93. Expended, paid borrowed money, $7000; interest, $1629.84; premiums, $1216.25; expenses of fair of 1875, $1059.63; insurance, $134; rent of room, $100; Secretary's salary in part, $75; Treasurer's salary in part, $75; all other bills, $60.25; total, $11,702.27; balance in treasury, $25.66.

It was stated that the debt of the Society amounts to about $34,000, $20,000 of which is secured by mortgage, the balance being due on the Society's notes. After a prolonged discussion on the financial condition of the Society, a subscription was started to pay its indebtedness. About $6000 was subscribed on condition that $15,000 was raised, and a committee of one from each town was appointed to take the matter in charge. After adopting resolutions appropriate to the death of Hon. John S. Eldridge, a past member, the meeting adjourned.

MAYOR BARNUM'S CENTENNIAL SHOW. Mr. Barnum has just secured an equestrian from Brazil, who is said to be the most daring, reckless and marvelous rider that ever mounted a bare backed horse. His feats on seven fiery steeds have astounded immense audiences in South America, and now, for a thousand dollars per week, he and his stud of Arabian chargers are to be transferred to the circus department of "Barnum's Great Centennial Academy of Object Teaching." We have also received a slight inkling of immense patriotic demonstrations which Mr. Barnum is to give daily in another department of his great show that will arouse the spirit of '76 to its highest pitch whenever his "Traveling World's Fair" unfolds its banners. We are promised a full programme soon of Mr. Barnum's plans for 1876. That they will be original and brilliant none can doubt, judging from the past. He declares that it far outstrips all his previous efforts, and that he intends to identify himself with this centennial year in a manner that shall be alike worthy of his country, of this grand anniversary, and of himself. He promises a regular old-fashioned Hail Columbia Yankee Doodle Fourth of July celebration every day, and expects to be crowned with the title "Centennial Barnum." Mr. Barnum vacates the mayor's chair in a month, and then devotes his personal attention to his "culminating triumph."—Bridgeport Standard.

☞ The supreme court has decided that the mechanic's lien on a house he has helped to build is not affected by the fact that he works for a contractor instead of directly for the man for whom the house is going up, and, if the contractor fails, he has a claim on the building.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, MAR. 28th, 1876.

Katy did, Katy did, Katy did, is the insectivorous refrain that lulls the rural infant to sleep, and Investigation, Investigation, Investigation, is the alarming sound that disturbs the slumbers of the metropolitan adult. No one has ever been able to learn what this mysterious Katy accomplished, and the strong presumption is, that the labors of the Investigators will leave us in the same wide field of inquiry and conjecture.

So popular has the cry become, that it is no unusual thing to hear when two gentlemen meet in the morning, one of them anxiously enquiring of the other:—"Have you been investigated? or do you expect to be?" Yesterday morning, quite a crowd of little darkies, being assembled on the St. Marck corner, (their favorite resort,) and one of them seeing that another had received ten cents from a gentleman for blacking his boots, five cents being the usual price,—exclaimed; Look a hyar, I seed you do dat, if you does it agin, I gwine to hab yer investigated, I is."

The Committee on expenditures in the War Department, is still investigating Ex-Secretary Belknap. On Friday morning last, Mrs. Caleb P. Marsh, was the first witness called. She came into the Committee room, on the arm of her husband, and was by him introduced to the Chairman. She is thought to be quite a handsome lady, with gray hair, but still young-looking. She has large lustrous, mischievous eyes, and an oval face, with quite a pleasant expression. Her evidence does not seem to affect the case much either way.

It is really singular now that the Ex-Secretary has confessed his want of principle, to say the least of it, what a wonderful amount of villainy he has been guilty of, that his very honest accusers, never thought it at all sinful, as long as they could profit by it. The House Judiciary Committee have examined men who paid, and men who received pay in consideration of Post-traders' ships appointment; but except in the Fort Sill case, no evidence has been elicited implicating Ex-Secretary Belknap with the bargaining and sales. Mr. Clymer, has informed the Committee on the Judiciary, that he has no further evidence that can be used in the impeachment of Belknap.

The Committee on P. O. Post-roads, have been for sometime investigating the affairs of that Department. The chief fault seems to have been the establishment of too many offices. It seems natural that if a number of people do reside rather remote from a large city, they ought not to be compelled to go twenty or thirty miles for their mails.

The Judiciary Committee have under investigation the Crooked Whiskey affair, and on Friday last, examined at some length Att'y General Pierpoints, famous circular letters, to the District Attorneys at St. Louis, Milwaukie and Chicago, all of which have been long since satisfactorily explained to every unprejudiced mind, seems to be the chief object of interest. The Senate Committee on Privilege and Elections, on Friday last, continued the investigation into the matter of Senator Spencer's election,—the case looks cloudy. What would Senators of old have thought of being investigated. The Committee on Foreign Affairs, of the House have under consideration, the Emma Mine scandal. It is thought Schenck will come out all right at last. And it may be asked very pertinently, had the mine proved a success, would the Johnny Bulls have made such a bellowing? These are only a small fraction of the Investigations that are now being had. There is not we believe an honest man in either of the great political parties who does not sincerely desire to see the guilty convicted and punished.

The condition of want, and suffering, to which so many of the ladies, lately employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are now reduced, makes it a matter of imperative obligation, that something be generally done, and that at once, for their relief. It was announced yesterday, in some of the Churches, that on the coming Sabbath, collections will be taken up on their behalf. Mr. John Wannamaker, the President of the Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia, has published a card, advising young men not to come to that city in search of employment. He states that every place seems to be filled.

Mr. Wright, in the Senate last week, called attention to the bill to reduce the salary of the President. It passed the Senate, but seems to hang fire on a motion to reconsider. MAXWELL.

☞ The following may not improperly be called a centennial note:—On the 10th of October, 1775, the father of President Quincy, living on his estate in Quincy, saw from his house the departure of Gen. Howe from Boston in a British vessel of war. As he looked at the vessel he wrote on a window of his room, with a diamond inserted in a ring he was then wearing, the following words: "Oct. 10, 1775, Gen. Howe sails for England, with a fair wind." At a meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society, at the house of Hon. R. C. Winthrop, its president, on the evening of Thursday last, the pane of glass bearing the inscription, and the diamond ring by which it was made, were exhibited by the Rev. Robert C. Waterston, who married the granddaughter of its author.—Gazette.

☞ On the 11th of June in each year the inhabitants of Cyprus throw a beautiful young girl into the sea, in honor of Venus. She is then taken out, crowned and worshipped all the day as a queen or demi-goddess. The festival is named Catadsyme."

Dragging out Existence.

The nervous, weakly invalid does not enjoy life, but merely "drags out existence," as the phrase is. Unfitted for the active pursuits of life, and incapable of partaking of its pleasures, to which health alone can give a zest; disinclined to social intercourse, and a prey to melancholy, the valetudinarian is indeed an object of pity. Yet there is nothing in all this that cannot be remedied by that genial alterative tonic and nervine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which supplies deficient stamina, braces the nervous system, and overcomes those bodily irregularities to which nervous weakness is most frequently attributable. Diseases of the kidney and bladder, imperfect digestion and uterine troubles are fertile sources of debility. Their eradication, however, becomes a matter of certainty when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are systematically used for that purpose. The Bitters likewise annihilate and prevent fever and ague and other debilitating febrile complaints of a malarial nature. 1m ☞ Sentence of death was passed on Monday, by Judge Colt, of the Supreme Judicial Court, on Thomas W. Piper, the convicted murderer of little Mabel H. Young, in the tower of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, on the 23d day of May. The day of execution is to be appointed by the Governor.

Persons who have talked with President Grant lately, say that he is very decided in his opinion that the resumption act should not be repealed, and does not hesitate to say, that if Congress should repeal the act, he would interpose his veto.

☞ Some people in New York, it is said, pay dentists $100 per annum for taking care of their teeth. The income of Dr. Downing is placed at $30,000 a year. Dr. W. Atkinson has a business worth $15,000, and Dr. W. H. Dwinnell $20,000; Dr. Wadsworth, the writer says, was paid $3500 for filling seven teeth last summer. A lady living in Utica paid $800 for a similar service.

☞ The court dress worn by John Hancock at the coronation of George III., was recently exhibited at a centennial coffee party given by the Trinity Church Society of Haverhill. It is owned by Mr. F. Hancock, of Haverhill.

J., and not one have reported a single failure, but every letter speaks of its astonishing success in curing severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Breast, Consumption, or any disease of Throat and Lung. Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

WEST WINDSOR, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly,
L. MCQUOWN.

"State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before | LEON MCQUOWN, me, this 10th day of Dec. 1874. | Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 19, 1873.

"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

LONDON. A writer to the Boston Globe sends the following short and amusing account of this great city.

"This is a droll place in some of its aspects, to an American, where little boys wear plug hats, and the women wear gray and brown stockings on dress parade; where many people put on respirators when going out into the air, though the latter seems mild and balmy enough to a fugitive from the severe New England winter; where boot-blacks, errand boys, porters, and almost every class of public servants wear uniforms; where teams keep to the left instead of to the right; where locomotive engines have no cabs and the cars only four wheels each; where the most common and most useful means of local conveyance (the Hansom cab) is a cross between an invalid chair, and the "one-hoss shay," with the driver roosting on a little perch above and behind the top; where a policeman may be found whenever wanted, and on each corner whether wanted or not; where oysters are about the size of a new cent and of much the same flavor; where street railroads run over the tops of the houses or under the cellars of the same; where—but space fails to account the peculiarities which strike an American in every day's ramble."

☞ A canary bird, belonging to a lady in Providence, died a few days ago at the age of twenty-two years and nine months. It was blind, bald-headed, and a cripple, but it fed itself, and it sang cheerily until within a year.

☞ A Vallejo (Cal.) young woman pursues the dangerous and difficult occupation of a vaquero with skill and success. She throws the lasso with precision, and can turn the stoutest bull over on his back with as much ease as a cook would flop a pancake.

Stand Fast.

The following lines, by Mr. George Randall, formerly of this town, were read at a recent meeting of the Temperance Reform Club in Peabody, of which he is a member:

"Now, Brothers, who've taken this matter in hand,
And shown to the world you have taken your stand,
Keep a stiff upper-lip, keep th' object in sight—
Have faith in the Faither, and dare to do right;
Yes, dare to do right, and dare to be true,
Although not one friend will do it with you.
You know you have friends who are willing to aid,
You know for your welfare are prayers daily made.
You know you can conquer, whatever betide,
For love, justice, and truth are all on your side.
Remember the angels in heaven delight
When only one sinner inclines to the right.
So, no matter how rough the path you have trod,
Stand fast for your manhood, for honor, and God.
And friends, let us keep this Reform ball a-rolling,
Till, for intemperance, we hear the bell tolling;
Don't falter, don't hesitate, keep pressing on,
Till the battle is over, the victory won;
And though no reward here on earth you may see,
In the mansions above shall your recompense be."

Rhubarb.

The Germantown Telegraph says a good word for rhubarb. There is a large class who are fond of this: "It is among the earliest green things; and, though no one classes it among the choicest of horticultural gifts, in the abstract, yet on account of its early growth it will always be esteemed. Its earliness being one of its valuable points, a place should be selected for it where it will get all the advantages of early spring suns. Some people help it by putting barrels over the roots. This keeps out the cold; and, as the rhubarb is stimulated to grow by a very little heat, the natural warmth of the ground brings it up if the frost be kept out. Then the barrels help to blanch it a little, and it is not quite so sour as when left to grow naturally in its own way. Rhubarb is poor stuff when stringy, and it is the aim of good growers to have it as pulpy as possible. Therefore the soil is to be made very rich indeed—as good as manure can make it. When grown in this way, even the outside is tender, and it may be cut up for use without even peeling, as is so often done. Some varieties are, however, more tender than others. There are four popular kinds which, when well grown, are all of about equal value. These are the Victoria, Linnæus, Magnum Bonum, and Prince Albert.

The Linnæus is the best known, not because it is any better than the others named, but simply because some men who happened to have a large stock of it, some years ago, hit on the brilliant idea of pushing it off as the "wine plant," and thus a demand was especially created for this one, thereby cutting out, by this brilliant trick of the trade, other men who had large stocks of the other varieties. Only the "Linnæus" was thus made the true Simon Pure. Rhubarb is very rapidly increased by cutting an old "crown" to pieces. If these are split downward, on a line with the growth of the root, every piece of root will grow though it be split into a score of pieces; but a piece of root will not grow unless there is a portion of the "crown" with it. The crown is the upper portion or leaf-bud, just under ground. If very large stocks be desired, the plants should not be set too close. A root to every four square feet is enough — that is to say, the plants should grow two feet from one another every way. As the rhubarb is a gross feeder, if they be put closer than this they will likely starve one another.

GRAPE VINES. Make use of mild days for pruning those vines which were left during the hurry of the fall work, and apply ashes or ground bones between the rows. Save the wood for cuttings.

☞ After two Arkansas farmers had squandered $1120 on the lawyers in trying to find out who owned an old cart, they commenced shooting, and five cents worth of ammunition brought a satisfactory decision. "It's your cart," were the last words of the plaintiff.

☞ The way they weigh hogs in Kansas, is as follow: They first tie the hog to one end of a rail, balance the rail on a fence with rocks tied to the other end, and then guess how much the rocks weigh.

Anecdotes.

Child—"Does the Lord take the paper?"

Mother—"No, my child; why do you ask?"

Child—"Oh, I thought He didn't, it takes our minister so long to tell Him about things!"

A boy was asked which was the greatest evil, hurting another's feelings or his finger.

"The feelings," he said.

"Right, my dear child," said the gratified priest; "and why is it worse to hurt the feelings?"

"Because you can't tie a rag round them," exclaimed the child.

"Ugh! I'll tell you what it is, Jones, if there were burglars in my house, and I knew it, by jingo, I'd——"

"Well, what would you do?"

"I'd do whatever they required of me. I never had my own way in that house yet, and it's too late to commence now—yes, too late."

"Home is the place for boys," said a stern parent to his son, who was fond of going out at night.

"That's just what I think when you drive me off to school every morning," said the son.

An old Dutchman froze his nose. While thawing the frost out, he said,

"I haf carry dat nose fordy year, unt he nefer freeze hisself before. I no understan dis ting."

Fast Day Proclamation.

In accordance with a custom hallowed by time and associations, I hereby appoint, by and with the consent of the Council, Thursday, the 13th day of April next, to be observed as a day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer to Almighty God for the mercies and blessings which flow from the Divine Providence alone.

And I earnestly invite the people of Massachusetts to preserve that day from unseemly desecration, and to assemble in their chosen places of public worship humbly to implore Our Heavenly Father to forgive our public and private offences, and to give us that holy consecration which shall make our lives strong and virtuous, and abundant in the divine charity which "suffereth long and is kind," which "never faileth," and which shall abide even when "knowledge vanisheth away.

Let us pray that He will bless our country, which He has so graciously preserved through the vicissitudes of a hundred years; that He will give wisdom to its councils, purity to its government, and happiness to its people; that He will bless abundantly our beloved Commonwealth—its institutions, its industries and its homes; that He will foster the interests of education, morality and religion, to the end that virtue may be encouraged and exemplified, vice restrained and iniquity punished; that He will comfort the sick, the desolate and the sorrowful; that He will protect the innocent, succor the tempted, provide for the needy and for "him that hath no helper;" that He will give power on earth to the gospel of His Son Jesus Christ Our Lord; that He will feed those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness;" that he will make us his faithful and loving children, and graciously solace our adversities, dispel our fears, strengthen our faith and ennoble our joys, with the assurance that amid all the mutations of life and of death He "the Lord of Hosts is with us," and that "the God of Jacob is our refuge."

ALEXANDER H. RICE.

Self-Control in Speech.

If a man would get through life honorably and peacefully, he must necessarily learn to practice self-denial in small things as well as great. Men have to bear as well as forbear. The temper has to be held in subjection to the judgment, and the little demons of ill-humor, petulance and sarcasm kept resolutely at a distance. If once they gain an entrance into the mind, they are apt to return and to establish for themselves a permanent occupation there. It is necessary to one's personal happiness to exercise control over our words as well as acts, for there are words that strike even harder than blows. The stinging repartee that rises to the lips, and which, if uttered, might cover an adversary with confusion, how difficult it is sometimes to resist saying it!

Character exhibits itself in self-control of speech as much as in anything else. The wise and forbearant man will restrain his desire to say a smart or severe thing at the expense of another's feelings, while the fool blurts out what he thinks, and will sacrifice his friend rather than his joke. "The mouth of a wise man," said Solomon, "is in his heart; the heart of a fool is in his mouth."

'Cause it's Sunday.

A lady was entertaining the Bishop of the State at her house, as he was an old and valued friend of the family, and he was always their guest on the occasion of his visitations to the parish.

On Sunday morning after his arrival the lady's little son sidled up to him just after breakfast.

"Bishop," said he, "would you like to look at my piggie book?"

"Why, yes," replied the church dignitary, anxious to please the little fellow.

"Well," whispered the child, "I'll show it to you, but you'll have to look at it on the sly, 'cause it's Sunday."

The idea of the "very reverend father in God" aiding and abetting one of his flock in a breach of the Sabbath, was so amusing to the good prelate that, of course, he could not keep the joke to himself.

Be Gentle.

It is better to yield a little than to quarrel a great deal. The habit of standing up, as people call it, for their (little) rights, is one of the most disagreeable and undignified in the world. Life is too short for the perpetual bickerings which attend such a disposition; and unless a very momentous affair indeed, where other people's claims and interests are involved, it is a question if it is not wiser, happier, and more prudent to yield somewhat of precious rights than to squabble to maintain them. True wisdom is first pure, then peaceable and gentle.

Creeping of Rails.

The "creeping" of railroad rails has attracted some attention of late, and while we do not attempt to explain it, we offer a point on the fact that, on lines running north and south, the western rail "creeps" faster than the eastern rail—that is, this strange movement of the rail toward the south is more marked in one rail than in the other on the same track. Furthermore, it has been noticed that on such a line the eastern rail wears out the fastest. Both of these points, we think, can be explained by the motion of the earth as it turns from the west toward the east. Everything that has free motion is dragged after the whirling globe; every wind that blows and every tide that moves, feels the influence, and our train going north or south is pulled over towards the east, and naturally presses the eastern rail most heavily. The western rail, being relieved of its share of weight, "creeps" more freely and quickly. It is also noticed that the wheels that run on the eastern rail wear out the first, and we can but think that this earth motion is the true cause. The practical side of this is that the eastern rail and wheels should be stronger.—Scientific American.

Ayer's
Sarsaparilla

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhœa, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.

For the Patriot.

Emancipation.

TUNE: "'Tis my delight in a shiny night."

Emancipation is the cry,
That sounds along the shore,
From east to west, the tidings fly—
Huzza! Huzza! Huzza!
CHORUS.
Then let our cheering chorus be
For Temp'rance and Reform,
And let us struggle manfully,
In sunshine and in storm. (Repeat.)

Lift up the banner of the free,
Let Reynolds lead the van;
Proclaim a glorious jubilee
For renovated man.
CHORUS.
Then let our cheering chorus be, &c.

To Temp'rance give the honors due,
Let her not plead in vain;
With brave resolve and purpose true,
Her righteous cause sustain.
CHORUS
Then let our cheering chorus be, &c.

Religion, manhood, honesty,
Are on the Temp'rance side,
While crime and sensuality
Are with her foes allied.
CHORUS.
Then let our cheering chorus be, &c.

TO REMOVE MILDEW FROM LINEN. Mix soft soap with starch powdered, half the quantity of salt, and a piece of lemon, and lay it on both sides with a painter's brush. Let it be in the open air—on grass is preferable, till stain is removed.

POOR MAN'S CAKE. One tablespoonful of butter, one egg, one cup of sugar, one of sweet milk or cream, one teaspoonful of soda and two of cream of tartar, mixed dry in two cups of flour.

MUFFINS. Yeast two heaping teaspoonfuls; one quart flour; add a little salt and enough milk to make a good stiff batter; bake on (griddle) in rings.

ECONOMY. A chapter on economy is contained in a letter to the New York Ledger, from a subscriber in East Weymouth, who says that she has three children, is 52 years old, and on less than $500 a year, has since 1869, saved $903.66, and the interest is now quite a help.

HOW TO GROW FAT. It is said that a pint of milk, taken every night just before retiring to rest, will soon make the thinnest figure plump. Here is a simple and pleasant means by which thin, craggy women may acquire plump, rounded figures.

☞ To prevent the skin discoloring after a bruise, take a little dry starch or arrowroot, merely moisten it with cold water, and place it on the injured part. This is best done immediately, so as to prevent the action of the air upon the skin. Invaluable for black eyes.

☞ A deaf and dumb woman, who had been visiting Danbury to solicit aid, was annoyed by some bad boys at the lower end of Main street, and gave them a talking to, that they will remember until their dying day. ☞ "William," said one Quaker to another, "thee knows I never call anybody names; but, William, if the governor of the State should come to me and say, "Joshua, I want thee to find me the biggest liar in the State of New York." I should come to thee and say; "William, the Governor wants to see thee, particularly."

☞ "Why should Washington's birthday be celebrated any more than mine?" asked a bachelor schoolmaster of one of his class. A pause of several seconds duration succeeded the question. When it was again asked, a bright little fellow held up his hand, and said:—"I know; because you have no children, and he was the father of his country."

☞ A clergyman's widow gave this advice to a young lady friend the other day: "Jane, if you ever marry a minister, marry one who in an emergency has enough of the grace of God in his heart to go from the pulpit to the kitchen and pare the potatoes for dinner without growling."

☞ A negro walked into a bar-room where there was a free lunch not long ago, and as he wandered up to the table the proprietor watched him anxiously; after he had deposited a half dozen sandwiches, the man who kept the place said sarcastically:

"Pretty good, eh?"

"Well, yes boss dey am purty good for bolonies, but at dis time of de yeah, I can't 'zactly relish nuffin but chickens."

In support of which theory he ate two more sandwiches.

Miscellany.

A TURQUOIS RING.

Hattie Thorpe, the nursery governess, sat playing at building block-houses with her two little charges, Artie, aged nine, and Louis, aged seven. She was only eighteen herself—a tiny girl for that age, with a sweet baby-face, and evidently so much of a child that it seemed perfectly natural to see her with younger children, and as much interested in their childish games as themselves. A most efficient nursery governess Mrs. Langley found her, as she gave the children their reading and spelling lessons daily, and played with them at addition and subtraction in a way to make the horrors of arithmetic quite fascinating. She slept in their room at night, dressed them in the mornings, and romped with them all day, as well as kept a gentle surveillance over them at the table, where she always sat with the family, except on grand company occasions, when she disappeared with them into a small temporary salon a manger, where they three dined together, enjoying these meals most of any.

As Nelly Langley told her cousin Edward, with a laugh, she was not even called upon to play the part of elder sister except when she was in the humor. It was a perfect comfort to have a girl like Hattie. She took all responsibility about the children off one's mind.

Cousin Edward laughed too, when she said it; but perhaps it occurred to him that a little responsibility about the children now and then would do Nelly good, while a little less might occasionally relieve Miss Thorpe, for Artie and Louis, though cherubs in a general way, were not always angels. But he felt no disposition to argue the point with the handsome, brilliant girl, who always received him with smiles, deferred to his opinions, played her best music for him in her finest style, and showed in her whole manner that she considered her cousin Edward the choicest specimen of manhood in the universe. Mr. Edward Montague was a wealthy young man, and, indeed, the great catch of the set in which Miss Langley was a bright particular star; and that ambitious young lady was a credit to her mamma's bringing up, and left nothing undone to captivate the heir of the family; besides which she greatly admired her cousin, and was as deeply in love with him as any society young lady permits herself to be before marriage or a positive engagement warrants an extravagant amount of feeling.

The cousins smiled at each other as their eyes met, after a minute's survey of the three children playing block-houses. Nelly put out her hand as if inspired to assist at the game; and then, catching sight of her slender forefinger, she uttered an exclamation.

"Oh, my ring!—my lovely ring, Cousin Edward, that you gave me!"

"Have you lost it?" the gentleman inquired, languidly.

"I hope not this time. It has been mislaid so often, and turned up again. But I shall lose it some time, I know. I'm unfortunate about it. You see, on account of the pearls, I take it off every time I wash my hands, and then I forget to put it on again."

"Pooh! It isn't lost, Nelly. Send Miss Thorpe to see if you have left it in your dressing-table."

Miss Thorpe didn't wait to be sent, but ran away at once to look for the missing trinket. It was a lovely ring, and many a time little Hattie had looked on it with almost covetous glances, longing for such a ring to wear on her own pretty finger. She returned from her quest in a few minutes, looking disappointed, and saying she couldn't find it any where.

"You couldn't have half looked," the young lady declared, impatiently, "because I know I left it on the dressing-table. I remember quite well now, and so must you, Hattie. It was just before dinner, and you were there, because you dressed my hair. Go again, Hattie, and look on the window-sill; it's just possible I might have laid it there."

Hattie went, and was gone a long time; but she came back looking more disappointed than before. She had looked on the dressing-table, on the bureau, behind the bureau, on the floor, on the window-sill—everywhere; but not a vestige of the turquois ring could she find.

"How provoking! Was the window open, did you notice?"

"Yes, Miss Helen, the window was open."

"Then it may have fallen out. Come with me, Edward, and we will look;" and the pair went out together, while Hattie and the boys resumed their employment.

Mr. Montague and Miss Langley sauntered round the house, and looked in the grass under her window, but without success; and then they plucked roses, and playfully pelted each other with them, and very soon forgot all about what they came out for, and proceeded to flirt and make love in a non-committal but delightful style, after the most approved fashion made and provided for such cases.

The new moon was glittering like a silver sickle in the sky before they thought of returning to the house; and they were brought back to the contemplation of such an idea by Helen remarking that the dew was falling, and she dare not remain out any longer.

"And I haven't found my ring! They call turquois a lucky stone; I'm sure I've had the wrong kind of luck with that one. Who could have taken it? I know I left it on the dressing-table. Some one has stolen it."

"Oh, nonsense, Nell; and never mind, anyway. I'll get you another, and a prettier one, without pearls on it, and then you won't have to remove it all the time."

Once or twice that evening, and again the next day, Miss Langley spoke of her missing ring; the servants were interrogated; mamma was complained to; Artie and Louis were ordered to divulge its hiding-place, if, in the spirit of practical joking which those young gentlemen often indulged in, they had secreted it; but questions, complaints, threats, were in vain; but the turquois was gone as much as if Jessica had exchanged it for a second monkey.

Something over a week had passed away, and Edward Montague, in order to redeem his promise to his cousin, had run up to town, and was returning in the late evening, carrying in his breast pocket a small velvet case, inside of which reposed a lovely turquois ring, having on it Helen's initial in tiny diamonds. It was such a lovely ring that the salesman at Tiffany's had smiled and given Edward a knowing look, as if to intimate that he knew it was intended as an engagement ring; and Edward, smiling to himself as he walked up the garden path round by the summer-house and toward the side door, half determined to ask his cousin, as he slipped it on her finger, to wear it there in token of a promise to give him not only that finger, but her whole hand and heart. As he passed by the summer-house the sound of smothered weeping from within smote painfully on his ear. Could it be Helen? He rushed in, and nearly stumbled over a little black bundle of something that crouched on the floor, with its head bent over its arms, crying and sobbing in a perfect tempest of tears.

Edward nearly fell, and did, in fact, stumble, so that he caught the crouching bundle of black, and as he steadied himself he also picked it up and set it on its feet. And then, with the moonlight shining on its little flushed, tear-wet face, and its luxuriant brown hair all hanging about its shoulders, it proved to be poor little Hattie Thorpe.

"Miss Thorpe! Why, I'm so sorry! Is any thing the matter? Edward asked, gently, fearing some misfortune to the girl, or that she had lost some relative; for he was not aware that the little governess was fatherless and motherless, and without a blood-relation in the wide world.

Hattie's tears and sobs redoubled; she placed her two hands before her face, and sank down on a seat in an attitude of shame and despair.

Edward was the tenderest-hearted of mortals, and felt infinitely grieved at such a spectacle of grief. He sat down beside her, and drew the little hands away from her face.

"Do tell me what is the trouble," he said, kindly.

"Oh, Mr. Edward," sobbed the poor child, "how can I say it? Miss Helen thinks I have stolen her turquois ring."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Edward, shocked.

"Oh yes, Sir. Thank you, Sir. It is impossible, but she thinks so."

"Helen can't thinks anything so cruel. I'm sure you must be mistaken."

"I'm not mistaken, Sir. She said so, plain, two or three times—that I stole her ring because you gave it to her, Mr. Edward, and that I would like to steal you too."

Edward laughed, but a warm blush stole over his cheek. The silence became a trifle awkward, and to break it he said,

"That's worse nonsense than the other. You wouldn't steal me either, would you?"

"I wouldn't steal anything, Mr. Edward, of course; and besides—"

"I'm not worth stealing," Edward interrupted.

"You are worth anything," cried little Hattie, with unnecessary fervor.

"But still you wouldn't steal me?" said Edward, laughing.

"I couldn't, you know;" and the large innocent eyes were raised appealingly.

"I'm not so sure of that," thought Edward, unconsciously pressing the soft little hands he still held between his own. He bent over her in a gentle protecting way, and whispered.

"You are a dear little thing, and I'm sure you could do nothing in the world but what is good and sweet like yourself." And then, what with the moonlight, which made the girl more childlike than ever, and the wet eyelashes and pretty quivering mouth that trembled like a baby's, and the two faces being so close together, Edward kissed little Hattie, and bade her not cry any more, and he would see her put right in every way.

Hattie wasn't angry. He was just like a nice big brother; but she thrilled and trembled under his kiss, and she dreamed all night of a fair young prince with a beautiful turquois ring, and he could find no finger that fitted it till he tried it on hers—just like Cinderella and the little glass slipper. Edward was as good as his word, and spoke to Helen very seriously about the accusation she had made against Miss Thorpe; but that didn't mend matters, for Helen really believed, that Hattie had stolen the ring, and was indignant with her cousin for asserting the contrary. A lover's quarrel was the result; and Edward kept the new ring in his pocket, and delayed the important question he had intended to put when presenting it.

Miss Langley had a scene with mamma, and insisted that the little chit of a governess, with her make-believe childlike ways, and her deceit and hypocrisy, should be turned out of doors; but mamma chose to take time to think about that—she knew she had a treasure, and she wasn't going to throw it away for the sake of a mere suspicion, possibly unfounded. Besides, she had conscientious scruples about discharging Miss Thorpe without a character, and perhaps ruining her prospects in life.

Mrs. Langley maintained this virtuous resolution for several days; but que voulez-vous? What would you have? Are even the conscientious scruples of a good mother to stand in the way of her daughter's advancement? Mrs. Langley very soon saw that Helen was right, and that Edward was quite too much interested in the little governess; and Hattie received her discharge on the following day, being permitted to finish her week, to allow her the opportunity of finding another roof to shelter her poor homeless head.

But we all know the fate of "vaulting ambition," and even the cleverest mammas do at times o'erleap discretion, and suffer in a similar way; and it happened so on this occasion. If, as Mrs. Langley and Helen declared, Hattie was playing a deep game, these ladies threw her a trump card and played it for her. Edward found the little governess crying again; and this time her despair was complete, for she was thrown on the world with blemished reputation and the suspicion of theft attached to her. The young man overflowed with pity and indignation, and having been gradually falling in love with the childish little creature her present misery brought his feelings to a climax. He took possession of her, bade her consider herself his promised wife, and with many tender assurances and several kisses on the trembling lips, vowed she should never know care or trouble again. Then he put the new turquois ring on her finger, and as the diamond initial was H, little Hattie did not know it had been first intended to signify Helen.

Edward was no hypocrite, but he was angry with his aunt and cousin, and so he went away to town and did not confide to these ladies the news of his engagement; and Hattie had little inducement for confidence on her part.

Mrs. Langley believed Edward to be really attached to Helen, and so he had been, and was still to a certain extent; she made no effort to keep him, therefore, feeling sure that he would soon return of his own accord, and she was quite as well pleased to have him away from the house during Hattie's last days there, for she felt convinced his only danger from that quarter was in constant association. Hattie was a dangerous girl to have in the same house with a young man of Edward's disposition—she was such a sweet, pretty-looking, baby-like thing, and he was so good and kind and generous. As for the little governess, her behavior was perfect, and Mrs. Langley's heart smote her often, and she determined to do her best for Miss Thorpe, who took her dismissal so well, and went about her duties sadly and quietly, with such a sweetness and gentleness toward her young pupils.

"Whatever I can do, Miss Thorpe, you must command me," said Mrs. Langley, on the morning she paid the girl's wages. "If you should need a reference, you know—"

"I would send to you madam, and you would say I was a thief," Hattie interrupted, bitterly.

"I would do nothing of the sort, Miss Thorpe," and a faint blush tinged the lady's pale cheek; "but if you choose to be impertinent—"

"I have no such intention, madam; and for your favor I thank you, but I don't think I shall require it."

The color on Mrs. Langley's cheek deepened to an angry red; she bade her little governess "Good-morning" stiffly enough, feeling justly aggrieved; and so soon as they were alone she remarked to Miss Langley that such were a lady's thanks for trying to be kind to "that sort of person."

Hattie said, "Good-morning, Miss Helen," kissed Artie and Louis, who set up an ear-piercing wail at losing her, and then walked quietly away, leaving her modest little box to be sent after her.

At the New York terminus she was met by Mr. Edward Montague, and the two got into a close carriage, were speedily driven to the house of a clerical friend, and in ten minutes more were pronounced man and wife.

Edward had now been absent from his aunt's for nearly a week, and the good lady was getting anxious for his speedy return. She was consulting with Miss Langley on the expediency of sending him word to come back and finish his visit, when a letter was placed in her hands. The envelope was very elegant, and betrayed the nature of its contents at once. Mother and daughter smiled, and Mrs. Langley said, breaking the seal, "I wonder what two turtle-doves have paired now."

A couple of cards dropped out that solved the question at once, and not to Mrs. Langley's satisfaction, for she became very pale. She silently passed the cards to Miss Langley.

I told you so, mamma—the cunning, deceitful little minx!" and the young lady flung aside the harmless bits of pasteboard as if they had burned her.

"Nelly! Nelly! here's your ring!" and Artie and Louis burst into the room with shouts of triumph. "Where do you think we found it? Why, Grip, the crow, stole it, and we found it in a nest of his, with lots of other things. Ain't you glad to get it?"

Miss Helen dropped the ring at her feet and stamped viciously on it.

"I wish to Heaven I had never seen it!" she said. "Lucky, indeed! But for that miserable turquois ring I would have been his wife now."

Silver Money.

It looks as if we were about to see the shining silver coins again, which have now been out of the public sight for over fourteen years. The children have never seen them at all, though by this time they may have reached nearly twenty-one years. The Treasury has some fourteen millions all ready to issue whenever Congress will give the word, and a resolution directing such issue has already been introduced into the House of Representatives. The weight of opinion among competent judges is, that if silver coin is now paid out for fractional currency it will stay out. Not being wanted for use in foreign countries, where it never was more a drug than now, there is little danger of its becoming an article of export and thus of its leaving the country. It is not only enough below gold in market value to be safe from disturbance, but it is even below the value of the fractional currency itself, the greenback being taken as the standard.

Yet there is not the least danger on that account that the fractional currency will be hoarded because of its higher value. It is a ridiculous suggestion even to make. There is no saying but what the proposed issue of silver, now not very far off, will lead straight to a contraction of greenbacks to that limit at which it will release gold and set that to flowing in as a substantial and steadying part of the currency. Let the people once become familiar again with the use of silver coin, after having handled this paltry scrip for so many years, and they will be pretty apt to put their feet down strongly for a general coin resumption. If such shall be the result of this experiment with silver, it will certainly prove a most welcome one. Even in the populous countries of Asia, which have always absorbed silver as pigs do swill, this coin is now of too little value to excite the former greed; so that, with silver driven out of Germany, the prospect is as favorable an one for the experiment as we could reasonably hope for.

Keeping Clear of Temptation.

One of the colored residents of Detroit, was asked why he did not attend the poultry show. A glad smile crossed his face, as the word "poultry" was spoken, but died away in a moment, as the stern reality confronted him.

"Dere's heaps o' chickens dere, hain't dey?" he asked.

"Yes."

"But dey are all in cages, hain't dey?"

"Yes."

"And you want me to go dere and stand around and gaze on dose chickens which can't come out of dose cages, do you?—No, sah. I knows jus how I'd feel, sah."

No Rest.

Science teaches us that the crust of our earth is perpetually moving, and that the sealevel is constantly changing. Our globe has its daily rotation on its axis and its yearly revolution about the sun. The sun, with all its satellites, sweeps on toward a moving point in the constellation Hercules. Every so-called fixed star is in motion. Fifty thousand years ago the constellation of the Greet Bear or Dipper was a starry cross; a hundred thousand years hence the imaginary Dipper will be upside down, and the stars which form the bowl and handle will have changed places. The misty nebulæ are moving, and besides are whirling around in great spirals, some one way, some another. Every molecule of matter in the whole Universe is swinging to and fro; every particle of ether which fills space is in jelly-like vibration. Light is one kind of motion, heat another, electricity another, magnetism another, sound another. Every human sense is the result of motion; every perception, every thought is but motion of the molecules of the brain translated by that incomprehensible thing we call "mind." The processes of growth, of existence, of decay, whether in worlds or in the minutest organisms, are but motion.

"No Such Boy."

"My son," said a bland old gentleman to a little boy, "would you not like to come to Sunday School to sing, and pray, and hear all about Moses and Aaron, and the whale, and the firey furnace, Joseph's coat of many colors, and put your pennies in the box?" "Be you going to have a Christmas tree?" asked the child. "No," answered the old man; "but we are going to spend the money that would be spent for candles and oranges and candy, in sending tracts to little heathen children in——" "That'll do," answered the rude young boy, as he took a sight at the good man; "I don't train with no such Sunday School as that," and he departed to stone a lost dog.

The Effect of Flattery.

At the lower end of Woodward aveuue yesterday an old apple woman offered her fruit to a vessel captain who was sighing over the good times of 1864. She wanted three cents apiece for her apples. He gave her a pleasant look and said:

"Well, well. Why, you look as young as you did ten years ago. Same bright eyes and cheeks—same white teeth."

"Take an apple for two cents, Captain," she replied.

"I presume you are fifty years old," he continued, "but who'd know it? Lots of ladies at thirty look as old as you do."

"Take an apple for a cent, Captain," she answered, smiling like a rose.

"Some rich old fellow will come along some day, searching for a buxom wife," said the Captain, "and you won't have to peddle apple any more.

"Here Captain, two for a cent, take two of the biggest!" she exclaimed, and then ran after him and dropped two more into his overcoat pocket.—Detroit Free Press.

Changes in the Earth's Surface.

It has been proved that the whole Pacific coast, especially California, with all its mountains, is perpetually rising, and that at a comparatively rapid rate. The land containing in its bosom our great American lakes is slowly sinking; while Southern Indiana, Kentucky and the surrounding States are rising. Geological investigations prove that our great lakes, except Ontario, had formerly a southern outlet; until, by gradual northern depressions and southern upheavals a northern outlet was formed from Lake Erie into Ontario, about 40,000 years ago. This outlet, the Niagara river, is still wearing its channel. The division line of the water-shed, south of the lakes and the Mississippi valley has since that time been steadily travelling southward; and when Chicago recently turned the water of Lake Michigan through the Chicago river, into the Mississippi valley, the old state of affairs was artificially re-established.

New Jersey is sinking, with New York city and Long Island, at the estimated rate of about sixteen inches per century. The coast of Texas is ascending at a comparatively very rapid rate, some observers stating that it is as much as thirty or forty inches in the last half century.

Combining these observations with the results of the recent deep soundings of the United States steamer Tuscarora in the Pacific ocean, we find that the bed is evidently a sunken continent, abounding in volcanic mountains some 12,000 feet high, many of them not reaching the surface of the ocean, and others which do so, forming the numberless islands of the Pacific. The study of choral rocks proves that this sinking has continually been taking place during several centuries, and observations of the coast will undoubtedly reveal the fact that it has not ceased.

The most eminent German geologists and ethnologists now maintain that the locality of man's primitive origin, the seat of the so-called Paradise, was in the Pacific Ocean south of Asia, westward to Africa, and eastward to Australia. When the great Pacific continent slowly sank, so that the ocean commenced filling up the valleys, man retreated to the mountains, which by continued sinking, were transformed into islands, and now form the many groups of Polynesia. The insularity of the thus-preserved races was not productive of civilization, which requires conflict, in which the superiors in the end gain the victory over inferiors. In those islands the interior races were preserved for want of this conflict, hence, their savage condition even at the present day; while primitively the greatest advance took place at the spot of the most intense conflict, the continent of Southern Asia.

Money.

Money is a queer institution. It buys provender, satisfies justice and heals wounded honor. Everything resolves itself into cash, from stock-jobbing to building churches. Childhood craves pennies, youth aspires to dimes, manhood is swayed by the mighty dollar.—The blacksmith swings his sledge, the lawyer pleads for his clients, the judge decides the case of life and death, for a salary. Money makes the man, therefore man must make money if he would be respected by fools—for the eye of the world looks through golden spectacles. It buys Brussels carpets, lace curtains, gilded cornices, rich furniture, and builds marble mansions. It drives us to church in splendid equipages, and pays the rent of the pews. It buys silk and jewelry for my lady, and commands obsequious attention. It enables us to be charitable and to send Bibles to the heathen.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

ENTERTAINMENT. An entertainment, by the amateur talent of the Quincy Reform Club, will be given at the Town Hall this evening. It will consist of sentimental and comic songs, negro minstrelsy, banjo solos and dances. A few hours of pleasure may be expected, as those who have the entertainment in hand intend to leave nothing undone that will make this one of the most enjoyable concerts of the season. Give them a crowded house. Read their advertisement.

FIRE. A dwelling house belonging to Jeremiah Ford, situated on South Walnut street, in this town, was partly destroyed by fire on Sunday last. The building was insured at the Citizen's Mutual Office of Brighton, for $1600, but by the prompt and efficient efforts of the firemen, the damage is not estimated over $600. The cause of the fire is supposed to have been accidental. A good steamer, it is said, on this occasion could not have done any better, if as well, as the hand engines did.

REAL ESTATE. James Edwards, of Quincy, sold to Henry Edwards, of San Fransisco, two acres of Meadow land adjoining land of Wm. Panton and others, for the sum of five thousand dollars.

JURORS. William N. Eaton has been drawn to serve as Grand Juror for one year; Thomas W. Lincoln and Henry T. Horne, as Jurors for the Criminal Session of the April term, of the Supreme Court in Norfolk County.

BE ON HAND. All persons desirous of renting good pews in the Universalist Church should be at the sale on Fast afternoon,—Thursday next. All the parish pews will be rented by auction at that time. As these pews comprise nearly all of the best slips in the Church, it is for the interest of all wishing good seats to be present.

ANNUAL MEETING. The Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company held their annual meeting on Wednesday last, in this town, and elected the following Board of Directors for the ensuing year:—

Israel W. Munroe, Whitcomb Porter, William B. Duggan, Thomas Curtis, Chas. A. Howland and John Hardwick, of Quincy; Alfred Loring, of Hingham; George Marston, of New Bedford; H. W. Blanchard, of Boston; Sumner A. Hayward, of Brockton; Royal W. Turner, of Randolph; Solomon J. Beal, of Cohasset; Charles Breck, of Milton; J. Alba Davis, of West Roxbury; J. F. C. Hyde, of Newton; John Gates, of Worcester.

This Company has been very successful the past year, having paid over $38,000 in losses and $25,000 in dividends to policy holders, and at the same time have gained over $31,000 in cash assets without any increase of liabilities. Their Cash Fund now amounts to $334,594, and no unpaid lossess. Their surplus over re-insurance amounts to over $120,000, and their cash securities are of the most desirable kind.

VACATION ENDED. Having had a short respite of two weeks, the children in this town will assemble on Monday morning at their pleasant schoolrooms, to resume their studies. Having enjoyed this vacation they will feel better able to seek that knowledge which will fit them for the positions that they may be called to fill in the future, when they shall be the men and women of the world.

CORRECTION. In the notice of the Woman's Convention, held in this town last week, we stated that Mrs. Ward said the clergy in Salem were opposed to the temperance work. That was a mistake. They are not, we learn, really opposed to the reform, but do not enter into the work, as if it was their work, as they had in Quincy, and many other places. Mrs. Ward wished to impress upon her hearers, that the most wonderful results were manifested, where the clergy and all good citizens lent their aid to the work, as they have in Quincy. Never was such a glorious change in this good old town for the better, as at the present time; or when the people were so united and willing to aid the cause.

THE GLORIOUS REFORM. The regular meetings of the Quincy Reform Club seem to loose none of their interest.—On Saturday evening last, at their hall on Sea street, there was an unusually large attendance, and the true spirit of reform seemed to blaze as brightly in the bosom of each member as at its first outburst. After the usual business routine, the meeting was addressed by Bros. Barrett, Horn, Sprague, and Sanborn of the Hingham Reform Club, followed by members of the Quincy Club, and an hour was spent in an agreeable and interesting manner. One particularly gratifying incident of the meeting was the reading of the names of some fifteen new signers to the Club—just the men wanted—which was received with three rousing cheers. The work goes bravely on, and instead of the interest dying out as suddenly as it was enkindled, (as was sagely predicted by many old croakers,) every member appears to be actuated by a spirit of true brotherly love to bring their friends and neighbors within the ennobling influences of the Quincy Reform Club.

SAVINGS BANK REPORT. Do not fail to read the favorable and interesting report of the Quincy Savings Bank, as submitted to the Trustees by the Treasurer and by them accepted, at the semi-annual meeting, on Tuesday last. This report speaks for itself, and the officers of the bank are deserving of the highest encomiums for the careful and trusty manner in which they have conducted the affairs of this institution.

Quincy Yacht Club.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht Club, was held last Saturday evening, at the Lyceum Room, in the Town House. The following officers were elected:—

Commodore,—James H. Slade.
Vice Commodore,—H. A. Keith.
Fleet Captain,—H. N. Federhen.
Secretary and Treasurer,—H. A. Keith.
Measurer,—Peter B. Turner.
Regatta Committee,—The Commodore, ex-officio, Edward B. Souther, James T. Penniman, Joshua Binney and George W. Morton.

The principal items of business transacted were as follows:—The annual assessment was fixed at three dollars. The Regatta Committee were instructed to prepare forthwith a programme of races, etc., for the ensuing season. The sailing regulations were amended so as to allow the yachts of the first and second classes to carry any sails except square sails, while those of the third and fourth classes are restricted to their working sails, which, in the case of sloops, includes a gaff topsail. Yachts are also to be allowed to shift ballast to windward.

The Club last season had seventy-seven members, about one-half of whom were yacht owners, while the remainder consisted of those who take an interest in yachting and regattas, and like to encourage them. It has now become a permanent institution of the town. Arrangements are being made for a still more successful series of regattas than those of last year, and it is anticipated that the number of members will be considerably increased.

After all the business was finished, Commodore Slade invited the members to an excellent supper, prepared in D. Fred French's usual good style. After indulging in the rich things upon the tables, short speeches were made by Jas. H. Slade, Chas. H. Porter, John O. Holden, Jos. T. French, Edwin W. Marsh, and others; and an excellent song was sung by G. Swaine Buckley. Then the prizes won at the three champion races last season were distributed, consisting of gold-lined silver goblets to the Nettie, Red Lion, Mabel, Annie, Tulip and Flora; and handsome silver vases to the Jennie, Lightfoot, Lena, India and Secret.

Wednesday Evening Meeting.

The temperance meeting at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, was very large considering the sloshy and snowy weather,—from one to two hundred ladies were present. The assembly was called to order by President Allen of the Quincy Reform Club, and Mr. Edward Southworth was invited to ask divine blessing.

Mr. Samuel Graves of North Weymouth was requested to take charge of the singing. After some temperance songs brought by his brother from East Cambridge, were distributed, several pieces were sung with much enthusiasm lead by Mr. Graves.

The President then made a few remarks thanking the audience for turning out on such a sloppy night,—particularly the ladies. Mr. Graves, a member of the Reform Club in East Cambridge was then called to address the meeting. He told the Quincy boys of the glorious work being done by the Club in that place. The great success they were having,—how many of the hardest drinkers were taking hold of the work in earnest. At the close of his remarks, other songs were sung to the enjoyment of all present.

Brother Williams, also a member of the East Cambridge Reform Club, was next called. He said he knew too well the miseries of the intoxicating cup, for he had indulged freely for twelve years in the vile compounds. Often, as he turned the rum down his throat, and it flew from his head to his feet, it seemed as if a torchlight procession was passing through him. He remembered well the first time he attempted to drink a glass of rum. He had a very bad cold, and they told him rum and molasses would be good for it. The mistress of the house where he boarded, kept a bottle full constantly on hand, and being busy at the time, she told him to go to the closet and help himself. He did so, and having a bad cold, he decided to take a good dose. Turning out a half tumbler full, he down with it, without stopping to taste of it. Oh horrors! he exclaimed, which so frightened the house-keeper, that she came to the closet to see what was the matter; thinking he might have made a mistake. He showed her the bottle, which she said was her washing fluid,—very poisonous; and she dispatched a messenger for the doctor. He was so frightened, he did not wait for the physician, but started after one himself,—being nearly dead with fright, he hastened into an apothecary shop and procured some lemon juice to take the burning effect from his throat. Being informed that the article was not very dangerous, he felt more easy, and his cold got better at once. He would advise all persons, if they have a cold to take washing fluid before they try rum. Mr. Williams was very witty, and received hearty applause.

Mr. Edward Southworth, Charles W. Carter and others, made short and interesting speeches, which were listened to with marked attention, and several persons addicted to drink, came forward and signed the pledge. Thus the glorious work still progresses.

DESTROYED BY FIRE. The hotel, known as the Ocean House, at Nantasket Beach, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday last. The house and contents were valued at $10,000. The property belonged to Jellison & Co., of Hull, and was insured. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

☞ The Quincy Reform Club, to the number of sixty, visited the Quincy Point M. E. Church, by invitation of Rev. S. L. Beiler on Sunday morning last, and listened to an instructive and interesting sermon by the pastor.

ACCIDENT. George W., son of Mr. Jonas Shackley, fell on Friday of last week, from a staging on a shop being built by his father at West Quincy, and broke his right arm near the wrist. Dr. Dam was called who set the bone, and the lad is slowly recovering.

AUCTION. The estate of Mr. Urbane Cudworth, on Brackett Place, will be sold at auction, on Tuesday next. This is a good chance to secure a good house, stable, and an acre of land in the central part of the town.

Sketches of North Quincy,—No. 13

The "Slate Hills," anciently called, forty-two feet in altitude from the sea, which envelope a portion of the irregular shores of Quincy bay, are worthy of a brief notice in these sketches. The Slate quarries, as they now are termed, were appreciated by the earliest settlers of North Quincy. Mention is made of them in the first volume of Suffolk Registry of Deeds. In the early conveyances, a proviso was named or permission given to any inhabitant of Braintree, to get out and carry away slate, without any compensation to the owners. By long disuse this right became obsolete.

According to Professor Hitchcock, in his elaborate work on the Geology of Massachusetts, published under the auspices of our State authority, he regards the material of these quarries as Hornblende slate of great depth, and dipping or stretching northerly under Squantum, and a portion of Boston harbor, to the subterranean regions of Charlestown, now Boston. The apparent vegetable impressions of leaves on portions of the slate, indicate the presence of coal beneath the range of the slate basis, but so deep that the coal mine could never be successfully utilized. The time honored use of the hornblende slate for flagging stones, the covering of sewers and drains and foundation material in the construction of buildings is well known, and for more than one hundred years, has been one branch of enterprise here. Coming down ancestrally from the elder Edmund Quincy and the Hon. John Glover of the seventeenth century to their descendants and residents here of the present day. The slate layers from these quarries have found their way as monuments to the departed in no small portions of the cemeteries in our vicinity and other sections of south-eastern Massachusetts. Studded over the silent depositories of the dead, the tablet inscriptions speak to us, not only of their age, and date of demise from this mundane sphere, but in language also of solemn admonition, in prose or poetic strain, that while our friends who repose beneath, have passed the portals of mortality; we, sojourners and pilgrims on earth, are also journeying to that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns."

The summing up of Doctor Hitchcock's examination of the geological features of Quincy is, that besides hornblende slate, the Northern parts of the town bordering on the water, is graywacke; middle territorial portions of Quincy, including the centre district or village, mostly argillaceous slate. The western portion, large in territory, Sienite, (commonly called granite,) and Porphyrry. Argillaceous slate formations would indicate the presence largely of sand and clay, of which subtrata no doubt Quincy village abounds in abundance.

Bereavement.

It is with sorrow we announce the death of Mr. George W. Ripley, a well-known citizen of the west part of the town, who died on Saturday evening last, after an illness of over three months, suffering much pain, which he withstood without a murmur.

Mr. Ripley enlisted when he was eighteen years old, in the 92d New York Regiment, Company G., September 17th, 1862, for three years, and served with credit in thirty-three battles and skirmishes. At the battle of Chapin's Farm, Va., Sept. 29th, 1864, he was seriously wounded in the hip. Falling within the enemy's lines he laid from 5 P. M., to 10 A. M., without any help whatever, and then was taken to a rebel hospital. His wound has since that time troubled him very often.

He was mustered out in July, 1865, and arrived home soon after, and has since resided in the west part of the town, where he had many warm friends, who now sympathize with his wife, parents and relatives in their sad bereavement.

His funeral took place from his residence on the corner of Cemetery and Willard streets on Tuesday afternoon last, which was, notwithstanding the storm, well attended. The Grand Army of the Republic, of which the deceased was a member, escorted the remains to the Methodist Church, accompanied by the Belknap Brass Band, where services were held by the Rev. Samuel Kelley, which were very impressive.

After the services the remains were taken to the cemetery on Cemetery street where they were interred by his brother comrades of the G. A. R., with appropriate honors.

The deceased was also an honorary member of the Belknap Brass Band.

Accepted.

There is a strange fascination in the idea of being a town official. It puts a man on the best of terms with himself, to feel that his abilities are appreciated and his integrity confided in, by his fellow citizens. Grateful for the trust reposed in me, I accept the office of Field-driver, with all its responsibilities, and shall endeavor to discharge the duties with fidelity to both bipeds and quadrupeds. May no greed of gain, tempt me to an inglorious collusion with the pound-keeper. Never! no, never!! I therefore reverse my previous determination not to accept public office, but can under no circumstances be considered a candidate for "a third term."

A. W. SPRAGUE.

REDUCED. The public debt has been reduced the past month $4,240,866.92.

MONTHLY MEETING. The regular monthly meeting of the Hook and Ladder Company was held at their house on Canal street, on Monday last. After the business of the meeting had been attended to, an excellent collation, got up in their usual good taste, was partaken of. For our share of the good things we return thanks.

WOLLASTON. The first Sabbath School Concert of the new Congregational Society, will take place in the Church to-morrow evening. The school is well attended and numbers about one hundred members. The success of this society so far, has fully equalled the most sanguine expectations of its friends.

CLOTHING AT THE OLD PRICES. From the card of Mr. Wilmot in another column it will be seen that clothing can now be purchased as low as before the war. No one need go without a good outfit when $3.00 will buy a pair of all wool pantaloons, or $10.00 a good business suit. Call at 263 Washington St., when you next visit Boston, and examine his stock.

Braintree.

The town hall was filled by an enthusiastic audience, last Saturday evening. The occasion being a grand temperance mass meeting. The meeting opened with singing by the audience, and prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Hammond. President Samuel Gooch then introduced Rev. Mr. Johnson, who made some interesting remarks; in the course of which he said: If any man should hang his head with shame, that man is the manufacturer of drunkards,—the retail liquor seller,—he should hang his head with shame, when he sees the corruption he has been making among the young men, by his illegitimate traffic. The men who carry on this infernal business are, day after day, transforming men into a state and condition worse than idiocy. We must go to work and help these young men out of this great evil of intemperance, and if we don't find a reward in this world, we surely will in heaven.

The Children's Band of Hope then sung, "Dare to do right," and for an encore, gave a good temperance song to the tune "Johnny comes marching home." Mr. Conant of Randolph, one of the old war horses of the temperance cause,—commented on the action of the Editor of the Randolph paper, in denouncing the use of prayer in commencing a temperance meeting. He wanted to know if the rumsellers prayed for the blessing of God to rest upon them when engaged in their death-dealing business. His father used to give him rum and molasses, when he was a boy; and he had seen the time when he would have given $1000, to have something to take away this appetite from him, as soon as he would have given one cent for a meal of victuals. 174 out of 194 inmates of the Connecticut Penitentiary had sent a petition to the Legislature to close all the rum shops so that when they came out, they would not again be led into temptation. His remarks were followed by singing.

Mr. Sproule of the Braintree Reform Club, made some very interesting remarks. He thought if they could get all the fathers, mothers, and children interested in the cause, it would be a very easy matter to obtain those who were neither one or the other.

Joseph Edwin Holbrook, said he was here to give his encouragement and sympathy to the cause. He would place the one who sneers at this good work, below the meanest drunkard. It was not the drunkard who sneers, but the person whose business was being ruined by the magnetic influence of the hour.

Mr. Linden, believed the Club would stand as long as they were banded together. Every member was helping his brother, and they were bound to be successful. He told about a man who drank forty-six rum punches in one day, and then called himself a moderate drinker, because he did not get drunk; but the man who drank one glass of liquor and fell into the gutter going home, was called a drunkard. A man once advertised for a coachman, and had two applicants for the situation. He asked one how near he could drive to a precipice without an accident, and received the following reply, "Within a hair's breadth." And you, he said, addressing the other. "I keep as far from danger as possible," said he. You're the man for me, said the gentleman; and he immediately engaged him. This is the way with the moderate drinker. He goes as near the precipice as he can; frequently suffers, and often terminates in a drunkard's grave; while the abstainer keeps as far from danger as possible, and is always safe.

Mr. Hall never made a speech before, but was willing to do anything for the cause. The Reform Club of Gloucester, had closed the worst saloon in the place. Why could not the Braintree Reform Club close the two nuisances in this town? After singing, the subscription list was opened and quite a sum realized. Mr. Mellen thought if the Reform Club kept on, the rumsellers would be like the beautiful blossom, "the last rose of summer," left blooming alone.

Mr. Blake, "the George Randall of Braintree," told about the dream he had the other night. He went to Heaven and saw the rumsellers around the throne of God, but away outside he saw the Braintree Reform Club out in the cold. He went back to God and asked him the reason why the rumsellers were enjoying the warmth and comforts, while the Reform Club was out in the cold. The Lord answered and said, "They are the only ones I can trust out of my sight." He thanked God that Quincy had Henry H. Faxon to help them, and hoped that Braintree would soon have men of the same sort. He kept the audience in good humor, and his remarks were well received. The meeting closed at 9.30.

There will be a meeting this evening, good speakers will be in attendance.

The Club has rented Monatiquot Hall and organized with the following list of officers:—

President, Samuel H. Gooch.
Vice Presidents, Wm. Bishop, Royal Belcher and John Boyle.
Recording Secretary, Edwin S. Dean.
Financial Secretary, Peter P. Gomez.
Treasurer, M. F. Call.
Steward, Munroe Belcher.
Marshals, E. F. Porter and F. F. Tupper.
Sergeant at Arms, H. B. Hayden.

At the town meeting held on Monday, additional appropriations were made for schools and for the public library. The sum of $300—was appropriated for the observance of July 4th, the citizens proposing to raise enough in addition to celebrate the day in a becoming Centennial manner. A committee of arrangements was chosen to take charge of the same. A committee was chosen to wait upon the lessees of Little Pond; they proposing to dispose of their interest in the fish business in favor of the town. So we expect the day will come when black bass will be as plenty with the good people of Braintree, as herring have been in the past.

The Butcher Boys are to have a parade on Fast Day, Thursday next.

For the Patriot.

Centennial Note.

In the Patriot of April the first, I noticed an article which has also been published in many Boston papers, to this effect; that, at a late meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society, a pane of glass was exhibited on which was inscribed, the following, "Oct. 10, 1775, Gen. Howe sails for England, with a fair wind." It was stated at the meeting, that this was written by the father of President Quincy, while viewing Howe's departure from Boston. There certainly is some patent incorrectness about these facts, for in the first place, the father of President Quincy, being well known in Revolutionary history, as Josiah Quincy, Jr., died on the 26th of April 1775, being thirty-one years of age, and just one week after the battle of Lexington. He died on board a vessel, in which he had sailed from England, on the previous sixteenth of March. The ship was within sight of the American shore when he expired. He was a zealous patriot, and universally mourned.

In the second place, if he had been alive, and at the mansion house, he could not have written on the "10th Oct., 1775, Gen. Howe sailed," for we all know that Gen. Howe did not leave Boston, until the seventeenth of March, 1776, Evacuation Day. Bancroft, speaking in his history of the day, says:—

Its army, about eight thousand in number, and more than eleven hundred refugees, began their embarkation at four in the morning. In less than six hours, they were all put on board one hundred and twenty transports: Howe, himself, among the last to leave the town, took passage with the admiral in the Chatam.

In the third place, Howe did not sail for England. His fleet remained in Nantasket Roads, until the 27th, when he set sail for Halifax, with the exception of four armed ships, under the command of a Commodore Banks, which were not driven away until June 14th, of the same year.

In another article published in the Patriot of March 25th, and extracted from the Boston Journal, I notice an inaccuracy in speaking of the "Greenleaf House," the one now occupied by Peter Butler. The writer says, in this House, Samuel Adams and John Hancock had many of their secret meetings. This cannot be, for the house was the original Quincy mansion, and was sold by Edmund Quincy, in 1768, seven years before the revolution commenced, and was purchased by a Mr. Allyne, a loyalist, who left, after the Revolution, and it was sold at auction, to Mr. Black, from whom the Greenleafs obtained it. So it seems very improbable that Adams and Hancock should have held their secret meetings, in the house of Mr. Allyne, a loyalist.

VERITAS.

That Pane of Glass.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

There are several errors in the centennial note, quoted in your paper of the 1st. of April, from "the Gazette."

It was Col. Josiah Quincy of Braintree, the grandfather of President Quincy, who wrote on a pane of glass, in an upper window of his house, which commands a view of Boston harbor, "Oct. 10th, 1775." Gov. Gage, sailed for England, with a fair wind."

The pane of glass, and the ring, are in the possession of Mr. Quincy's family in 1876.

Q.

CONTRACTORS TAKE NOTICE. Read the advertisements in to-day's paper, for proposals for granite edgestones and pavers, to be furnished the city of Boston.

ANNIVERSARY. A large party, composed of the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hosea B. Ellis, assembled at their residence, on the afternoon and evening of March 29th, to congratulate and assist in celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of their wedded life. It was a very pleasant and enjoyable occasion, and may many years of prosperity and happiness be theirs is the wish of their numerous friends.

AMENDED. In the House on Tuesday last, Mr. Thayer of Franklin, moved to amend the Senatorial bill, so that the two Norfolk districts should be composed as follows:—First district, the towns of Canton, Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Stoughton and Weymouth; second district, the towns of Brookline, Dedham, Dover, Hyde Park, Medford, Needham, Norwood, Walpole, Bellingham, Foxboro', Franklin, Medway, Norfolk, Sharon and Wrentham. The amendment was adopted.

WINTER LINGERETH. The storm which visited us this week, commenced on Monday afternoon with a gentle shower and turned into a driving snow storm; on Tuesday a regular north-east snow storm set in, which proved to be one of the toughest and most disagreeable of the season. Quite a body of snow fell and the drifts in some localities on the turnpike were from four to six feet deep. The wind howled fearfully through the trees, and around the houses, displacing bricks from chimneys, and levelling fences, but it did not do any serious damage in this locality that we have heard of. The fall of water has been immense, and many cellars have been overflowed. April has shed a large amount of tears thus far.

AFFLICTED. Mr. Thomas A. Kellogg, who for several years has been foreman of Tirrell & Sons' harness and carriage trimming department, in this town, has been quite seriously sick, for many weeks, having had a severe shock of paralysis which left him in a very helpless condition. On Wednesday last he had another ill turn and is now in a critical condition. His many friends in this town, sympathize with his family in this their sad affliction.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT. A horse belonging to George Crane, which was standing near his store on Thursday last became frightened and turned around and ran into Mr. George J. Jones' yard, jumping an embankment of some six feet, wagon and all. He afterwards turned and ran into the street leaving his goods scattered, "down the yard." Fortunately the animal escaped without doing much damage to himself or wagon.

Dragging out Existence.

The nervous, weakly invalid does not enjoy life, but merely "drags out existence," as the phrase is. Unfitted for the active pursuits of life, and incapable of partaking of its pleasures, to which health alone can give a zest; disinclined to social intercourse, and a prey to melancholy, the valetudinarian is indeed an object of pity. Yet there is nothing in all this that cannot be remedied by that genial alterative tonic and nervine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which supplies deficient stamina, braces the nervous system, and overcomes those bodily irregularities to which nervous weakness is most frequently attributable. Diseases of the kidney and bladder, imperfect digestion and uterine troubles are fertile sources of debility. Their eradication, however, becomes a matter of certainty when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are systematically used for that purpose. The Bitters likewise annihilate and prevent fever and ague and other debilitating febrile complaints of a malarial nature. 1m

Resolutions

On the death of Geo. W. Ripley.

WHEREAS,—The Divine Father has permitted the great foe and scourge of our race to enter the home of our friend and benefactor, and cast a gloom and sadness over a happy household:—Be it hereby

Resolved,—That we the members of the Belknap Brass Band of Quincy, tender our sympathies, our respect, and our esteem to the afflicted family which has lost the one so dear and highly honored,—always ready to lend us a helping hand, and when tried in the balance was never found wanting,—his memory will ever be cherished by us together with the fondest recollections. He was one of the brave defenders of our country, battling for the right, and looking forward to the time when all men should be proclaimed equals, and injustice to be erased from the face of the earth. It was in the defence of his country that he received the wound which eventually caused his death. His sufferings were intense during the latter part of his illness, but now he has gone to that haven of rest where pain and sorrow are never known. We also sympathize with the G. A. R., which has lost a true and faithful member, ever up and doing for the welfare of those around him. To his relatives and friends we tender our consolation. He is not dead but sleepeth. 'Tis true we never more shall see him, but now he is at rest and our loss is his gain. Mourn not for him but believe he is only parted from us till the Heavenly Father calls us home to that mansion above, where we can rejoin him and have eternal rest.

"The lightning may flash,
And the loud thunders rattle,
He heeds not—he hears not—
He's free from all pain;
He sleeps his last sleep,
He has fought his last battle—
No sound shall awake him
To glory again."

Per order.

G. W PENNIMAN, Committee.

☞ The recent fire in Dock Square, Boston, came very near destroying that old land mark and ancient structure, The Old Corner at 25 Dock Square. Richards had a full stock on hand and a large quantity of Men's and Boys' Clothing was slightly damaged which he is now selling at less than half the cost. There is now a great rush for these bargains and trade is lively at the Old Corner. Come quick and get a suit at your own price.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

WEST WINDSOR, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly,

L. MCQUOWN.

"State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before } LEON. MCQUOWN.
me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. } Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rhematism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

WHITE WRAPPER for Family use. YELLOW WRAPPER for Animals.

Price, 50 cents; Large Bottles, $1.00.

Poetry.

Don't Leave the Farm.

Come boys, I have something to tell you,
Come near, I would whisper it low—
You are thinking of leaving the homestead,
Don't be in a hurry to go.
The city has many attractions!
But think of the vices and sins,
When once in the vortex of fashion,
How soon the course downward begins.

You talk of the mines of Australia,
They're wealthy in gold, without doubt,
But ah! there is gold on the farm, boys,
If you will but shovel it out.
The mercantile life is a hazard,
The goods are first high and then low,
Better risk the old farm a while longer,
Don't be in a hurry to go.

The great stirring world has inducements,
There is many a gay, busy mart,
But wealth is not made in a day, boys,
Don't be in a hurry to start!
The bankers and brokers are wealthy,
They take in their thousands or so;
Ah, think of the frauds and deceptions,—
Don't be in a hurry to go.

The farm is the safest and surest,
The orchards are budding to day;
You're free as the air of the mountains,
And monarch of all you survey;
Better stay on the farm a while longer,
Though profits should come rather slow;
Remember you've nothing to risk, boys,
Don't be in a hurry to go!

Agricultural, &c.

Early Ground.

We lately saw in an exchange some very valuable suggestions to farmers and gardeners, about the great advantages to be derived from having a piece of early land for a garden spot. The idea is certainly a very good one, but as we did not find in the article any practical directions for carrying it out we will endeavor to invent some. If your garden plot is cold and wet in April, or even in May, as very likely it may be, we should advise that it be taken into the kitchen and warmed thoroughly to fix it for planting, so that you may gain two or three weeks on your neighbors. If this is not found practicable you had better locate your garden spot on a side hill with a warm southern exposure, so that it may be drained and warmed without costing you a cent. This plan has its disadvantages, in a level country, or where you don't own any of the hills, but there are drawbacks in almost any plan. Perhaps a pretty sure way to proceed, would be to blanket the garden with a couple of feet of oat straw, so that it cannot freeze, and have a faucet in the north-east corner to draw off the water; but the ingenious and persevering cultivator of the soil will probably be able to devise some plan if all these fail. If not he will find plenty of hints nearly as valuable, and quite as practical as the above, in some of the current periodicals of the day.—Golden Rule.

Good Garden Walks.

Dig out the soil the width of the walk, and to a depth of about two and a half feet. At this depth begin by laying a foundation layer of large stones, fitted closely together. A second layer, smaller in size, should follow the first, and so on, having each succeeding layer of stones smaller in size than the preceding one, until the space is filled nearly level with the surrounding surface. A top coating of coarse cinders, and these covered with a few inches in depth of gravel and fine sand, will complete the job, and will give a substantial walk, that will always be dry under-foot. It will improve the walk and the appearance at the same time, if the clinkers and the sand on the top are rolled down firmly; and in the course of a week or two, when the material settles, it may be found necessary to add some more gravel and sand, to even the surface.—Scribner's.

THE IDEAL MILCH COW. The characteristics of a good milch cow must be irrespective of breeds, in a general sense. Milk is created from the blood and her vital energies which make blood—that is the indispensible condition. The good milch cow must have a well-developed chest, a healthy digestive apparatus, the mammillary glands must be perfect, and the udder must be soft and pliable, elastic as a piece of India rubber to the touch, whether the bag is full or empty.

☞ Your horse's shoes will hold on longer if the clinches are not weakened by the file in finishing. Insist that the file does not touch the end of the nail where turned over.

Anedotes.

"Well, Mr. Miller," said a Yankee, proudly, to a traveling Scot, as they stood by the falls of Niagara, "Is it not wonderful? In your country you never saw anything like that."

"Like that!" said the Scot, "there's a far mair wonderfu' concern no twa miles fra whar I was born."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Jonathan, with an air of supercillious skepticism, "and pray what kind of concern may it be?"

"Weel, man," replied Sawney, "it's a peacock with a wooden leg."

"Have you much fish in your basket? asked a gentleman of Mr. Thompson, the other forenoon."

"Yes," replied the slippery Charles, "I've got a good eel."

Two Irishmen were recently looking at people stretching a rope across the street from one house-top to another for the purpose of suspending a banner.

Pat—"Sure and what will they be afther a-doin' at the tops of thim houses there?"

Mick—"Fath, an' it's a submarine telegraph they're afther putting up, I suppose."

"Give me some of that huckleberry pie over there," said a customer at one of the uptown restaurants the other day.

"That's not huckleberry pie; it's custard," replied the waiter, swinging his hand over the pie and disturbing about forty thousand flies.

That customer finished his meal with a smoke.

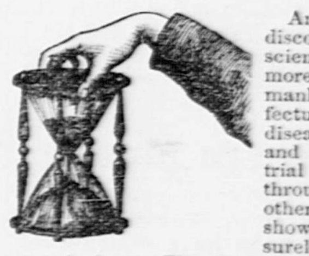
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.



Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

At the Piano.

Respectfully inscribed to Miss A. M. L.

A song frozen on sweet lips;—
  A vision of strange fair lands;—
A haunting odor of violets,—
  A flashing of pure white hands.

A pæ'an weird and mystic,
  Drifting through midnight hours,—
A tender thought of loved ones;—
  A whispering at dawn,—of flowers.

A vague and bitter longing,
  For a day that may not come;—
A sense of sad isolation;—
  A grief all hidden and dumb.

I stood enthralled by the music;—
  My thronging fancies were these;—
As I watched the fairy fingers,
  Kissing the trembling keys.

March 23, 1876. DR. C. A. McFOSSIL.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

DELICIOUS LEMON PIE. Grate the rind and pulp of one lemon into one cup of maple molasses, add a half teaspoonful of flour, butter the size of a shellbark, dropped in little pieces over the mixture; make a good puff paste for top and bottom. Bake in a quick oven.

GINGER COOKIES. One cup of sugar, one cup of molasses, one cup of lard, two-thirds cup of boiling water, one egg, one teaspoonful cream tartar, one tablespoonful ginger, one tablespoonful soda, and one teaspoonful of salt.

SMOKY LAMPS. To prevent the smoking of a lamp, soak the wick in strong vinegar, and dry it well before you use it. It will then burn bright and clear.

☞ He who can suppress a moment's anger may prevent days of sorrow.

☞ From the Essex Calender and old Almanac printed in Salem, in 1776, we copy the following:—"Some who within their door commend a simple way of living; and are for the cheapest eatables, leave their philosophy in the cupboard when they go abroad."

☞ A cheerful face is nearly as good for an invalid as healthy weather. To make a sick man think he's dying, all that is necessary is to look half dead yourself. Hope and despair are as catching as cutaneous complaints. Always look sunshiny, therefore, whether you feel so or not.

☞ A poet was recently arrested for being drunk while peddling a book of his poems. It is thought he must have succeeded in selling a volume to somebody.

☞ Hannah Cabbage wants a divorce from John F. Cabbage. They live in Osage county. She don't seem to like garden truck as well as she thought she would.

☞ A little boy, whose conduct made his mother say she feared he did not pray, replied: "Yes, I do; I pray every night that God will make you and pa like my ways better."

☞ The wave on which many a poor fellow has been carried away is the wave of a lace-edged cambric handkerchief.

☞ A Hoboken editor, being challenged, sent word in reply:—"When I want to die I can shoot myself."

☞ Buggins says that, as yet, his adored one is but little more than a cipher—that is, she is hardly won.

☞ Why is the root of the tongue like a dejected man? Because it is always "down in the mouth."

☞ "A splendid ear, but a very poor voice," as the organ-grinder said to the donkey.

☞ Most persons will find difficulties and hardships enough without seeking them; let them not repine, but take them as a part of that educational discipline necessary to fit the mind to arrive at its highest good.

☞ Happiness consists in having plenty to do, and to keep on doing it. A lazy man is always tired. Doing nothing is one of the hardest jobs on earth.

☞ The man who will abandon a friend for an error, knows but little of human character, and shows that his heart is as cold as his judgment is weak.

☞ Charley had been told by his mother that he was made of dust, and one windy day, when he was looking out of the window, he saw a great flurry of dust in the wind, and cried out, "Mother, come and see! God's making another little boy."

☞ They were husband and wife, and as they stood before the soldier's monument she asked: "What's that figger on top?" "That's a goddess," he answered. "And what's a goddess?" "A woman who holds her tongue." She looked sideways at him, and began planning to make a peach pie with the pits in it for the benefit of his sore tooth.

☞ The chief reason why a Dayton woman wouldn't buy a Bible was because the agent hadn't one containing any comic pictures.

☞ "Brethrin," said a good Baptist in Indiana, while giving his experience, "I've ben a tryin' this nigh onto forty years to serve the Lord and get rich, both at once, and I tell yer all, I find it's mighty hard sledding."

Miscellany.

A SHARP TRICK.

"You'd better take twenty yards or so, ma'am. You'll never get such a chance again, I assure you. There's nothing so cheap and good offered at the stores."

"I'm afeered they're too cheap to be worth anything."

The scene was the spacious porch of an old-fashioned farm-house, where a travelling dealer was displaying to the dame of the household his assortment of cloths, cassimeres, etc., in that line.

"You don't mean to insinuate that I deal in shoddy, do you?" inquired the man in an injured tone. "Why, bless you, look at the goods!"

The woman examined them critically; the quality seemed excellent, and yet she was suspicious. She had heard of worthless goods being palmed off as excellent by such dealers, and she had no desire to be taken in.

And yet as she the more thoroughly examined the merchandize, she was tempted to purchase. Every piece was offered at a low figure—far below that demanded at the country stores—the household was really in need of such supplies, and she had the cash to pay for them."

"How nice," reflected Mrs. Miller, "to purchase all I want, and have a clever little sum left over besides."

"You'll take twelve yards of this?" said the dealer, as if he decided she had made up her mind to do so.

"Yes," she answered, no longer hesitating.

"And twelve of this?" added the man, indicating a roll of cassimere. "It will make your husband and boys splendid suits. I'm selling these goods at an awful sacrifice, ma'am, but you see it can't be helped. Bankrupt stock forced on the market, and it's got to go."

"Yes," assented the farmer's wife.

Another dozen yards of different material was also disposed of, the dealer received his money, gathered up his remaining stock, and then drove off.

But hardly was he out of sight before Mrs. Miller began, in spite of the most assuring examination of her purchases, to feel herself victimized.

"These goods can't be what he represented them," she reflected. "Why, the price is just about half what it should be. I don't believe the stuff will stand wear, though I declare it looks and feels well enough."

At noon her husband came in to dinner. In a state of considerable excitement, fearing that he would chide her severely for purchasing goods which must surely prove shoddy, Mrs. Miller revealed the fact of her bargaining with the dealer.

Farmer Miller was indignant at the very beginning at what he styled his wife's want of sense.

"You oughtn't to have touched 'em, Sophrony; you might have knowed you would be cheated. Them travelling fellows is all rascals—how often have I told you that? the money's just throwed away!"

"But look at the goods, John. They seem to be all right!"

"Oh, yes, they seem to be, of course; but make 'em up, and you'll have to put patches on after the first day's wear."

"It can't be that the fellow tricked me so," declared the wife, resolutely, warming into a defence of her action. Look at this piece, John."

John did look, but was not convinced that his doubts were groundless.

"Shoddy's queer stuff, Sophrony. It'll look all right, in spite of the closest searchin', till you've been put to the expense of makin' it up; then it will go to dust, like old rotten rag carpet. I'm sorry you was so green, Sophrony."

And John ate his dinner and went back to his work.

In the afternoon a second light vehicle drove up to the farm-house—drove furiously up, as if important business was meant.

A man leaped from the carriage, hitched his horse, and advanced quickly to the door.

"Was there a person here to-day selling goods at half price?" he demanded.

"There was a man here selling goods very cheap," returned Mrs. Miller, with an uneasy feeling.

"Humph, yes! Well, they were stolen; you might have known that."

"Stolen!" ejaculated the farmer's wife.

"Stolen of course. How many did you buy?"

"Fifty dollars worth," replied Mrs. Miller, truthfully.

"I'm sorry for you, my good woman; you will lose your money; the goods must all be given up."

"Given up!" she echoed, in a tone that implied resistance to such a demand.

"Don't attempt to make a fuss. The receiver is as bad as the thief," said the man, blandly, but threateningly. "Produce the goods, and there'll be no further trouble to you."

Mrs. Miller in her ignorance was dismayed. She had heard of persons being arrested for receiving stolen goods, and imagined she had exposed herself to that danger.

She gave up her purchases without further demur, though with immeasurable secret regret at her loss. But she had this poor satisfaction—the goods were not shoddy; she had not been deceived in her judgment of them. The man took them and departed. In a little while it was known that precisely the same game that had been played upon her had been played upon not less than a dozen other residents of the neighborhood.

The two men were in collusion—fellow-rascals. The first sold really valuable goods at half price, and received the money; the second followed and gathered up the stock under the pretext that it had been stolen.

And thus they did a paying business on a small capital.

AN ADDRESS
BY REV. JOHN D. WELLS,
TO THE QUINCY REFORM CLUB,
At First Church, March 19, 1876.

Among the many texts which might be used as pertinent to this occasion, and fitly suggesting and accompanying the simple thoughts I have to offer, is this in Galatians, V: 1, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Stand fast, * * * * and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

Near the beginning of our civil war, some fifteen years ago,—a period dim and shadowy in the distance of the past to the younger among you, but to many of us, almost as fresh as yesterday, it happened that after the first humiliation and defeat, and running away of the Union Army, a new General took command of the re-organized and freshly recruited troops,—and reviewing them one day, he spoke to them in these plain and stirring words: "We'll have no more retreats. We'll have no more defeats. You stand by me and I'll stand by you; and victory shall be ours." The words, set naturally into rhythm, soon sang themselves throughout the army, and throughout the loyal land. They were taken up into every mouth, and helped to fire every flattering heart. The hope of them and the promise of them, helped to fill us all with a new confidence, and a new courage. Men set their teeth in stern determination, women strove to provide themselves with such store of patience, as might last them through all pain and loss, to the long-for end. The end did not come in the day when it was expected, nor for many, many days of weariness thereafter; but from that new beginning, started by such utterances as this, grew those four years of patient perseverance and steady persistence in one endeavor, which resulted at last in the preservation of the Union, and the fixing on firm foundations of the free institution of our beloved nation.

"We'll have no more retreats. We'll have no more defeats. You stand by me, and I'll stand by you; and victory shall be ours."

My brothers,—you who, having tasted the bitter sweetness of the intoxicating draught, having known the shame of defeat by an enemy, which in your heart you utterly despise, have fallen anew into the ranks of righteousness, and stand now, shoulder to shoulder, resolved to face your foe, and do battle with him to the end,—as you look for mutual strength into each other's faces,—as you grasp for mutual encouragement each other's hands,—as you feel the friendly pressure and help of association and brotherhood,—as you march together from place to place, like soldiers advancing to the eager fight, say over to yourselves, I pray you, among your other words of cheer; say over one to the other, "We'll have no more retreats. We'll have no more defeats. You stand by me, and I'll stand by you, and victory shall be ours."

Add these to that other saying of a higher inspiration, with which we just now begun: "Stand fast, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

For among the things that you most need in this day and hour, is trust in yourselves and one another, and unbounded confidence and faith in the future. Not reckless trust, not reckless confidence, you understand, but the trust and confidence that are based on drill like the soldier's drill, and discipline like the soldier's discipline, and obedience like the soldier's obedience,—obedience indeed, to no earthly Captain, but to a Heavenly Leader, who is not merely above you on the throne, but who sets himself here in the centre of the conscience, and says in tones of sweet and strong command, which you cannot choose, but hear; Follow me,—forsake all others, and follow me.

No more of these disgraceful defeats! No more giving over of this glorious manhood that is in every one of us, to be the sport and prey of a pitiable foe!

No going back from this position which you have taken! You are cooling down from the first flush of your enthusiasm, but it is only to settle upon the better and more enduring foundation of strong and abiding resolve. You are not to be dragged back one hair's breadth from your new vantage ground. Your feet are planted firmly, as on a rock. Forward, you can go to meet the foe. Upward, you can go to fairer heights. But never backward move.

No, and you will not even look back upon the old self. You will not even think again of the old slavery. You have struck the blow, and you are free. The misery of the past is dead, shut up, sealed, laid away forever.

There are those who hold that when this life is over, all our deeds, little and great, will be brought in review before us, once before the eyes of our Judge, and that, according to that record we shall be judged. If the balance of the account is in our favor, so much the better for us. If the balance of the account is against us, so much the worse. I find myself unable to accept any such theory as this. A man is judged, I hold, is always judged by his Heavenly Father, not so much by what he has done, as by what he has become,—always remembering that what he has done, helps to make what he has become. What are you to-day?—is the pressing question.

What point of perfection, of truth and love have you reached? If two men are travelling together on the road of righteousness, will any one stop to ask how they got there? He who is reformed from some evil course, supposing his reform to be no spasmodic action, but genuine and hearty and thorough,—and may I not say, and believe this of all of you?—may I not affirm that your reform is genuine and hearty and thorough?—is quite as well accounted of, as one who has never fallen. Remember the parable of the lost sheep, and the parable of the lost piece of money, and that other,—which contains in its tender and beautiful lines, the whole blessed Gospel—the immortal parable of the Prodigal son. When you get home to-night, give yourselves five minutes just to sit down and open your Bibles, at Luke, XV: 11—and read that Parable over once more, for your comfort and light and peace.

Now, such a man can afford to bury his dead past. He ought to bury it. It should not be a clog and a hindrance to his better life. If he is strong, and right, and true to-day, no ghost of it should be suffered to rise to humiliate him with the remembrance of its miseries and its shames. I say this to you emphatically. Put away forever, the old man with his deeds. Forget him altogether. Regard yourselves as absolutely incapable of going wrong again, as having trampled down and cast behind the baits of pleasing ill. Begin these new days as new men, who if they have not the freshness of innocence and ignorance of evil upon their faces, have the lofty strength of sin conquered and virtue won;—as new men, all on fire with a new life;—as new men, starting out on a fresh career, with resolution and courage and hope, with eyes all lighted up with the brighter prospect before you,—saying to yourselves and to each other: We were not half alive before. Now indeed we begin to live.

What concerns us now is, not what we have been, but what we shall be. Whatever have been our errors and mistakes, whatever our wilful rebellions and wanderings, by God's blessing, we are here to do His work,—to do our work, which shall be His, henceforth. If we have failed, our failure has not been without its fruit, for it has brought us here. If we have done evil, the evil has not been without its fruit, for it has brought us to this point, to this glad new beginning. Let us now begin to live. If these days are to be our last, let them be our best. But no,—there are no last days for any of us. Beyond the open door of the grave, lies Heaven with its golden streets,—lie the green pastures and the still waters which shall be ours forever.

And, my brothers, I pray you let this new life of yours be new and strong and right all through. Having resolved to be new men in one thing, be new in all things. This gathering of yours is going to be, not like some meteoric light that flashes up for a moment and then goes out,—not an institution of a day that flourishes for a little while, and then fades out and is forgotten. It is going to be a power in this place. I ask you then, to use rightly this opportunity, and make of this new movement all that it can be made. Dedicate it, not to one virtue only, but to all the virtues. Dedicate it to sobriety, and honesty and purity, and faithfulness,—to love and good works and utter integrity.

You are banded together to help each other, and to help this whole community. Be indeed, all the help you can. Make your association in every particular an honor to the place, so that membership of it shall be a passport everywhere. So that when one asks concerning one of you, any of these questions. Is he a temperate man? Is he an honest man? Is he faithful? Can he be trusted? Can his word be depended upon? Is it certain that he will always go straight about his duty and fulfil it to the best of his ability, and be true to every trust that is placed in his hands?—the answer will come straight. You may depend upon him entirely. What he says he will do, you may rely upon it he will do. He is a member of the Reform Club of Quincy, and if there are any true and honorable men to be found, these are they. If it is such men you are looking for, you need go no farther.

God grant that none of you fall away! Keep up together in this march! Press forward together for this hard fight, so that altogether, you may shout victory at last!

St. Louis Correspondence.

APRIL 1st, 1876.

DEAR PATRIOT:—

"Come gentle Spring," is the prayer of our souls, for we know, alas, too well, that her virgin shyness will only too quickly be superseded by our arch enemy, the heated term. There is a point in Nature's economy shown particularly in this locality, which though an inexplicable problem to many, may perhaps be solved by some of the many readers of the Patriot, to wit: why peach trees should blossom early in March, that they may later be sheathed in ice or snow. Is it that the words spoken by the prophet Shakspere be fulfilled?

"Let there be light," and the Gas Corporation say "yes, until May 1st," and after that, so far as gas in the streets of North St. Louis is concerned, the poor seekers after truth will be compelled, like Diogenes, to carry their own lanterns.

The trouble arises from various causes, involving ownership, price of gas, payment of bills, and the matter for several weeks has been in the courts, brought there by our very stubborn Mayor, who, together with the City Council, considering gasoline very much cheaper than gas at present prices, feel that in the event of losing their suit, they have an alternative, which, while it may not light the streets so effectually, will at least, not lighten the city coffers to such a degree.

Our appetites always alive for sensations, are well nigh satiated with reports of suicides. Every day of the past seven, some poor luckless wight has shuffled off this mortal coil, and in the most detailed, thrilling way the newspapers have forced the sad stories upon our unwilling sight. In my younger days, I should have attributed the cause to the hard times, but now feel assured that the poor creatures had only in mind, the keeping up of the average suicidal number, which probably fell below the mark last year. "Comfort ye, my people!"

Temperance is doing a mighty work in Quincy, if one may judge from the newspaper reports. While probably no more now, than in former days, is the reform needed, still the latter-day workers merit much congratulation on their proximate success; and the practical form the movement takes, highly commendable in itself doubtless prepossesses many who, in theory are neutrally inclined. May success attend the work.

VIA.

Couldn't Supply Him.

An old gentleman, who was always bragging how folks used to work in his younger days, one day challenged his two sons to pitch up a load of hay as fast as he could stow it. The challenge was accepted, and the hay wagon driven around, and the trial commenced. For some time the old man held his own very creditably, calling out, "More hay, more hay!" Thicker and faster it came; the old man was nearly covered; but still he kept crying, more hay, more hay!" At length, struggling to keep on top the ill-arranged heap, it began first to roll, then to slide, and at last off it went from the wagon and the old man with it. "What are you down here for?" at once cried the boys. "I came down after more hay," answered the old man.

Getting a Wife in China.

When a gentleman in China feels desirous of taking unto himself a wife he sends to the paternal head of some family containing daughters, for specimens of the size of their feet, with prices attached. One foot is valued at perhaps $2,000, and the next smallest at $5,000, and so on, according to the market. After the foot, or the lady to whom it belongs is chosen, she is sent in a sedan chair to the intended husband's house. He meets her at the door, looks at the vehicle to take a view of the fair one, and if she suits his taste he admits her. As soon as she passes his threshold she becomes his lawful wife; but if he likes the lady not, he shuts the door, and she is carried whence she came.

New Way of Collecting Debts.

"Japstring, lend me five dollars, will you?" asked Roach, one day.

"Yes, on one condition. Hippers, over there owes me five dollars, which is the only, money I have at present. Go over and collect that of him, and I will lend it to you."

"All right," said Roach, starting off. He never expected to get so near a loan as that from any one who knew him, and Japstring had no idea of ever getting the five dollars which Hippers owed him, so he thought there wasn't much risk in the agreement.

Roach was a leech, and although put off and off by Hippers, as Japstring had been, yet he still clung to him, and after wasting a week, managed to get a litter of pups of him, which he sold for four dollars and a half, and became happy. But Japstring is afraid to dun Roach for the money, for fear he will charge him ten dollars for services rendered in collecting his dubious debt, and thus the matter stands.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1876.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

OLD FOLKS' TEA PARTY. Mrs. Henry Wood, an aged and highly respected lady, living on School street, in this town, celebrated her ninetieth birthday anniversary, on Saturday last, with a tea party. The following ladies and gentlemen were present on this occasion:—Mr. Josiah Adams, Mrs. Mark Wood, Mrs. Eben Jewett, Mrs. John Whicher, Mrs. John Faxon, Mrs. Frederick Hardwick, Mr. John Glover, Mrs. John Glover, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. Lucy Billings, Mr. Ebenezer Adams, Mrs. Ebenezer Adams, and the united ages of these thirteen persons, including Mrs. Wood, numbered nine hundred and seventy-one, an average of seventy-four years each. This pleasant gathering was an occasion for great rejoicing, and many pleasing associations were recalled to memory.

Mrs. Wood was in excellent health and spirits, and expressed to her visitors the wish, that on attaining her one hundredth birthday, she might be able to entertain them with a similar party.

PUBLIC LIBRARY. The trustees of the Public Library of this town have issued their fifth annual report of the condition of that institution. From it we learn that the library was open 267 days during the year, and was patronized by 3,458 persons, to whom was issued 34,551 volumes. During the month of March 4,776 books were drawn; the largest number of any month.

SAD BEREAVEMENT. The family of John Quincy Adams, Esq., has been deeply afflicted the present week by sickness and death. Three of their four children, two sons and a daughter, have been attacked by diphtheria, two of whom a son and daughter, the oldest and youngest have died. Another son, though very sick, is now, we are glad to hear, in a fair way of recovery. Their third son is not at present with his parents.

☞ It will perhaps be gratifying to the women of Quincy, to know, that they have contributed the sum of $910 to the Centennial Fund; a larger sum in proportion than given by any other town in Massachusetts, and great praise is awarded them for the manner in which their work was done.

A USEFUL INVENTION. One of the most simple and useful articles for the ladies who do their own dress making is "The Ladies' Favorite," a machine for making any kind of plaiting, which is such a fashionable trimming at the present time. For dress-makers' use we should think it would be invaluable. Mrs. H. A. West is agent for this vicinity. Read the advertisement.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT. Last Wednesday afternoon, as our smart young store-keeper, George Crane, was returning with a load of potatoes from Boston, with his 2-40 horse, he had his usual happy mood disturbed, by his animal becoming frightened at the steam, puffing from the Iron Foundry. Friend George soon found himself in contact with a lamp-post, which he struck with considerable violence, but without breaking any bones. A man who was riding with him, attempted to jump, but was caught in the reins and dragged under the wagon about twenty rods. Fortunately they both escaped with only a few bruises. The next time George drives his runaway, we hope he will take a firmer seat than the top of a barrel.

JURORS. William G. Kimball and Seth Dewing, Jr., of this town, have been drawn by the Selectmen, to serve as jurors for the Civil Session, of the Supreme Court of Norfolk County, April term.

ACCIDENT. A man named Andrew, an Italian, was injured on the cars running between the ledges, recently owned by Michell & Co. and the wharf at Quincy Neck, last Monday morning, by being jammed between two rocks on the car of which he was brakeman. Unfortunately the cars, there were two of them, got off the track, which threw the forward part down the embankment, and the poor fellow had his leg caught between the rocks, mangling the bones fearfully. He was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital for treatment.

ON TRIAL. It will be remembered by many of our citizens, about one year ago, a house at Wollaston Heights, owned by Mr. Jarvis was set on fire and destroyed. A barn adjoining was saved at that time, but about a month ago it was destroyed by the flames. Mr. Jarvis was seen about the premises the day of the fire, and as it was heavily insured, there were suspicions that he was the incendiary.

On Wednesday Mr. Frederick A. Jarvis of Brookline, was brought before the District Court in this town, by State Detective Wade, on complaint of Thomas P. Bagley, Fire Marshal of Boston, for setting the building on fire. Messrs. Waterhouse, Lord, Russell, and others, besides several ladies,—all highly respected citizens of Wollaston, testified to seeing Mr Jarvis at that place on the day of the fire. Mr. Jarvis denied being there, and brought his family to testify to his being at home. As there was no evidence given that he set the fire, even if he was there, he was discharged.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT. A very instructive and entertaining concert, was given by the Sabbath School connected with the Congregational Church last Sunday evening. The theme, was Temperance and it was portrayed in a very truthful manner. The recitations, singing and dialogue were very entertaining. The superintendant, Mr. Chas. W. Carter, in his remarks stated that one hundred and forty members of the school had signed the pledge.

HORSE-WHIPPING AFFAIR. It was rumored about town on Fast day, that one of our prominent citizens, Mr. Frederick H. French, was severely horse-whipped on the previous evening, and many were the exaggerated stories of his hair-breadth escape from the assailants. To ascertain the facts in the case our reporter visited Sheriff French, when he learned that many of the stories were too true but not of so serious a nature as rumor would have us believe. The facts of the affair are expressed in a few words. In the "Hub" is an old and honorable military organization known as the "Boston Lancers," composed of the best material in the Commonwealth, which numbers upwards of six hundred members,—ten of whom are residents of this town. It has been the custom for many years for the members, who also belong to musical, literary and other clubs, to which none but lancers are admitted, to hold their regular meetings at the residence of the members.

On Wednesday evening last, it fell to the lot of our Quincy "Redcoat" to furnish quarters and rations for the graduating class, of 1876. Early in the evening the party arrived, called on another of their members, Mr. Hiram P. Abbott, who received them in true military style. After which they proceeded to the residence of W. M. French, Esq., where, we learn, the exercises consisted of an address on Telegraphy, by Prof. Emery; a short lecture on the "Abuse of the Horse by whips and snappers," by Maj. Pushee; the presentation to Frederick H. French of a costly and beautiful whip, (a very agreeable surprise,) after which they sat down to a banquet prepared in true French style.

GOOD WORK. There was a large and glorious meeting at the hall of the Quincy Reform Club, on Fast evening. Excellent speeches were made by A. A. May and P. E. Nash of Salem; George Randall of Peabody; Sam'l T. Allen, Jos. T. French, George S. Phillips, I. M. Holt and James E. Tirrell. Several came forward and signed the pledge. Thus the good work goes continually on. May it never stop as long as there are men that need reforming.

ONCE MORE. By referring to our advertising columns it will be seen that Joseph W. Lombard, Esq., is once more prepared to suit his old friends and customers, and give them good bargains in all styles and qualities of clothing, at his store on Temple street.

☞ More beautiful spring weather could not be desired than the present week has brought.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY. A very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mrs. A. Bundy, at Wollaston, on Friday evening of last week, which began with a complete surprise to that estimable lady. It being the anniversary of one of the important events of her life, some of her friends conspired to make a raid upon her, and so secretly had they worked, that she had not even caught a hint of their intentions. Regaining her usual self-composure on their arrival she made the raiding visitors welcome, and soon the happy party were enjoying themselves in social games, singing, music and dancing, and in disposing of an excellent collation. The pleasant sociability of the company, made the hours speed swiftly, and the clock struck the wee small hour, before the last of the party said their good-byes. The occasion will long be a pleasant memory to all who participated.

QUINCY SAVINGS BANK. At a meeting of the Quincy Savings Bank Corpotion, held at the Banking Rooms, April 11th, 1876, the following members were elected officers for the year ensuing:—

President,—Edward Turner.

Vice President,—Israel W. Munroe.

Trustees,—Edward Turner, Israel W. Munroe, Daniel Baxter, Noah Cummings, Whitcomb Porter, George A. Brackett, Charles A. Howland, Horace B. Spear, John D. Whicher, John Quincy Adams, Daniel H. Bills and George B. Wendell.

Attest, GEORGE L. GILL, Sec.
Quincy, April 15th.

PLANT GRAPEVINES. Mr. Albert Holt has some excellent thrifty grape vines which he wishes to dispose of. Read notice.

☞ Proposals will be received by the Selectmen for the setting of edgestones in this town, until Saturday next. See advertisement.

CORRECTION. The types made a great mistake last week, in the sale of meadow land by James Edwards. Instead of $5000 it should read $500.

☞ It is said that the American District Telegraph Company propose to establish in New York city a system of cheap cabs.

Braintree.

The Braintree Reform Club held one of their temperance rallies on Saturday evening last, at the Town Hall. Mr. Spaulding, of Boston, addressed the meeting, followed by F. A. Hobart, G. W. Kelley, Rev. Mr. Hammond, J. Shaw and A. T. Pratt. President Gooch, in the chair. The meeting was a very full one, more so than any previous one. The hall being filled to its utmost capacity.

On Fast day the Butcher Boys were out on parade and found their machine all right for 213. They took dinner at the engine house and enjoyed themselves generally.

On the afternoon of Fast Day the Dexter Land Company, who own a large tract of land on the line of the Old Colony Railroad, at the south part of the town, accompanied by a band of music, took a party of colonists numbering about one hundred, to view their building lots. The examination proved very satisfactory to the visitors, and the Old Colony Corporation hold out such inducements to them, in connection with the liberality of the Land Company, and the school priviliges of Braintree, &c., the prospect now is, that the population of Braintree will soon be on the increase.

D.

ENTERTAINMENT. The best entertainment given in Quincy for many a day, was that of the Red Ribbon Minstrels, in Town Hall last Saturday night. It was given under the auspices of the Quincy Reform Club, and participated in by some of the members. Although an amateur show, it was far above the average, and put to shame many of the performances of the so called professional troupes who have inflicted themselves upon us during the season.

The performance was a genuine surprise to the many who were fortunate enough to attend, not only for its general excellency, but for thoroughness of every little detail in connection with it. The curtain rang up, as advertised, presenting to view thirteen people in the circle, attired in black pants, coats and white vests, with the lappels of their coats decorated with a button hole boquet and red ribbon, the insignia of the club. Mr. Fox, as Bones, Mr. Hunt, Tambo and Mr. A. Dolliver, as Interlocutor. The songs and choruses were finely rendered. That of the "Little Wanderer," Mr. McLay, being particularly good, and the result was an encore. The doings and sayings of the end men were very funny, their jokes new and pleasing. The Olio was commenced with "Songs and Dances," by the Avery Brothers. Their endeavors met with an encore. They were followed by Mr. Harry Studley with "sounds from the Banjo." Mr. Studley's specialities in this line are too well known for us to add any words of praise, and it is sufficient to state that he was thrice demanded.

The clog hornpipe of Mr. Wiley, was artistic and he shared in the favors shown his predecessors. Mr. Durgin in behalf of the management, then thanked the audience for their kindness and appreciation, and desired to appologize for the non-appearance of a gentleman whose name was on the programme for a Stump Speech. To fill the void, Mr. Harry Long had kindly volunteered and would introduce some Irish Vocalisms. Mr. Long who is a thorough artist in his specialities, made a most decided hit, exciting the audience to such a degree that he was called out four times. The "Funny Old Gal," of Jas. Fox, fairly convulsed every one, and was one of the best performances ever given in Quincy. Such a shout went up as he finished his song, it fairly made the wall shake. A "Bango Solo," by Charles Hunt and "Step Jig" by Avery finished a performance that was much enjoyed by all.

At the earnest request of many citizens, the entertainment is to be repeated Saturday evening, April 22d, when in addition to a complete change of programme, Mr. Long will sing his latest Irish Songs, and Mr. Fox reproduce his "Funny Old Gal." For further particulars see small bills.

DISTRICT COURT. Charles R. Hatch, of Weymouth, on complaint of Wales B. Thayer, of Randolph, for embezzeling the sum of thirteen hundred dollars, the property of the Singer Manufacturing Company. The defendant waiving an examination, was held in the sum of three thousand dollars for trial before the Superior Court. In default was committed.

Henry Sylvester and James Martin, two well dressed young gentlemen of Boston, for disturbing the peace at Randolph, on Sunday last, were brought before the Court by Deputy Sheriff Warren, and on pleading guilty, were fined $5 and costs.

Quincy Sprague, of Holbrook, otherwise known as "Quin," was arraigned for being drunk at Randolph, to which he plead guilty, and was fined $3 and costs.

George Cole, of Hingham, on complaint of Constable Garey, for being drunk. Plead guilty, and was fined the usual sum of $3 and costs, in default, was committed.

Patrick H. Hayes, of Weymouth, on complaint of Benjamin F. Robinson, for being drunk, was arraigned and plead guilty. On payment of the usual fine and costs was discharged.

Frederick A. Jarvis, of Brookline, on complaint of Thomas P. Bagley of Boston, for setting fire to the barn of Francis M. Jarvis, on the night of March 8th. He plead not guilty, and after examination of several witnesses the defendant was discharged.

Caleb Hayden, of Braintree, on complaint of Ann M. Hayden for threatening to commit an assault. Plead not guilty, when the case was continued one week for further examination.

Patrick Daley, of Weymouth, on complaint of Constable Garey, for selling liquor to John Fogerty. Plead not guilty, but upon the testimony of Fogerty the defendant was found guilty and fined $50 and costs, from which sentence he appealed to the Superior Court.

Henry W. Rosey, of Weymouth, on complaint of Joshua Binney, for breaking and entering the hosue of John Dizer, for the purpose of committing larceny therein. Plead not guilty but there being probable cause to believe he was guilty of the offence charged, the Court ordered said defendant to recognize in the sum of $1000 for his appearance before the Superior Court, on the first Monday of September next. In default was committed to Dedham Jail.

Mrs. Lunt.

Died in Quincy, the 25th of March, Mrs. Ellen H. Lunt, aged sixty-eight years.

Here was a full, beneficent and beautiful life. Mrs. Lunt was the daughter of Barnabas Hedge, Esq., of Plymouth, and one of a lovely band of sisters, who made their father's home famous in the Old Colony fifty years ago. The fine old home long since was broken up. Mrs. Dr. Robbins, of Boston, Mrs. Judge Charles Henry Warren and Mrs. Lunt have gone, while Mrs. John Thomas and Mrs. George Warren, of New York, still survive.

The subject of this notice married William Parsons Lunt, who in 1828 was invited to the pastoral charge of the Second Congregational Unitarian Society in the city of New York, as its first settled minister. After a few years Mr. Lunt removed from New York to Quincy; and here the home, now so sadly bereaved, has been established more than forty years. In all this time Mrs. Lunt has been a gracious power of wise and loving helpfulness in her home and in the whole community about her. With great joys she has had unusual sorrows. Nineteen years ago her husband left home in pursuit of health, and on his way to the Holy Land, through the Desert, he died in the shadow of Mount Sinai, and was reverently buried there by the Arabs. And his dear friend, Dr. Frothingham, wrote the pathetic dirge "that the eloquent grace of that pensive face and that mellow voice was o'er":—

> Alas for thee, oh our brother!
> And for this we sorrow most,
> That a spirit so fair
> Must be breathed out there
> On that stern Arabian coast;
>
> That a life so all unforeign
> To faith and his country bound
> Turned dying eyes
> Upon Asian skies,
> And dropped on Moslem ground.
>
> Oh that the thoughtful scholar,
> His mind at its fullest noon,
> That the preacher's tongue
> And the poet's song
> Should pass away so soon!

It was a dark shadow that fell upon the widow and her children, but she looked above the cloud and was strong. And then, six years afterward, when by the death of the brave Col. Paul J. Revere in the battle front for our country's life her daughter was widowed, and little ones left fatherless, it was a very dark hour in the Quincy home; but Mrs. Lunt was sufficient for her day. In her family she has been the tower of strength, and the benignant light to guide and cheer; and in the parish, for which she never lost her interest, she labored zealously to the last. She held fast her Christian faith, and before her departure, her children and grandchildren around her, she received from her pastor the smybols of the Last Supper of Holy Communion, and it was good to hear the strong words in the prayer of her pastor at her funeral, touching her fidelity and usefulness unto death.

This was a solemn joy to some of us who stood there at the grave of a life-long friend to think of the beautiful life,—in its bright youth, its strong maturity, and its beneficent, peaceful age.

Resolutions.

At the final meeting of the Women's Centennial Committee of Quincy, it was

Resolved,—That in closing our Centennial work, we wish to express our deep sorrow, in the recent death of our efficient Chairman, Mrs. Lunt. She has been identified for so many years, with every branch of benevolence in Quincy, that her loss is a public one, and she leaves a void, which no one else can fill.

Beloved and respected, wherever known, she has left a name and example, we all may strive to emulate.

To her family, her loss is unutterable, and we would tender to them our warmest sympathy, but we believe they will derive great consolation in remembering that her life, though short to us and them, was crowned with honor in the faithful service of her Lord and Master.

Resolved,—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Mrs. Lunt, and to the Quincy Patriot.

By order of the Women's Centennial Committee.

H. L. KING, Secretary.

DEATH OF A. T. STEWART. Alexander T. Stewart, the leading dry goods merchant of the United States, if not of the whole world, and one of the most philanthropic as well as wealthy gentlemen in the country, died at his residence in New York on Monday, from an attack of inflammation of the bowels. Mr. Stewart was of Scotch-Irish parentage, his birthplace being at Belfast, Ireland, and he was seventy-three years old at the time of his death. He received a liberal education at Trinity College, Dublin, and came to New York city in 1823, where he taught classics in a private school for a brief period.

Mr. Stewart first went into business in 1827, with a capital of $3000, most of which he invested in Irish linens and laces, and buying for cash sold for low figures. His progress was rapid. In 1848 he was enabled to erect a splendid marble store on Broadway, at the corner of Reade street, on the site of the old Washington Hotel, and eventually extended his front to Chamber street.

In the course of time this edifice proved insufficient, and as trade went up town he built the great store at the upper part of Broadway, above Ninth street, where his sales have been immense, estimated in some years as high as $70,000,000 to $75,000,000. Throughout his entire life, Mr. Stewart was distinguished for his unswerving integrity and close application to his own business. He never allowed himself to wander into new fields of speculation, and his word was always as good as his bond. Mr. Stewart leaves an enviable example for the guidance of the young men of America.

Head Quarters Paul Revere Encampment,
Post No. 88, G. A. R.
QUINCY, APRIL 4th, 1876.

Whereas,—It has pleased a Divine Providence, to remove from our midst after long and painful suffering, our friend and comrade, Geo. W. Ripley, late of Co. G., 92d Regiment, New York Volunteers. Therefore be it

Resolved,—That in the death of George W. Ripley, this Post laments the loss of a Comrade, who served faithfully in the army, until disabled by wounds received at the battle of Chapin's Farm, Va., October, 1864, which through neglect on the field, and afterwards in rebel prisons, has resulted in his death; and who though continually a sufferer from the consequences of that wound, uncomplainingly and faithfully devoted himself to the duties of his position.

Resolved,—That we especially lament his loss as that of a true and brave soldier, whose health was utterly broken by hard service, wounds and imprisonment, and who has now given his life as truly for his country, as if he had yielded it on the field where he was first stricken down, and where he offered it so freely.

Resolved,—That we tender to the members of his surviving family, our sympathies in their bereavement, particularly to her whose devoted affection as a wife sustained and cheered him in his closing years of sickness and disease.

Resolved,—That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our records, and a copy transmitted to the widow of the deceased, and the usual badge of mourning, be borne on the colors of the encampment, for the space of thirty days.

Letter from North Weymouth.

A PLUCKY CHANTICLEER.

A few days since a gentleman living in Old Spain, thought he would kill a nice fat rooster from his flock of fowl, and have him for dinner, The rooster which he proposed to kill was a fighter, not only with his feathered kind, but he would fight man or boy, just as readily if they dared to show him their boot. On the morning the execution was to take place, the gentleman went out to catch the old bird, who was strutting about the yard crowing defiance to any one who dared to face him. As soon as they came in close proximity to each other, a lively contest ensued. Boots and spurs came together as though each one meant business. Finally, after a few rounds were had, the rooster received a fowl blow, which laid him out, and he was left on the field for dead. The gentleman then went into the house, and put a kettle of water on to the stove to boil, for the purpose of scalding the feathers off the supposed dead rooster. He then went out for the old crower, and to his utter astonishment, he had come to life and was up crowing and waiting for another fight. They stood and looked at each other for a few minutes, then both pitched in and another lively contest was had. At last the boots got the best of the fight, and old chanticleer failed to come to time, but turned and left the field; he was hotly pursued by his antagonist, and finally after being chased about the yard for some half an hour, or until both were nearly exhausted, the once plucky rooster was captured and beheaded, consequently a nice good dinner was the result of the contest.

GREAT TEMPERANCE REFORMATION.

There is at the present time quite a lively interest awakened in the temperance cause in North Weymouth. Meetings are being held, one and two evenings every week, and everybody seems to rejoice with unspeakable joy, for the wonderful success that has already been accomplished. The meetings are of a most interesting character, and new persons are going forward each night and signing the pledge.

On Monday evening of last week, a temperance meeting was held in Webster Hall, for the purpose of organizing a reform club. There was quite a large and respectable attendance, present. Samuel Allen, Esq., President of the Quincy Reform Club, was present and addressed the meeting in a most eloquent and interesting manner. His remarks were listened to with profound interest. Mr. Allen urged the immediate necessity of organizing a Reform Club in this place. His remarks seemed to give a new impetus to the meeting. Other remarks were listened to from interesting speakers, after which the meeting proceeded to the work of organizing a club. Mr. Allen, very kindly gave them such instructions as the meeting needed in completing the organization. The club made choice of the following named gentlemen for officers:—

President, William O. Merrett; Vice Presidents, Wm. Torrey, Luther Pratt, Wm. Bates; Recording Secretary, Wilmot Cleverly; Financial Secretary, David Kidder; Treasurer, Augustus Beals; Marshal, Foster Pratt; Sergeant at Arms, Nehemiah Reed; Steward, Geo. Wise; Chaplain, John T. Battles.

Certainly a wiser or better selection of officers could not have been made. These men have taken hold of the work in right good earnest. We believe through their labors and influence, a great and mighty work will be accomplished. The members have started with bright and cheering prospects, and may they work on with an earnest determination, never to stop in the work until by the help of God, they shall stop all rum drinking and rum selling in Old Spain; and that it can be said in truth, that every man and every boy in this old garden of Weymouth, have signed the pledge and joined the Reform Club.

N. M.

N. Weymouth, April 8, 1876.

☞ The Abington town meeting voted "to provide work breaking stone, digging and wheeling gravel, or otherwise, for all tramps which the town helps," requiring the tramps to labor a sufficient length of time to compensate for aid furnished; in case of refusal, to be at once arrested as vagrants.

☞ Among our Spring notices may be seen the advertisement of J. H. ROBINSON & CO., 406 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. (Probably) no house in New England deal more largely in imported and domestic paper hangings, and for fair treatment and best goods this is the place to trade.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry,

The standard remedy for the cure of coughs, colds, influenza, bronchitis, hoarseness, asthma, whooping cough, croup, sore throat, diphtheria, difficulty of breathing, quinsy, phthisic, pain in the side and breast, spitting of blood, liver complaint, bleeding of the lungs, and all diseases of the throat, lungs, and chest, including even consumption. It seems hardly necessary to dilate at length upon the virtues of this favorite remedy for all diseases of the lungs, throat and chest. It was introduced to the public by Dr. Wistar nearly half a century since, and by the wonderful cures which it performed, gained an immediate and enviable reputation, which to this day it has fully sustained. From the gulf of the St. Lawrence to the shores of the Pacific, and in many countries abroad, there are few villages or hamlets without "living testimonials" to the rapidity and certainty of its curative effects. The proprietors, mindful of their responsibility to the afflicted, exercise the utmost care in the selection and compounding of the various ingredients of which the BALSAM is composed; and the sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which its popularity is based, will always be maintained.

Dragging out Existence.

The nervous, weakly invalid does not enjoy life, but merely "drags out existence," as the phrase is. Unfitted for the active pursuits of life, and incapable of partaking of its pleasures, to which health alone can give a zest; disinclined to social intercourse, and a prey to melancholy, the valetudinarian is indeed an object of pity. Yet there is nothing in all this that cannot be remedied by that genial alterative tonic and nervine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which supplies deficient stamina, braces the nervous system, and overcomes those bodily irregularities to which nervous weakness is most frequently attributable. Diseases of the kidney and bladder, imperfect digestion and uterine troubles are fertile sources of debility. Their eradication, however, becomes a matter of certainty when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are systematically used for that purpose. The Bitters likewise annihilate and prevent fever and ague and other debilitating febrile complaints of a malarial nature. 1m

MASS MEETING. One of the largest and best temperance meetings ever assembled in this State, was held at Stoughton, on Fast afternoon. Among the many friends of the cause present, we noticed H. H. Faxon, Esq., and Samuel T. Allen of Quincy; President E. A. Morse of the Canton Reform Club; Hon. E. C. Mudge of Stoughton; Mr. Bliss the great reformer of Connecticut, and many others. At 1.30 a procession was formed and preceded by three bands viz:—Britton's of Stoughton, North Easton and Citizen's of Sharon, (consolidated) marched through some of the principal streets to the Orthodox church, the largest in the place, where an audience of about 1000 was in waiting.

It was found impossible to accommodate the multitudes clamoring for admission, and Atwood's Hall was quickly opened and filled, with an audience of about 800, and the remainder, numbering nearly 2000 were addressed on the green, in front of the hotel for about an hour by Messrs. Bliss, Howland, and Brannigan of Stoughton, and S. T. Allen of Quincy. The meeting in the Hall was addressed by Messrs. Morse and Bowman of Canton, and Messrs. Bliss, Porter and Rev. Thos. Wilson of Stoughton. The principal meeting, however, was in the Orthodox church.

The Stoughton club numbers 1367 members including the ladies, many of whom marched in the procession Fast day. Time and space will not permit us to notice the meetings further.

GOOD ADVICE!—Parents should always watch their Children's Health in cold and raw weather, and keep them in sound condition by using WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL a very palatable Remedy that never fails to speedily cure Coughs, Colds, Croup, Sore Throat, and Diphtheria!

What is the Value of a life? Gold cannot measure it. Yet when menaced by a violent cough or cold, or any disease leading to consumption, a single dollar invested in HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR will unquestionably preserve it. Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

☞ Smoke and Water slightly damaged a large quantity of Men's and Boys' Clothing for Richards, at his Old Corner, 25 Dock Square, Boston. These goods are all well made and of desirable Styles and they are now offered, to close them out, at less than one half the cost. They are selling with a rush and are the greatest bargains ever offered in Boston. Call at once and make the best trade in your life in a good servicable suit.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS! It is reported that BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP has, since its introduction in the United States reached the immense sale of 40,000 dozen per year. Over 6,000 Druggists have ordered this Medicine direct from the Factory, at Woodbury, N. J., and not one have reported a single failure, but every letter speaks of its astonishing success in curing severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Breast, Consumption, or any disease of Throat and Lung. We advise any person that has any predisposition to weak Lungs, to go to their Druggist, John H. Veazie, and get this Medicine, or inquire about it. Regular size, 75 cents; sample bottle, 10 cents. Two doses will relieve any case. Don't neglect your cough.

LYON'S KATHAIRON prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

PYLE'S DIETETIC SALERATUS. Universally acknowledged the best in use. Each pound bears the name of JAMES PYLE. None genuine without. Jul71y

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

WEST WINDSOR, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly, L. McQUOWN.

"State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before } LEON. McQUOWN.
me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. } Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rhematism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov, 10, 1873.

"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

WHITE WRAPPER for Family use. YELLOW WRAPPER for Animals.
Price, 50 cents; Large Bottles, $1.00.

Castoria is a substitute for Castor Oil. It is as pleasant to take as honey. For wind colic and sour stomach it is simply wonderful. Physicans recommend it. Price, 35 cents per bottle. Jan. 8. 1y

Resolutions.

At a meeting of the Sewing Circle connected with the Unitarian church in this town, on the 5th inst., the following Preamble and Resolutions were offered.

WHEREAS,—The Ladies of the "Unitarian Sewing Circle" of Quincy, have heard with deep sorrow of the death of Mrs. Ellen H. Lunt, for many years President of this Society, and always a most active and useful member. A lady not only endeared to them by ties of the warmest friendship, but whose pure character, whose unselfishness, sympathy and charity, made her beloved, not by her family and friends alone, but by all who knew her.

Resolved,—That in her death the town of Quincy has suffered the loss of an upright and public spirited woman, and that the poor will miss a constant and kind friend.

Resolved,—That this Society tender its sincerest sympathy to her family under their affliction, and join with them in mourning the loss of the most devoted of mothers and the kindest of women,—and transmit to their acceptance a copy of these Resolutions.

For the Patriot.

The Temperance Reform.

BY FRED. C. BAKER.

The work that God has given us
We'll cheerfully perform,
And with His help we'll labor,
For the Temperance Reform.

To fight the hellish, demon drink,
And drive it from our land,
To lift poor men from ruin's brink,
And show them how to stand.

To break the fiery demon's chain,
That hold them slaves to sin,
And help them, if we only can,
An honest life to win.

To homes now sad and desolate,
We'll bring new rays of light,
We'll bring them peace and happiness
And scatter all their night.

Lord help us every day we live,
Each duty to perform,
And all our time and talents give
To this glorious Reform.

Agricultural, &c.

Ayrshires and Durhams.

The champions of either of these favorite grades of cows, are given to presenting very elaborate statistics tending to show their superiority; but when an intelligent farmer has made experiments, and knows how to present the result of them, the facts have a value for all who keep cows. A member of the Western New York Farmers' Club, in an elaborate and very creditable paper, recently gave these interesting facts:

"I find by repeated experiments, that my cows, while in milk, require about 21 pounds of hay, or its equivalent, per day, with the addition of five pounds of bean meal or beans boiled, or fifteen pounds sugar beets or the same of potatoes.

The only carefully-conducted experiment which I have made, bearing upon the subject of profit, was with the cow, Daisy, weight 600 lbs., in which from March 15th, she gave 4,322 pounds of milk in 26 weeks, which being made into butter, gave 247 pounds, and was sold at 35 cents for $86.45, 5 per cent. of milk being butter.

Alimentivness and nutrition seem wonderfully developed in the Ayrshires. They eat with good relish, needing no appetizer, and the nutrient properties of their food are readily assimilated.

I recently purchased four grade Durham cows, in the fall, not larger than my largest Ayrshire, and commenced with the same feed, viz: 21 pounds per day, which I found necessary to increase to 33 pounds, which proved to be the quantity required. Two and a quarter tons more in the year would be consumed by the grade than by the Ayrshire. My present stock bull, whose weight is 1,500 is fed the same rations as my cows in milk, viz: 21 pounds of hay and 5 pounds boiled beans.

I am convinced there is no class of animals that will produce from a given amount of food, as much milk and butter and cheese, or bone and muscle and fat, which is beef. The ordinary rate per cent. of food to live weight has no application to Ayrshires."

Poultry and Eggs for Profit.—One man out of ten thousand might probably go into the business of raising eggs and poultry for market profitably; but the chances are that every one of the others would fail. It is a business that requires as much tact, patience, practical knowledge, and habits of close and careful observation, as book-keeping. A suitable place is also needed, and a locality where fresh eggs and spring chickens bring a good price. The knowledge of what is required can come only through experience, and cannot be communicated, except with a great deal of detail. That there is profit in the business is certain, but only when a right man goes into it in the right place.—Am. Agriculturist.

Fertilizing for Fruit.

Animal manures promote vegetation, but mineral fertilizers are essential to secure the finest crops of fruit. If you apply two quarts of coarse bone meal to each vine, spreading it over the surface of the soil for a radius, of five feet, you will doubtles have more and better grapes Unleached wood-ashes, and peat from a reclaimed swamp, may be used to great advantage in a vineyard, and salt as well is highly beneficial. Use any or all of the above in very early spring, and merely incorporate with the surface soil by means of a hoe

Anecdotes.

Lady visitor (to small boy)—"So your eldest brother's name is Maximilian. What do you call him?"

Boy—"Maxey, mum."

Visitor—"And the baby—what's her name?"

Boy—"Minnie, mum."

Visitor—"And which are the twins?"

Boy—"Jem and I, of course."

Farmer (sarcastically).—What house are you traveling for?

Tramp. The Poor House. Want ter send word ter any of yer relations there?

"Class in the middle of geography stand up," said a schoolmaster. "What is a pyramid?"

"A pile of men in a circus, one on top of the other."

"Where is Egypt?"

"Where it always was."

"Where is Wales?"

"All over the sea."

"Very well!" said the schoolmaster. "Stay there till I show you a species of birch that grows all over the country.

"Are these rooms to let?" said a polite gentleman to a handsome young lady."

"Yes sir."

"And are you to be let with them?"

"No, sir! I'm to be let alone!"

Rounds the sharp knobs of character away;
And no great harm, unless at grave expense
Of what needs edge of proof, the moral sense;
For man or race is on the downward path
Whose fibre grows too soft for honest wrath,
And there's a subtle influence that springs
From words to modify our sense of things.
A plain distinction is obscured of late;
Men, if they will, may pardon; but the State
Forgets its function if not fixed as Fate.
So thought our sires; a hundred years ago,
If men were knaves, why people called them so.
And crime could see the prison-portal bend
Its brow severe at no long vista's end;
In those days, for plain things plain words would serve;
Men had not learned to admire the graceful swerve
Wherewith the Æsthetic Nature's genial mood
Makes public duty slope to private good;
No muddled conscience raised the saving doubt;
A soldier proved unworthy was drummed out,
An officer cashiered, a civil servant
(No matter though his piety were fervent),
Disgracefully dismissed, and through the land
Each bore for life a stigma from the brand,
Whose far-heard hiss made others more averse
To take the facile step from bad to worse.
The Ten Commandments had a meaning then,
Felt in their bones by least considerate men,
Because behind them Public Conscience stood
And without wincing made their mandates good
But now that "Statesmanship" is just a way
To dodge the primal curse and make it pay,
Since Office means a kind of patent drill
To force an entrance to the Nation's till,
And peculation something rather less
Risky, than if you spelt it with an s;
Now that to steal by law is grown an art,
Whom rogues the sires, their milder sons call smart,
And "slightly irregular" dilutes the shame
Of what had once a somewhat blunter name;
With generous curve we draw the moral line;
Our swindlers are permitted to resign;
Their guilt is wrapped in deferential names,
And twenty sympathize for one that blames.
Add national disgrace to private crime,
Confront mankind with brazen front sublime,
Steal but enough, the world is unsevere,
Tweed is a statesman, Fisk a financier;
Invent a mine and be—the Lord knows what,
Secure, at any rate, with what you've got.
The public servant who has stolen or lied
If called on, may resign with honest pride:
As unjust favor put him in, why doubt
Disfavor as unjust has turned him out?
Even if indicted, what is that but fudge
To him who counted-in the elective judge?
Whitewashed, he quits the politician's strife
At ease in mind, with pockets filled for life:
His lady glares with gems whose vulgar blaze
The poor man through his heightened taxes pays,
Himself content if one huge Koh-i-noor
Bulge from a shirt-front ampler than before—
But not too candid, lest it haply tend
To rouse suspicion of the People's Friend;
A public meeting, treated at his cost,
Resolves him back more virtue than he lost;
With character regilt he counts his gains;
What's gone was air, the solid good remains;
For what is good except what friend and foe
Seem both unanimous in thinking so,
The stocks and bonds which in our age of loans
Replace the stupid pagan's stocks and stones?
With choker white, wherein no cynic eye
Dares see idealized a hempen tie,
At parish-meetings he conducts in prayer,
And pays for missions—to be sent elsewhere;
On 'Change respected, to his friends endeared,
Add but a Sunday-school class, he's revered,
And his too early tomb will not be dumb
To point a moral for our youth to come.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

NICE PUDDING. One pint of nice fine bread-crumbs, one quart of milk, one cup of sugar, the yolks of four eggs beaten, the grated rind of a lemon, a piece of butter the size of an egg. Bake until done, but not watery. Whip the whites of the eggs stiff, beat in a teacupful of sugar, in which has been strained the juice of the lemon, spread over the pudding a layer of jelly, pour the whites of the eggs over this; replace in the oven; bake lightly. To be eaten cold with cream if preferred.

A GOOD POUND CAKE. Beat one pound of butter to a cream, and mix with it the whites and yolks of eight eggs beaten apart. Have ready, warm by the fire, one pound of flour, and the same of sifted sugar; mix them and a few cloves, a little nutmeg and cinnamon, in fine powder together; then by degrees work the dry ingredients into the butter and eggs. It must be beaten a full hour.—Butter a pan, and bake it an hour in a quick oven. The above proportions, leaving out four ounces of the butter, and the same of sugar, make a less luscious cake, and to most tastes a more pleasant one.

TO KEEP ANTS AWAY. A chalk mark, at least half an inch in breadth around the upper edge of sugar buckets, barrels, etc., will not, it is asserted, admit one ant into their interior. The same mark drawn on the edges of shelves will also prevent the approach of ants, as they are not able to crawl over the chalk.

COMING TO WOO.

When Aunt Philinda went away the last thing she said to me, was:—

"I'm going to send somebody down to see you afore long, an' I hope you'll act like a sensible girl, an' not stand in your own light. He's smart as the average, an' he's got the best farm I know on anywhere in this section of the country. You couldn't do better."

I hadn't the faintest idea that she would do as she said; but I began to believe that she meant business when I received the following letter:—

DEAR NIECE MARIAR:—I've told Mr. Greene about you, an' he's goin' to come down to your place next week. I do hope you'll like him, for a better husband never lived than he'd make you. Afore Mehitable—that was his first wife—died, he was one of the best perviders I ever see, and the Lord knows he had to be since, for that sister of his'n that keeps house for him, is awful wasteful. He's considerable took up with you from my description, an' I know he'll like you. Any body that's smart and capable can do well to marry him. The children are purty behaved, an' take after their father. Now don't think he won't suit you 'cause he ain't fixed up like a young man. He's worth a dozen young men, fur's property's concerned, an' Mehitable used to say he was awful lovin'. Do be a sensible girl, Mariar, and—and not stand in your own light. From your affectionate aunt,

PHILINDA."

"For goodness' sake!" I exclaimed when I had read the letter through to my sister Jane. "What shall I do? Here it's Monday, and the letter ought to have been here last week. He's likely to happen along any time. Such an old fool as Aunt Philinda is! The idea of my marrying a widower with half a dozen children."

"But they're purty behaved, and 'take after their father,'" said Jane, wiping the tears from her eyes, and hardly able to talk from laughing. 'And he's awful lovin'."

"I don't want any of his loving ways round me," says I, indignantly. "I won't speak to him. She might have known better. I think it a regular insult."

"I'll tell you what," cried Jane, her eyes luminous with a brilliant idea. "Let me pretend that I am you. I'll be Mariar for the time being, and you be Jane."

"What good will that do?" I asked.

"Ever so much," answered she. "Father and mother won't be back for four or five days, and I can tire him out before that time. I'll be deaf. Won't that be splendid? I won't be able to hear anything lower than a shout."

"I am agreeable to the plan," I said. And Jane began to make preparations for her wooer. She combed her hair smoothly on each side of her face, and put on her mother's old mohair cap. Then she added spectacles, and arrayed herself in an antiquated old dress. When she had finished her toilet she looked old maidish, I assure you. I laughed till I cried.

"It's he, I'll bet," cried Jane. "If it is, remember, I'm Maria, and can't hear you unless you talk very loud."

I went to the door and opened it. There stood Mr. Greene, I was sure. He had on his Sunday best evidently, and very uncomfortable he felt, judging from his actions. He was wiping his face with a huge red and yellow handkerchief.

"I'm Mr. Greene," he said, making a bow and introducing himself both at the same time. "I came to see Miss Maria Lawton. Be you her?"

"She's expecting you; she's in the parlor. Come in," I said, choking with laughter. "You'll have to talk a little louder than usual, for she's a little deaf."

"Deaf!" exclaimed Mr. Greene.—"Your aunt did not mention that."

By that time we were at the parlor door. Jane was all expectation and did look so comical that I thought I should laugh or die. But I managed to keep my face tolerably straight while I introduced them.

"Mariar, this is Mr. Greene?" shouted I, in a shrill key, putting my mouth close to her ear.

"A little louder," said she, and I shouted "Mr. Greene" an octave higher.

The poor man looked terribly disappointed. His fancy had not painted her in true colors, evidently.

"Ah, yes, Mr. Greene," said Jane, fairly beaming with delight. "How do you do?" and she shook the poor gentleman's hand energetically.

"Jane, get Mr. Greene a chair. Put it here by the side of mine, so that he can talk to me. I'm happy to see you sir. Aunt Philinda spoke of you in very complimentary terms, indeed."

"I'm glad of that," said Mr. Greene sinking into the chair.

"Eh? What did you say?" said Jane, turning her ear toward him. "A trifle louder, if you please."

Mr. Greene repeated his remark, while I retired to the window to laugh.

"A very fine day," he added.

"Good crop of hay? I'm glad of it," responded Jane. "I'm greatly interested in farm matters, Mr. Greene."

"I said the weather was fine," corrected Mr. Greene.

"When'll I be yours? Why, you're so sudden, Mr. Greene!" exclaimed Jane, pretending to blush. "I don't really feel as if I knew you yet. And yet—my—my heart tells me that you are an affinity," and then the wicked girl smiled most bewitchingly upon the uneasy man, who looked at me appealingly.

"I didn't say that!" he shouted. "I spoke about the weather."

"Yes, I hope we'll be happy together," said Jane, pensively. "O, Mr. Greene, if you knew how I have longed for the companionship of some heart like yours these many years," and there she proceeded to shed unseen tears in her handkerchief.

Mr. Greene was touched.

"She's awful affecshunate, ain't she?" he said to me. "I wish she wasn't so awful deaf. Can't anything be done for her?"

"O, you won't mind that, after a little while," said I, cheerfully. "We don't."

"I donno 'bout that," said Mr. Greene, doubtfully. "We couldn't never have no secrets, 'cause the neighbors u'd hear 'em 'fore she did, if I went to tellin' her any. Don't seem to me's if I ever see any body quite so deaf as she is."

"Talk to me," said Jane, who had dried her eyes. "Tell me all about your children. I know I shall take so much comfort with them. Bless their souls."

Thereupon Mr. Greene began his family history, away up in the higher octaves, and I got so nearly deafened at his shouting that I had to leave the room.

I sat down on the back steps and laughed for half an hour. When I stopped I could hear him shouting still, but I fancied he was getting hoarse.

Jane kept talking all the afternoon, I never saw any one quite so relieved as he was when I announced that supper was in readiness. Jane fastened herself upon him and accompanied him to the supper table.

"It's such an awful pity about her" said the poor man to me, regretfully.

"She's got a wonderful affecshunate way, an' she's awful anxious to be Mrs. Greene; but," and there Mr. Greene stopped, dubiously, "I know an old woman who was so deaf that when it thundered once she thought some one was knockin', an' hollered 'come in,' an' she didn't begin to be as deaf as she is, no, nor begin. I don't s'pose you'd be willin' to settle down on a farm, now, would you?" hopefully.

"O, I couldn't think of such a thing," I answered. "Mariar's the wife for a farmer. She takes such an interest in such matters."

"That's a fact," said Mr. Greene. "I dunno when I've seen a woman more interested than she is. I swan, I'd give twenty-five dollars if 'twould cure her, an' up our way we can get a good cow for that price."

Mr. Greene had got so used to talking to Jane, that he had forgotten I was not deaf, and shouted the last sentence at me.

"You say you are fond of rice? O, so am I," said Jane, delightedly." Jane, to me, "you put some on to cook after supper; we'll have some for breakfast."

"Don't put yourself out for me, shouted Mr. Greene.

"Wish you had some for tea did you say? I wish so too." Jane smiled another tender smile at her suitor, and sipped her tea slowly, smiling at him every time he looked at her.

"Where's your folks?" he asked suddenly, as if he had just thought of them.

"Yes, it's a good plan," answered Jane, nodding her head appreciatively.

"Geese always ought to wear pokes. If they don't they'll get into the garden and eat everything up."

"I asked after your father an' mother," shouted Mr. Greene, with awful emphasis, and turning red in the face with the exertion.

"Let me see," said Jane, thoughtfully. "Henry Bascom's brother? No, Mr. Greene, I don't think I ever knew him."

O dear, groaned Mr. Greene, "she gets deafer and deafer. I can't marry her. What if I wanted to say anything to her in the dead of the night, I'd have to wake the hull house up to make her hear. It's an awful pity I swan."

Jane kept him shouting at her all the evening, under the beaming effulgence of her smile. I never laughed so much in my life before.

He came into the kitchen next morning where I was busy getting breakfast.

"I'm so hoarse I can hardly talk out loud," he said mournfully. "I like her. She's smart naturally, an' seems willin', an' wants to get married as bad as any woman I ever see; but she's too deaf! I guess I won't stop to breakfast, 'cause it'll only make her set on havin' me, an' I can't make such a sacrifice for the sake of anybody. If you would only think favorable 'bout it, I'd stay.—Couldn't you now, s'pose?" with a very tender smile.

"Not for a minute," said I.

And seeing that their was no hope he took his departure.

Aunt Philinda evidently saw through the state of affairs as reported to her by Mr. Greene, for she hasn't been visiting since. I wonder if he's still single?

Writing Materials.

The earliest mode of writing was on bricks, tiles, oyster-shells, stone, ivory, bark, and leaves of trees; and from the latter the term "leaves of a book," is probably derived. Copper and brass plates were very early in use: and a bill of feoffment on copper, was some years since discovered in India, bearing date one hundred year B. C. Leather was also used, as well as wooden tablets. Then the papyrus came into vogue, and about the eighth century the papyrus was superseded by parchment. Paper, however, is of great antiquity, especially among the Chinese; but the first paper mill in England was built in 1588, by a German, at Dartford, in Kent. Nevertheless, it was nearly a century and a half,—namely, in 1713—before Thomas Watkins, a stationer, brought paper-making to anything like perfection. The first approach to a pen was the stylus, a kind of iron bodkin; but the Romans forbade its use on account of its frequent and even fatal use in quarrels, and then it was made of bone. Subsequently, reeds, pointed and split, like pens as in the present day, were used; and whatever may be said of our pens and paper on the score of convenience, it is clear from early records that the inks of the ancients were greatly superior to our own.

Remarkable Case of Longevity.

Everybody in this part of the county is familiar with the name and person of Goody Sallie Rook, who lives nearly opposite the farm of Deacon John Smith, on the old road to Rowley, though few perhaps, are aware of her great age.

This venerable creature was born on the 22d of February, 1732; and consequently at time of writing, is little more than one hundred and forty-four years old. A few days since one of our reporters paid her a visit, for the sake of interviewing her, with the following success:

After a ride of about two miles and a half over a rough, muddy road, he reached the house, or rather hut, of Goody Rook. It was a one-story affair, very dilapidated and antiquated, said to have been erected over two hundred years ago, by Allen Sell, one of the settlers of the town. Entering it with little ceremony, we found it deserted; but remembering that it was Monday, and consequently washing day, we passed through to the back yard, where we found the mistress of the house, "up to her arms" in clothes, which she was hanging out, as she takes in washing for several of the neighbors. In answer to our question as to whether she would be interviewed, she expressed her entire willingness and inviting us into the house, with her characteristic brevity told us to "drive on."

"Mrs. Rook," we asked, "Can you tell us your exact age?" "I can that;" she answered, "I was born on the twenty-second day of February, in the year of Our Lord seventeen hundred and thirty-two, and in the reign of good King George the Second, of blessed memory. I am therefore one hundred forty-four years, one month old, and in good bodily health and sound mind."

Expressing our surprise at this statement she went on.

"Yes sir, my memory is as perfect today as it was, one hundred forty-four years ago, and my health likewise. Perhaps you notice Sir, that I havn't a decayed tooth in my head?"

We confessed ourselves astonished at such a prodigy, and asked her how she occupied her time.

"Why sir, you see on Mondays I have my washing to do. Tuesday is ironing-day. Then on the rest of the week I occupy myself in fine needle-work, such as hemming handkerchiefs, working embroidery, or doing a little crotcheting; for you must know that my eyesight continues as perfect as it was the day of my birth."

We assused her that we were perfectly amazed, but she run on.

"And then my reading, you know; why, sir, are you aware that I have been a regular subscriber to the Herald for over eighty years? and I have also taken Harper's Bazar since its first issue. O, I was bred a lady, I assure you. You're a newspaper man; do you believe that fraud was used in the New Hampshire election?"

Startled by the question, we replied that we hardly believed the Granite State had sunk so low; but we were eager to hear how so aged a person as herself managed her affairs.

"O, as to that, I still retain some of the strength of my younger days," she replied. "I get along very well with the help of Sammy."

"Sammy?" we queried.

"Yes; he's my little grandson, just turned ninety. He calls around every day to split my kindlings and draw a pail of water. As for the rest I can manage very well myself. It was only last week that I got a barrel of apples into the cellar without any help whatever."

Prepared for anything, we then asked concerning her conjugal relations. This brought forth a sigh, and wiping a tear from the corner of her eye, replied.

"O, sir, I have buried nine of them. One after another they have dropped from my fond embrace, and have been laid side by side in my family lot, where I hope some day to rest myself. The last one, after serving through the late war from beginning to end, was cut off in his prime—only one hundred and two years old—at the great review in Washington; killed by a runaway mule. They're all gone—husbands, children; none left now but Sammy, my little grandson."

After her feelings were somewhat subdued, another half hour of pleasant conversation followed, during which she informed us that she had never been outside the limits of the town in her life; had never rode in a stage coach; had never seen a locomotive, though she had often heard them, as she lived within a mile of the railroad; had been the oldest inhabitant for fifty years; had never seen so remarkable a winter as this since 1751; had used rum and tobacco for over a hundred years; and she was not going to the Centennial. She also asked a variety of questions; whether Beecher was guilty; if the Springfield Republican had mentioned Charles Francis Adams for a day or two; whether Grant was a third term candidate; where Butler would turn up next; if crooked whiskey was all straight now, and whether the Eastern railroad had been managed honestly, showing a remarkable interest in every day affairs for so old a person. To all of which questions we returned correct and satisfactory answers.

We then took our leave, fully satisfied that her case was as remarkable as that of any old person of whom we had read for a month.

From the Cohoes (N. Y.) Eagle.

No Sleep for Fifteen Years.

Any person who has travelled along the highway between this city and West Troy, could not help noticing, or at least casting a casual glance at a neat, tidy little cottage situated a short distance below Cedar Grove, between the highway and the Erie Canal. The house in question is a model of neatness, as are all its surroundings; and well it may be, for the owner of it, Clarence Frisby, has not closed his eyes in sleep for the past fifteen years, and, consequently, had lots of time to make his house and garden look neat. Mr. Frisby is now thirty-eight years old; is hale and hearty for his age,

EATS WELL, WORKS HARD, BUT SLEEPS NONE.

The circumstances of his not sleeping any having reached the ears of an Eagle reporter, he directed his footsteps toward Mr. Frisby's residence, yesterday afternoon. The house is about fifty rods from the road, and surrounded with trees, some of which are evergreens, which make the surroundings of the house look cheerful, even at this inclement season. The reporter found Mr. Frisby in, and he gave the following narrative: "When a young man, I contracted lazy, indolent habits, and was scarcely able to do anything but sleep and eat. This habit continued, and I was growing worse day by day, until, finally, I could lie in bed all day and night, and would still want to remain longer. I began to get disgusted with myself, but all efforts to shake off my dormant habits were useless. My parents, brothers, and sisters got down on me, and I had no peace or comfort in the house; still I wanted to lounge, and would retire to the barn when I had no peace in the house, and would lie down there and go to sleep. Well, that kind of a life lasted until the 15th of June, 1861. I was sleeping in that room in there," said he, pointing to a bed in the sitting-room, "and felt something biting my left leg. I put down my hand to see what was the matter, when, oh horror!

THERE WAS A HUGE RAT

snapping at me, and a large black snake lying by my side. I roared with all my might, and jumped out of bed nearly scared to death, and then beheld my eldest brother and father crouching behind the head of the bed and laughing with all their might. My brother held a string in his hand, which was attached to the rat's body, and by that means kept it in the bed. I was then told by my father that he consulted a fortune-teller in Troy as to how I could be cured of my indolent habits, and was informed by the necromancer that a rat and snake put into my bed when asleep and left there until I awoke would have the desired effect. My father and brother resolved to try the experiment and did so, and the result was even better than their fondest expectations, for I never closed my eyes in sleep since that never-to-be-forgotten night." Our reporter then asked Mr. Frisby if he ever took laudanum to get him to sleep. He said he had tried everything. Laudanum got him into a kind of stupor, but not to sleep, and its effect wore off after a very short period of time. Other medicines, too, had a like effect. We asked him how it was, that his wonderful case was not more generally known, and he said he told it only to a very few persons, and that even some of his immediate neighbors were not aware of it. We asked him if he did not feel tired and weary for want of sleep, and he shook his head and said that when he was tired he lay down and rested, but never went to sleep. He said that for the first few years it seemed to him unpleasant to remain in the house at night, or lay beside any person in bed, as it made him feel bad to see other persons enjoy what he could not, but, said he, then, with a laugh: "I have got bravely over that." Mr. Frisby has been married for the past eight years, and is the happy father of two children. His wife smilingly said to our reporter that she was glad he did not sleep, as she was never called upon to light fires in the morning, something that the newspapers take a good deal of stock in lately. Mr. Frisby is of medium size, well proportioned, and seems to enjoy good health.

☞ There was once a Pennsylvania legislator who laid by $30,000 in one session. When he was asked how he managed this with a salary of $1000, he said that he saved it by doing without a hired girl.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1876.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

ROBERTSON'S BLOCK. We learn that the work on the large and handsome block to be erected by Joseph W. Robertson, Esq., in our village, will be commenced next week. The foundation walls were completed several weeks since, but were not quite satisfactory to the Selectmen, and there was some talk of moving them. The matter has been amicably settled, and the erection will now commence in earnest. Our citizens may expect to see in Quincy, in a few months, one of the finest blocks in old Norfolk County.

POSTPONED. The entertainment by the Quincy Reform Club, which was announced to take place this evening, has been postponed one week. A grand performance is expected at that time.

PRESERVED. Mr. John A. Newcomb, we think, has the oldest pills in town. They were made and prescribed by Dr. Phipps, some fifty years ago. Mr. Newcomb has preserved the pills carefully in a box, all these many years, having full faith that they would do but little injury to the system in that receptacle.

No doubt there is great virtue in these pills, for Mr. N. says, he has never been sick enough to take any medicine since they were prescribed for him.

A LARGE CHOIR. At the great jubilee next Friday evening, a large choir is desired,—100 strong. All good singers are invited, as will be seen by a notice in another column, to meet at the Lyceum room on Tuesday, for the purpose of organizing.

AUCTION. Joseph W. Lombard sells on Monday next, a large three story building, together with 33,000 feet of valuable land at West Quincy. It is owned by Mr. John McGowan, and known as the Belknap House. Being pleasantly located near the depot, it is worthy the attention of our readers.

Immediately after the sale of the house, the furniture in the building will be sold. Two o'clock is the hour of sale.

☞ Mr. W. R. Polsom has purchased the milk route recently sold by Mr. Charles H. Spear. The latter gentleman has been connected with the business, for the last twenty years, and now only withdraws from its arduous duties, to recuperate his feeble health.

UNITARIAN CHURCH. The Parish Committee of the First Church held a meeting Thursday evening to consider the matter of allowing the Unitarian Church to be opened next Friday evening, in connection with the Town Hall, for the reception of Dr. Henry A. Reynolds, the great temperance reformer. The Committee decided to submit it to the decision of the parishioners, at a meeting to be held after services to-morrow forenoon.

PURCHASED. The estate of Urbane Cudworth on Brackett Place, in this town, has been purchased by John H. Wheble, for about $2,200.

DOGS. All well regulated and respectable canines will be sure to call at the Town Clerk's office, about the 1st of May, and pay their taxes and get registered, and thus save their valuable heads from being used for targets.

☞ We are in receipt of several interesting articles, which we are obliged to lay aside this week for want of room.

TAKE NOTICE. The Yacht Jennie, will be sold at auction, at the residence of Mr. Peter B. Turner, on Tuesday next. It was built by its owner, and is in complete condition.

PERSONAL. At the rifle shooting at Spy Pond, on Tuesday last, by the members of the Massachusetts Rifle Association, Mr. Edward B. Souther, of this town, took the first prize in the second class. The prize was an elegant silver-mounted revolver, of the "Standard" pattern, valued at $25.

NEW RESTAURANT. The new refreshment saloon, in Mrs. Hayden's old quarters on Washington street, is such a place as is needed in town. There has been no place of late, where strangers could get a square meal, or hungry persons a nice lunch, without depending upon private families. Now Mr. Underwood and his neat-handed little wife, will be glad to serve all who come to a good dinner, a nice lunch or a cool ice cream, made as refreshing and nice as the best materials can turn out. Call and see them and make yourselves comfortable.

☞ The Republicans hold a caucus this evening, at the Town Hall, to elect delegates to attend the State and County conventions.

☞ Souther has them. They are beauties. Newest styles and perfectly elegant. Run almost alone, so nicely made and elegantly trimmed, and at such low prices, that all mothers are desirous of having a centennial baby, so that they can be presented with one of his nice carriages. If there is a lady in Quincy, who has not seen them, we advise her to step into Souther's periodical store, and buy a newspaper, and as she turns to go, take a look at his fancy four-wheeled carriages. My stars! if your eyes don't sparkle, it is because you never was, nor never expect to be a mother.

☞ Without doubt there will be many curious things on exhibition in Philadelphia, but none more curious and repulsive than a contribution sent from New York. A German, under the St. Nicholas Hotel, has established a tannery, where he makes human hide into leather. He has had a pair of boots made from this material wholly, except the soles, which he proposes sending to the Centennial.

Grand Jubilee.

There is to be a grand and exciting time in this place, on Friday evening next. Dr. Reynolds, that good man, who is doing such a noble work for his fellowmen, has promised to come here on that evening. The members of the Quincy Reform Club are so joyful, that they are making extensive arrangements to have a big time on that occasion. Immense gathering is anticipated on that evening,—probably the largest seen in Quincy for many years. A large delegation from Weymouth, Hingham, Braintree, Stoughton, Rockland and other places is expected. A line will be formed on Hancock street at five o'clock in the afternoon, and at six will proceed through some of the principal streets, accompanied by several bands of music. When the column starts it will be announced by the ringing of the bell on the Unitarian Church and firing of cannon.

If the weather is favorable and the crowd as large as expected, there will be speaking not only in the Town Hall, but in the Unitarian and Orthodox Churches.

George S. Phillips is marshal for the occasion.

☞ A Gunning float has been found as will be noticed by our advertising columns.

EASY CHAIRS. Do you want to buy a comfortable easy chair, in which you can recline without the least fear of getting a tumble, by the article of furniture falling to pieces? Friend Somers advertises in to-day's paper a long list of all varieties of chairs, which he is selling cheap, and which for durability, style and finish, cannot be excelled in Boston.

A FINE HALL. We were shown the present week the handsome hall, which has been leased and fitted up by St. Paul's Lodge, K. of P., of this town. It is a large and airy room, over the store of Mr. Frederick Hardwick, on Franklin street. The place has a very inviting and social look, and had we been of the right gender we think we should like to "jine" the order and enjoy the gatherings held in such pleasant quarters.

☞ Good pant makers are wanted by F. A. Spear.

MARBLE TABLET. A very beautiful piece of work, on which great artistic taste has been displayed, is to be seen at the Marble works of the McGrath Brothers, near the Quincy Adams depot. It is a tablet cut from a block of handsome Italian marble, and the design pertains to the military honors of one who served his country, in an honorable and faithful manner, during the late rebellion. Lying on the top of the tablet, as if placed there by careful hands, is a sword, and near the hilt is the corp badge, while across the sword, lays the sash, with the tassels cut in the most perfect manner, and surmounting the whole, is a neat looking soldier's cap; over the visor of which is the letters, G. A. R. 58. It is truly a most beautiful piece of carving, and reflects great credit on the sculptor, who could carve from a block of rough marble, such perfect representations.

This tablet is to be placed at the head of the grave of Gen. James L. Bates, in his burial lot in Weymouth.

DEDICATED. The new hall of St. Paul's Lodge, Knights of Pythias was appropriately dedicated to Pythian honors on Wednesday evening last. The officers of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts conducted the services which were solemn and impressive. At the conclusion of the ceremonies of dedication, speeches were made by some of the guests and also by members of St. Paul's Lodge. After this intellectual feast the Knights with their invited guests formed into line and marched to the lower hall, where an elegant repast, got up in D. Fred French's usual good style, was partaken of. Having done ample justice to the supper, dancing was next in order and the time was passed in a social and enjoyable manner.

SILVER MONEY. On Thursday last, the silver coin began its jingle once more in Boston, orders having been received at the Sub-Treasury to exchange fractional currency for silver, and some $7000 was paid out that day.

DISTRICT COURT. Edward Doyle, of Holbrook for being a common drunkard. Plead not guilty, but was found guilty and sentenced to the House of Correction for six months, from which sentence he appealed. In default of sureties he was committed to jail.

Peter Cain, Sam'l E. Burrell and Henry H. Burrell, all of Weymouth, for being drunk, were severally found guilty, and paid the usual fine and costs.

Geo. P. Shaw, of Braintree, for selling liquor. Plead not guilty, and on examination, the evidence not being sustained, complainant was discharged.

SENTENCED. Gov. Rice on Wednesday signed the warrants for the execution of Thomas W. Piper, convicted of the murder of Mabel Young, in the Warren Avenue Church tower, on the 23d of May, 1875, and Frost, convicted of the murder of his brother-in-law, Towle, at Petersham. Both murderers are to be hanged on the 26th of May, the former in Boston, and the latter at Worcester.

NEW WOOD WORKS. It will be seen by our advertising columns that there is a new shop in our midst for the manufacture of doors, window frames, brackets, &c. Mr. Geo. G. Souther has just completed his shop, near the cemetery, where he is prepared to do planing, sawing, turning, &c., at short notice.

Ladies can get their knives and scissors ground. Oh! what a blessing such a man is,—long has such a fellow been needed.

☞ The Republican State Convention is to be held in Boston on Wednesday next, for the choice of delegates to the National Convention at Cincinnati.

Mr. Moody, the revivalist, goes to Florida this week.

Shoe pegs are made of white birch, and cost this country $1,000,000 a year. Thus by statistics do we get at the bottom facts.

Stoughton Reform Club.

The "Good Samaritans" of Stoughton have been organized about three months and is one of the largest reform clubs in the State. The people are all wide awake in the glorious reform movement, and a noble work is being done.

On Fast day the Reading room of the Club was opened for the first time. It was handsomely decorated with evergreens and flowers, and on the walls were some beautiful and appropriate mottoes, while back of the stage was a fine picture, representing a wine-glass with a serpent coiled in it, and twined on the outside was an adder, ready to sting those who would partake of the contents. This picture was presented by the artist Mr. A. A. Lamb.

The tables are well supplied with books and papers, the gifts of friends of the Club, which makes the place very inviting, and it will be the means of keeping many young men out of the saloons, where the tempter stands ready to lure them to destruction.

Mr. E. W. Bliss, of Hartford, Conn., through whose influence the good work was principally brought about in this town, is meeting with grand success; being a very eloquent speaker, he pictures to his audiences the evils of intemperance in an impressive and vivid manner, and appeals to their sympathies for the poor unfortunates.

A grand mass meeting was held in Atwood's Hall, on Saturday evening.—It was the best meeting held in the town since the movement commenced. The audience manifested their appreciation of those who addressed them by rounds of applause. The music was furnished by a select choir of twelve voices, assisted by an orchestra composed of some of the best musicians in the State.

Rev. Mr. Chase, of Portsmouth, N. H., opened the meeting with prayer, and then followed addresses, among which may be mentioned those made by the following gentlemen:—

Mr. F. Stevenson said,—"Boys don't stay away any longer, come and sign the pledge, and I will pray for the Lord to bless and protect you in all your efforts to keep your vows."

Mr. W. Tisdale, said,—"He would try and be a man, and if I break down, pray for God to help me. I will persevere, and try to live a temperance life. As long as we stick we are the "boss club" of this or any other county in the state."

Mr. Bliss sang, "Pull for the shore," and urged all to "pull for the shore of total abstinence. He also read a fine poem.

Mr. Erskine said,—"There were angels in Heaven, rejoicing for all who had signed to-night. He was not ashamed to stand up and say he was a temperance man. Mr. Bliss had saved his father from filling a drunkard's grave, and we all say "God bless him."

Mr. Calvin Howland made one of his most effective speeches, he said among other things,—"Is there a heart here that does not rejoice when they think of the gloriong meeting on Fast day."—"What has caused this great reformation?" "The pledge and keeping it." "Stick to it and rum will take wings and vanish. Stick to it and nothing under Heaven can deter us from doing our duty to God and man."

Misses Mamie Phinney and Alice Foster sang the beautiful ballad "Has Father been here," in first-class style.

Dr. S. Tucker said,—"there's nothing of more importance in all your life than signing the pledge, if you keep it. You are then God's people."

Mr. Bliss then related his sad experiences and trials. He was sick from the effects of delirium tremens, from April 15th to August 1st, 1873. On his recovery he signed the pledge, and now he wanted his days to be long, that he might lead all with whom he came in contact to the ways of total abstinence, and to faith in our Saviour. He remembered with joy the night he signed the pledge and "dared to do right." Let angels rejoice and our hearts pour out the gratitude and joy when all men are redeemed from the passions of earth.—The meeting closed by singing the "Doxology."

Among the signers were Major Geo. W. Dutton, who held a major's commission all through our late war, and three employes of the Boston and Providence railroad.

Nearly one hundred names were added to the already long list, and Saturday evening, April 15th, 1876, will long be remembered by the "Good Samaritans" of Stoughton as one of the happiest of their lives."

Mr. E. W. Bliss, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church, Sunday, and preached a very instructive sermon, from John, 3-16.

On Sunday evening there was a union temperance meeting, of all the societies, held in the Congregational church. All classes flocked to this meeting. Rich and poor, high and low, ministers and laymen were all anxious to hear for themselves the doctrine of the temperance movement. Many came and finding no room to stand went away disappointed.

There was the most perfect stillness possible for a large audience. The Lord held the spirit of opposition in check (if there was any) while his servants enlarged upon the importance of the work. The meeting was conducted by Mr. E. W. Bliss, and earnest and striking remarks were made by Rev. Messrs. Wilson and Ballou of Stoughton; Chase of New Hampshire, and Smith of New York. Thus the good work goes on in the ancient town of Stoughton.

☞ Almost every German steamer arriving at New York brings many birds. It is estimated that during last year alone there were over 100,000 birds imported into the United States, of which number about 80,000 were German canaries. When the Deutschland went down, 1500 or 2000 canaries were among the saved. The price of birds range from $1 to as high as $200, being regulated entirely by the amount of training received or by the richness of plumage.

Mr. Robert S. Prescott of Hampton Falls, N. H., has an eight-day clock made in 1759, and it keeps correct time.

The exports of Boston since the first of January, are larger than were the exports for the corresponding period of last year.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Brevities.

The hyacinth and narcissus lift their faces in the warm sunshine, gay equipages roll along the avenue into the neighboring Prospect Park, a vast Paradise of beauty that reminds me of some English estates over the sea. Multitudes came yesterday afternoon it being Easter Sunday.

The floral display was very rich in the churches at Stewart's funeral. $15,000 were squandered in flowers. The same amount was raised yesterday at Brooklyn Tabernacle to pay a mortgage on the college building. The year closes next week Tuesday.

We have had 75 students enrolled, several of whom have had a European education and will make a mark in the world. One hails from a wealthy family in Quincy.

We all rejoice in the good work going on with you in the temperance cause.—God bless the Reform Club! The Ladies Union and the Brotherhood are busy here. They have many trophies to encourage.

Moody had his last Sunday service yesterday, at the Hippodrome. Expenses for the two months are near $40,000; and 10,000 are said to have begun a new life. Don Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, sat on the platform yesterday. He wishes to travel incognita and avoid shows.

Our Sunday Schools are to muster 40,000 strong at the May festival.

The 48 public schools have 56,287 sittings. Some are crowded, at least, the primary.

The N. Y. Witness has increased its circulation from 9000 to 20,000 daily, and 100,000 weekly. A new capital of $50,000 is to be raised, one-quarter of which is now conditionally subscribed.

A Good Book. We have examined with great interest a new work entitled "Fifty years History of the Temperance Cause," by J. E. Stebbins, Author of Moses and the Prophets, Christ and the Apostles, Glory of the Immortal life, &c. The book is replete with interest throughout, detailing in thrilling language the evils of Intemperance, showing it to be the fruitful source of poverty misery and crime.

It gives a history of the various means adopted for the suppression of this great curse,—through legislation and otherwise,—gives an account of Dr. Miner's efforts before the Massachusetts Legislature. It also gives a complete history of the different temperance organizations, Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, The Woman's movement, &c., &c. The work is profusely illustrated, printed on good paper and makes a very handsome volume.

We think the circulation of a work of this kind among the people will do a great deal of good, and we think the agent, Mr. Noyes, who is now taking orders in this place, will receive many names from the people who "Dare to do right."

Cleanse your Apartments. Johnston's patent dry sized Kalsomine and fresco paints are said to be excellent for whitening and decorating walls and ceilings. They are ready for immediate use, and can be mixed and applied by any one. George Hollister of this town is agent, and from whom any information desired will be furnished. See advertisement.

Ornamental. Mr. Patrick McDonnell has just placed two beautiful pieces of statuary on the lawn in front of his house on School street. They represent two noble lions and are splendid pieces of workmanship and are fine ornaments for his handsome estate.

Tableaux. The grand entertainment in aid of the poor of St. James' parish, which took place in the basement of St. James Church, Harrison Avenue, Boston, on Sunday and Monday evenings last, was very successful, which shows the interest the people of Boston take in an entertainment for the above purpose. The tableaux were beautiful, and the manner in which the young ladies performed their parts was surprising. One of the most notable features of the evening was the representation of Mary Queen of Virgins, with the following cast:—

Queen of Virgins, Miss Nellie Deasy. Virgins surrounding the Queen:—Misses Nellie Gallagher, Sexton, Breshnahan, Murphy, Hawley, Harrington, Burton, Shea, McNeil, Keating, Driscoll, Buckley, Welsh, Quhn, Riley, Tierny, Donovan, McCall, O'Donnell, Murphy, Donnally, O'Connor, Driscoll, McCarthy, Lucy, Chenery, Duggan.

The basement was crowded each evening, and the best of order was preserved, which added greatly to the comfort of the audience.

☞ Mayor Stokely tells the Philadelphia city government that he wants 500 extra policemen during the centennial and that it will cost $300,000 to pay them. He says that there will be fully 200,000 people around the centennial, grounds nearly all the time, including all the noted criminals of the country, and that the city of Philadelphia must watch the criminals and protect the honest visitors.

☞ There is promise of an abundant fruit crop in Western New York. The winter has neither been too cold nor too warm to do any material injury to either the fruit trees or the vines.

☞ The Old Colony railroad is being thoroughly equipped in anticipation of an extensive summer travel. Four boats will make the trip between Fall River and New York, commencing about the first of June, and it is the intention of the company to reduce fares, and sell excursion tickets to Philadelphia. Look out for a rush.

☞ A monster building, to be called the Atlas Hotel, containing 1,500 rooms, and intended to accommodate 3,000 persons a day, is to be erected in Philadelphia for the school teachers and societies of the different States, who will be entertained there at an expense of not more than $1.50 a day.

Dragging out Existence.

The nervous, weakly invalid does not enjoy life, but merely "drags out existence," as the phrase is. Unfitted for the active pursuits of life, and incapable of partaking of its pleasures, to which health alone can give a zest; disinclined to social intercourse, and a prey to melancholy, the valetudinarian is indeed an object of pity. Yet there is nothing in all this that cannot be remedied by that genial alterative tonic and nervine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which supplies deficient stamina, braces the nervous system, and overcomes those bodily irregularities to which nervous weakness is most frequently attributable. Diseases of the kidney and bladder, imperfect digestion and uterine troubles are fertile sources of debility. Their eradication, however, becomes a matter of certainty when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are systematically used for that purpose. The Bitters likewise annihilate and prevent fever and ague and other debilitating febrile complaints of a malarial nature. 1m

For the Patriot.

In Memoriam.

> "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness.
> "She looketh well the ways of her household, and eatest not the bread of idleness.
> "Her children arise up and call her blessed, her husband also and he praiseth her.
> "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.
> "Labor is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised.
> "Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates."

It is not usually advisable to lift the veil of private life so that the outside world may look thereon; it is a thing too often done, and generally when privacy would be the greater kindness; but there are times, when to break through the ordinary rule, might be eminently proper and useful, when it would be right, to allow another's "light to shine before men," for example's sake; and when could the example of a pure, quiet life of duty, be more required than at the present time, when women seem to think it unworthy, and beneath them, to do their duty in that station of life in the which it has pleased God to place them? So it comes that a few words about that good friend of the whole community, who has so recently been called from our midst,—Mrs. Lunt—may not be amiss.

Born and reared at a time when the word "lady" did not simply mean a person come to woman's estate, when "gentlewoman" was intended to express gentle-woman, she left her father's house of luxury, to occupy the onerous position of the wife of a country clergyman.—Most people must confess that a clergyman does not lie on a bed of roses; at least if the roses are there,—that the thorns are there also,—and that the wife of a clergyman, who takes any interest in her husband's duties, is likely to have a good many crumples in her rose leaves—but those who knew Mrs. Lunt at that early part of her life remember how she then bore herself. A young wife, taken from all her kind, in a strange place, amidst strange faces; with the constantly increasing cares of a rising family, with means not too ample,—with very little assistance, taking care of her own, taking care of others,—no more careful loving mother could have been, no kinder or more judicious friend to those to whom—for the time being—she took the place of mother, could have been, and to her husband, with all his yearnings for the impossible—a perfect life for himself and others—with all his shrinking sensitiveness of a poet, she was the friend, the comforter. "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, she will do him good and not evil all the days of his life."

Never idle, never idle, mind busy, and hands busy, with a household always in order, everything going on apparently without effort, but we all know that the well arranging of a large household is anything but easy, many people who might rule a state, would confess that it is more difficult to keep our household in good order. The more one knows of such a life as Mrs. Lunt's the more one marvels, she was really and truly a wonderful woman, indeed "her price is far above rubies," and with all this labor of hands, of heart, of nerve, of brain, in her own home. see how much she did for those outside, when were the poor, or the sick, or the troubled ever neglected by her; a woman always cheerful braving troubles, and no common ones, with quiet resignation, repining not, but striving to do her duty always, and when the grief of her life came upon her, still trying to do her best for the parish, as her husband would have ordered her too, keeping herself and her children in the position in which she had been born, never permitting her own sorrow to allow her to neglect any of life's duties.

Mrs. Lunt was not an angel, if so, the force of the example would be lost, it is to show what a woman, burdened with the foibles of poor humanity, with many womanly weaknesses, can do, now without seeking applause, without ostentation, without in any way placing herself before the public, by simply performing the duties which God has given her to do, can make her name lovely, and give perfect and abiding place in the hearts of all her fellow townsmen of whatever creed; can anything be grander than that? Can any monument that may be raised to her memory, tell more than the words one has heard from so many lips since she has been taken from us. "Ah! there's many an one will miss her." Is it not true? Look where one may, can we find any woman, who could have done better, or so well, in the station of life in which God placed her, as did our most excellent friend?

Of the loss to her family one cannot (even were it right so to do,) speak because no one outside her circle, can properly estimate it, the ever loving mother and friend, the ready helper, the tender peacemaker, the wise counsellor, the merciful judge,—verily "the heart knoweth its own bitterness, and the stranger intermeddleth not with its joy."

We are at the best but poor, weak, erring mortals, but if one were only to try to make one's life as useful as unselfish as Mrs. Lunt's has been, how much good might be done, and who can say that her life was dull or dry. The woman who is always honorably employed, can never be dull. The woman who forgets her rest and her sorrows, in entering head, heart and soul, into the joys and sorrows of others, can never find life dry. Turning from the 10th to the 31st verse of the last chapter of Proverbs, seems to describe Mrs. Lunt's whole life. Would that there were more like her, but she, whom we have lost rests from her labors, and "her works do follow her."

From W. R. Chisholm, M. D., of New Bedford.

"I have employed the Peruvian Syrup successfully in cases of dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa, nervous debility, neuralgia, erysipelas, boils and diseases of the skin; also chlorosis, leucorrhea, prolapsus uteri, and in female complaints generally. As an alterative tonic, the syrup ought to be used by clergymen, editors, cashiers, clerks, lawyers, and others who use their brains more than their muscles; as well as operatives, printers, tailors, shoemakers, seamstresses, and all those whose occupation confines them in ill-ventilated and overheated rooms, who are liable to suffer more or less from nervous debility."

Good Evidence! Mrs. Henry Swanger, Tuckahoe, N. J., says she was thoroughly cured of Bronchitis by using three bottles of Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial! Coughs, Colds, Pneumonia, Spitting Blood, Sore Throat and Lungs, Catarrh and Consumption, are relieved by it immediately.

Mr. Donahoe's Failure. In a personal statement regarding the cause of the failure of Mr. Patrick Donahoe, editor of the Boston Pilot, he says that before the great fire he was worth at least half a million dollars, and his income was at least $40,000 a year. He could have survived the fire but for unfortunate endorsements, amounting to $200,000. The depreciation in property did much to complete his ruin. As for the savings deposits, he regretted deeply ever taking them. He did it expecting to bridge over his financial difficulties, and will in time pay every dollar, and he says he will devote the balance of his life to repairing the injury until all is paid up. After he retired from the bank many came to him and insisted that he should take their savings and be their banker. It was, he says, no scheme of his to obtain their money to help him out of his difficulties. He took it in good faith, paid them interest, and intended, like an honest man, to pay them back dollar for dollar at their call. Disaster overwhelmed him in spite of every effort to avert it. He made no provision before the crash came for himself or his family. Every dollar is in the hands of his creditors, and he is to-day as poor as the poorest. The mortgage on the house in which he has been living has been foreclosed, and he and his family are now looking for quarters in town.

☞ That famous Old Corner Store at 25 Dock Square, still stands where it has for the past 200 years, and Richards still lives and having disposed of all his damaged goods, has just now got in a new stock of Spring Overcoats which in style, workmanship and quality, are equal to custom work and what is better and of more importance these hard times, his prices are so reasonable everybody can afford to have one.

Nothing is so insiduous as a cold or a cough. Poison does not make a swifter progress in the system. Use promptly the only sure antidote, Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

Wonderful Success! It is reported that Boschee's German Syrup has, since its introduction in the United States reached the immense sale of 40,000 dozen per year. Over 6,000 Druggists have ordered this Medicine direct from the Factory, at Woodbury, N. J., and not one have reported a single failure, but every letter speaks of its astonishing success in curing severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Breast, Consumption, or any disease of Throat and Lung. We advise any person that has any predisposition to weak Lungs, to go to their Druggist, John H. Veazie, and get this Medicine, or inquire about it. Regular size, 75 cents; sample bottle, 10 cents. Two doses will relieve any case. Don't neglect your cough.

Lyon's Kathairon prevents the Hair from falling out or turning gray, renews its growth, and gives strength and vigor. It is delightfully perfumed, and makes a splendid dressing. It is the cheapest and most desirable Hair Tonic ever produced. Used by the elite. Price only 50 cents.

Marriages.

In South Braintree, April 19th, by the Rev. A. H. Johnson, Mr. W. Oscar Carver of Quincy, to Miss Ada L. Robbins of the former place.

Spring time has come, and the Robbins have commenced to warble their morning songs. There is a law in the statute book, forbidding the cruel sportsman from shooting the birds about this time; but Cupid, the sly rogue, not having any fear of the law, shot an arrow into the heart of a young Robbin and the brave Oscar caught the poor fluttering bird and took it to his home, where we hope that peace, happiness and prosperity may ever abide.

In Boston, April 18th, by Rev. W. G. Richardson, Mr. Joseph Johnson to Miss Clarissa M. Coach, both of Quincy.

Deaths.

In this town, April 20th, Mrs. Catherine, wife of Mr. Patrick Pierce, aged 58 years.

April 14th, Mrs. Rebecca B., widow of the late Thomas Kennon, aged 83 years and 3 months.

April 15th, Henrietta H., daughter of Mr. Francis C. Jr., and Mrs. Parnell F. Ellis, aged 2 years, 8 months and 12 days.

April 17th, Elmer Henry, son of Mr. Henry and Mrs. Annette A. Chubbuck, aged 12 years and 9 days.

He was the sunshine of his home,
His parents hope and pride,
To them he was a guiding star,
Upon life's ocean wide.

But now the shades of Death have fallen,
Upon his marble brow,
And he whom once we knew and loved,
We can but weep for now.

But let us check the bitter grief,
Though now our eyes are dim,
Tears cannot bring him back to us,—
We would not weep for him.

Then weep not for your darling boy,
He has but gone before,
To meet you in that brighter land,
Where we shall part no more.

JOHNSTON'S PATENT
Dry Sized Kalsomine
READY FOR USE.
Manufactured at
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

We invite your attention to our Patent Dry Sized Kalsomine and Fresco Paints, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

First.—Their cheapness.

Second.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

Third.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

Fourth.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

Fifth.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale from the wall.

Sixth.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

Seventh.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

Eighth.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

For the Patriot.

Spring.

Reign of terror now is ended—
  Winter lays his sceptre down;
While the poor have ceased to tremble,
  And to dread his cruel frown;
For his icy heart is melted
  By the tears of gentle Spring;
Violets peep up through the mosses
  As the birds begin to sing.

Twittering gaily in the tree-tops,
  Carolling at early morn
With a gush of joyous music
  At the coming of the dawn;
As if praises to their Maker,
  Happiness and love, combined,
Burst forth in melodious warbling,
  Could no longer be confined.

Earth has blossomed; and in gladness
  That the darkness has gone by,
Myriads of tiny flowerets
  Smile beneath the azure sky.
Thus life's year will have its seasons,
  You will surely find it true
That if God has sent the winter,
  He will send the spring-time too.

If his angel comes in Winter
  With his summons sent in love,
You will know the glorious spring-time
  Where no Winter comes above.
As He careth for the birdlings,
  So his love without alloy
Then will fill your soul with rapture,
  And your heart o'erflow with joy.

Plant a Centennial Tree.

A very excellent movement is on foot in Connecticut, under the direction of the Secretary of the Board of Education, to induce the people to plant Centennial trees this spring. Everybody who owns a plot of ground favorable for the purpose, or who lives by a country road, is called upon to plant at least one tree of a species adapted to beautify the landscape, such as an elm, oak, maple, ash or walnut. Prizes have been offered in some cases to induce school children and others to plant trees in the vicinity of their own homes or on the public grounds and highways. If a little enthusiasm can be awakened on this subject, a work may be done this Centennial year which will make our towns and villages grow in beauty throughout the coming century.

There is nothing more ennobling than the consciousness of doing something for future generations. But it will not be a work of self-sacrifice by any means. There will be a perennial pleasure in watching the growth of these trees, and long before the youthful generation of the present time has passed away they will have attained sufficient size to add greatly to the attractiveness of the places in which they are planted. Suppose all our country roads, the grounds about school-houses and public buildings, the demesne of private dwelling and all public squares were to be liberally planted with ornamental and useful trees this year, what would be the effect produced in fifty years from this time? How greatly would the beauty and attractiveness of our cities and towns be enhanced! The whole State might be almost transformed into a beautiful park, and the eye of the traveller would everywhere be greeted with pictures of verdurous loveliness.

And the value of the work would not be merely esthetic or sentimental. There is a practical utility in trees out of all proportion to the cost of planting and fostering them. Not only have they an immediate value for use and ornament, adding to the value of property on which they stand, but the growth and prosperity of a town depends largely on the attractions which it presents as a place in which to live. Many of our most flourishing towns owe the rapidity of their developement to the fact that they had a picturesque and inviting appearance, which induced people to select them as the place for their labor and enterprise.—Boston Globe.

Grafting Hints.

About this time, as the old almanacs have it, look out for hints on grafting; but with all the good advice and plain directions given by the various papers, there are yet many people who declare they never have any luck in performing this operation. I once knew an old grafter who declared "a scion must be hungry before it will grow," which in plain language simply means that a scion laid away for a short time is surer to grow than one cut fresh from the tree. This theory is not confined to the old grafter alluded to above, but has received credence among many skilled horticulturists of the present time. Certain it is that a scion like a cutting is not injured by being cut from the tree prematurely, and laid away with proper care until needed. Some prefer grafting very early; I do not. Just previous to actual growth is the time I select for performing the operation, but I like my scions cut early and preserved in damp soil or moss, the latter preferred. Be careful to have the bark on the scion and stock to fit accurately, tie tightly, wax thoroughly, and there is very little risk about the work.—Correspondence N. Y. Tribune.

Anecdotes.

"Your dress," said a husband to his fashionable wife, "will never please the men."

"I don't dress to please men," was the reply, "but to worry other women."

An inebriated Irishman, on being kindly questioned in a very narrow lane across which he was reeling as to the length of the road he had travelled, replied:—

"Faith, it's not so much the length of it as the breadth of it that tired me."

"Why, Mary Ann, what in the world are you doing with the scissors?"

"Shure yez told me to scallop the oysters."

Miss Rose—"Goodness! the fire is out. I thought it was very cold."

Beau—"Shall I get my overcoat and put it on you?"

Miss Rose—"Oh, no; but (glancing at the clock) hadn't you better put it on yourself?"

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

One Hundred Years Ago.

The following poetry was written by F. M. Adlington, Esq., of Weymouth, one year ago, and sent by him to the Selectmen of Lexington on the occasion of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the battle at that place:

'Twas here one hundred years ago,
Defiant of the British crown,
Our Fathers met a tyrant foe,
And bravely threw the gauntlet down.

We'll plant fresh laurels o'er their graves,
Our love and gratitude to show,
O'er those who would not live as slaves—
Tho' now one hundred years ago.

Time cannot dim the glowing page
That hails them Fathers of the free;
Esteemed by all in every age,
The Pioneers of Liberty!

Let the loud cannon's voice proclaim
That here the Sires of Freedom fought,
And won for them a deathless name,
To us a priceless lesson taught.

To guard the prize their courage won,
With vigilance that never tires,
And hand it down from sire to son,
Unstained till life's last spark expires.

Again these consecrated grounds
Re-echoes with the Patriot's cry;
Again the trump of Freedom sounds,
To greet the Sons of Liberty.

Columbia bows her stately head
To plant fresh laurels here to grow,
O'er those who for our country bled—
Tho' now an hundred years ago.

Lift up our country's honored sign,
The glorious Flag of Washington,
And round it fadeless laurels twine
From Concord and from Lexington.

CENTENNIAL CAKE. One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, two eggs, three cups of flour, one cup of milk, one teaspoon of soda, two of cream tartar; flavor with almond.

☞ A doctor's wife once attempted to move her husband by tears. "Ann," he said, "tears are useless. I have analyzed them. They contain a little phosphate of lime, some chlorate of sodium, and that's all."

☞ "What plan," said one actor to another, "shall I adopt to fill the house at my benefit?" "Invite your creditors," was the surly reply.

☞ Language was given to us that we might say pleasant things to each other. —Bovee.

☞ A Louisville man complained of marble tablecloths at one of the restaurants. He said he didn't like to wipe his mouth with a tombstone in the absence of a napkin.

☞ A man was indignantly exclaiming that his knife had been stolen, when at last one of his neighbors, whose garden had been robbed a short time previous, said to him, "I found your knife among my cabbages; how came it there?" The man was struck dumb.

Miscellany.

The Story of Damon and Pythias.

During the period when the fair land of Sicily writhed under the iron grasp of tyranny, there lived under the serene skies of that sunny clime, two friends, whose hearts are woven into a bond of friendship, such as is severed not even by the hand of death. From childhood's days they revelled in each other's smiles; joy and sorrow alike ever found a response in these loving hearts; the smile and the tear sparkled and shadowed the face of the one only to be kindly reflected in the looks of the other. Thus far no billow had disturbed the tranquil surface of their souls. Yet anon the day was to dawn, and ere long, when the potency of those bonds of love were to be tested.

Syracuse, their native city, once so fair and flourishing, was now overshadowed by dark and threatening clouds;—the inhabitants groaned beneath the galling yoke of despotism, which threatened their very existence. They strove by open revolt to wreak a vowed vengeance upon the author of their misery; but all their efforts were baffled. Their power was but a trifle in comparison to the numerous forces which Dionysius had stationed in every part of the city. The avarice and brutality of the soldiers, like to that of their base monarch, were only satiated by the robbery and murder of the rich and powerful, the innocent and guilty. Syracuse was daily a scene of cold bloodshed and inhuman cruelties. No part of the city could you traverse without encountering in your path some terrible scenes, which would both send a thrill of horror through your frame, and excite a feeling of indignation in your breast. The palmy days of Syracuse were gone; the sun shone no more with its bright rays upon the beautiful land of Sicily. It had itself veiled the bright arbiter of day with its dark deeds and unpunished crimes. The happy days of that fair land seemed to have flowed on silently and gently into the stream of the past: for now its sullied glory was fading and departed. Every tone of happiness was hushed, and every scene of pleasure veiled in the dark cloud of rebellion.—Such was Sicily's state, and such the times—times of riot and bloodshed—when our tale of friendship opens. Now the time that was to tell the truthfulness of their love had come.

One dark and weary day, while Damon was strolling silently and pensively through the lovely streets of Syracuse, musing sadly upon the scenes of devastation and ruin thrown before his eyes, his attention was suddenly arrested by the sound of many footsteps which were echoing loudly and distinctly through the silent city. At a distance he espied a band of ruffian soldiers, who, with threats and blows, were dragging to prison a man fettered in chains. The snows of eighty winters had whitened the locks of the culprit. The sight was pitiful in the extreme; a tear of compassion welled forth from the tender but noble heart of Damon, and kindled a flame of indignation in his breast. Such inhuman cruelties he could not brook without giving vent to his feelings of disgust. Soon from his lips fell words which would have been far from agreeable to the ears of the tyrant had he been within hearing.

His accomplices, however, were ever at hand; one of the ruffians, having overheard the words of indignation that were levelled against the tyrant, instantly hastened to the palace, and gained an interview with Dionysius. The soldier described the scene, and reported the censures the unwary youth had thrown upon his majesty. The anger of the despot was aroused; at the head of a band of soldiers the ruffian was commanded to drag from his home and bring before the tribunal of justice the wretch who had dared to insult his lord and king.

During this interval Damon had already left the city, and was wending his way homeward. Sadly and silently as he trudged on, the happy days of Syracuse, each in their turn, arose before his mind. Sadness crept over his heart as he thought of the glory of the famed city; as he dwelt on the low degree of degradation to which she had fallen.

On the following day, while the dying rays of the sun were yet lingering in the horizon, a band of soldiers were seen wending their way toward the home of Damon. At a distance Damon perceived them, and conjectured their intention. Drawing near the threshold of the humble cottage, the base commander summoned him to surrender. Damon, without hesitation, submitted to his fate, and tore himself from the clasped arms of his aged parents. The scene was heart-rending, but softened not the callous hearts of the ruffians. Fettered in chains, he was hurried away at a rapid pace to the tyrant's presence. Whilst his abode yet remained in sight, he would turn ever and anon his tearful eyes, to take a last glance at the spot that held sacred so many endearing scenes, and that, alas, was so soon to be lost to his gaze forever. Now Damon,

"Take a last look at the beautiful moon,
For the prison door shall close on you soon;
Take a last look at her dim lovely light
Which falls on the bleak mountain-side this night."

He had neared the city, and was already within a league of the tyrant's palace, when at a distance he saw his friend Pythias approaching him at a rapid pace. At the sight of Damon, bound in chains, he stood aghast, like some statue, gazing in mute astonishment at his beloved friend. The soldiers, in the act of thrusting him aside, brought him to a knowledge of his situation. One violent exertion, and he was by the side of Damon, with his arms locked around the neck of his friend.

"Damon," he cried aloud, "Damon, my truest and most-loving friend, has the sad day of our departure already dawned? Must at last the bond of love be cruelly severed? Damon, I can live no more without thee; life would be a weary burden to me, and my heart would droop like the tender flower under the rays of a parching sun, beneath trials and afflictions which I would be unable to brook, without the sweet and consoling words which ever, like a refreshing balm, would heal the wounds of my down-cast soul. No, Damon, I cannot leave thee; I will share thy fate."

"Speak not thus," said Damon, "if you would lighten the burden which threatens to crush me beneath its weight. As a last request I crave this boon from you. That you provide for my aged parents, and by your love and kindness fill the vacancy in their hearts caused by a lost son. Thus you will manifest the deep love you cherished for me whilst on earth."

These were assented to by the tears of Pythias. Damon was then torn from the arms of his friend by the soldiers who were staring in silent awe at this sacred scene of love.

Pythias wended his way homeward, musing upon the sad misfortune which had befallen his friend. Slowly he passed on, heedless of those passing to and fro, when, with a sudden start, he exclaimed: "Go I will to the tyrant, and strive to obtain for him a few days' respite, so that while I am fettered he may make his escape."

Acting on the spur of the moment, he soon neared the gates of the gorgeous palace. He craved an audience with the king; but only after many earnest importunities was the request granted. Escorted by several guards, he is ushered into the apartments of the tyrant. On entering, his eyes fell upon the haughty monarch, arrayed in royal magnificence, and seated upon his throne, surrounded by a body guard of most fierce-looking soldiers. A scornful and angry look was written upon his countenance. Still this did not in the least disconcert our hero. With a bold step he advanced to the foot of the throne, and in a firm voice addressed the monarch thus:—

"My liege lord and king, this day has been to me a time of sadness and pain, both because I have lost the friend of my heart, and because I have seen your royal majesty offended in the person of that same friend. I come not to crave his pardon, for no such hope does my breast cherish; but this boon—that I may remain a hostage in his place for the space of three days, while he hastens to provide for his aged parents."

"Wretch," cried the craven despot, "I concede the request. Three brief suns will I delay the death; but remember, rash youth, if at the allotted time thy friend has not returned, thou diest in his stead."

Pythias, with a lightened heart, rushed to the prison; after locking his friend in one loving and farewell embrace, he entreated Damon to fly and make his escape. But such conduct, in the eyes of Damon, was too base to gain access to his soul. Pythias' entreaties were at first met with a positive refusal; but Damon finally yielded to his prayers, though not until he had vowed his return at the end of three days.

Again Damon was free, and soon lost to sight among the crags and peaks of the hills which proudly overlook the city of Syracuse. Onward with a rapid pace he sped to his mountain home. The first of those three days marked by the tyrant was upon its decline; the sun had already set in the distant horizon, amid the many brilliant hues which were scattered in the western sky, when he saw in the distance his cherished home. At that moment he paused, and in spite of his bitter sorrow, fond recollections of the days of his childhood flashed across his mind; a tear dimmed his sight, but he quickly dashed it away, and with a sad weary heart, but with a firm step, he advanced toward the cottage.

Must I now paint the scene of poverty and wretchedness that met his gaze?—There lies his father, calm and serene, in the everlasting sleep of death; there are the frantic wife and weeping children gathered around the dead. Oh! what a scene, and what a change, from happiness the brightest, to misery the most abject? Another wound it made in the heart of Damon, but he forgot his own sorrows in those of the bereaved family.

After paying the last duties to his father, and leaving words of consolation and encouragement in his unfortunate home, he bade them a last farewell. On the eve of the second day, Damon was upon the road leading to the city. The dark masses of clouds that hung on the horizon denoted an approaching storm. Still this evil foreboding did not deter Damon from pursuing his journey. Rapidly he advanced, but soon the storm burst forth in its greatest fury. Whilst the rain fell in torrents, and rushed in streams down the precipices with an incredible velocity, sweeping stones and rock in his headlong career, the terrible thunder crashing overhead made the surrounding mountains reverberate with its peals. The lightning, as though heaven would prove her rights, flashed and rent the sky, dazzling the eyes of the lost Damon. Suddenly the heavens opened again, and shivered an oak within ten feet of our hero. It was an awful night, but Damon, by the merciful hand of Providence, passed uninjured through all its dangers.

Next day the sun shone out with cloudless radiance; the storm had ceased, and there was hardly a ruffle on the face of nature. Damon, after wandering almost the whole day in the mountains, early in the evening found his road. Soon he espied, as he neared the city, the gilded domes and spires of Syracuse reddened in the evening sun. These revived once more his hopes, and redoubling his speed, he quickly reached the environs of the city. The people cried aloud:—

"Too late, too late; the life of Pythias is already forfeited! Fly and save your own!"

Damon heeded not their warning, but madly rushed on, until he arrived at the place of execution. Whilst the executioner is about to let fall the uplifted axe upon the neck of Pythias, Damon cries aloud:—

"Hold! hold!" and a dead silence seizes the hearts of the people. Anon, his arms are around the neck of Pythias; one farewell kiss, and he bids him depart. But Pythias cried aloud:—

"I'll die with you."

The people, moved at the spectacle, shouted out, "Pardon to the youth!—Pardon to the youth!"

The heart of the king was touched at this trying scene. "Pardon," said he, "I vouchsafe to thee with all my soul; but now I have a favor to crave from both of you—that the bond of love may bind three."

We will imagine that it did bind three; but never did it in reality. Thus was the cold heart of that fierce monarch softened at the sight of true love. Peace again reigned, and Syracuse enjoyed many years of happiness during the reign of Dionysius.

How beautiful an example do the characters of Damon and Pythias offer to us. How brilliantly does the gem of friendship beam forth from their lofty souls. How manfully were the trials and troubles, the pains and anguish which naturally cling to our existence in this world shared by these two creatures. What emotions must have stirred the soul of the spectator witnessing this true friendship, braving death ere its tie of love should be broken. Friendship like this, sparkling forth from the clay of earth, should always remind us of something that belongs to another world; of the love of One who left his celestial home to lay down his life to redeem us, and to obtain for us the unfading crown of immortal glory.

The Children's Dictionary.

A writer in the School-day Magazine has gathered together the following dictionary words as defined by certain small people here and there:

Back-biter—a flea.
Fins—A fish's wings.
Ice—Water that stayed out in the cold and went to sleep.
Nest egg—The egg the old hen measures by to make new ones.
Pig—A hog's little boy.
Snoring—Letting off sleep.
Snow—Rain all popped out white.
Stars—The moon's eggs.
Trunk (of an elephant)—His front tail.
Wakefulness—Eyes all the time coming unbuttoned.
Salt—What makes taters taste bad when you don't put any on.

A Hearty Appetite.

"Be careful what you eat," say our health advisers. This is all right enough, for the animal diet in warm weather heats the blood, tends to headaches, and is generally unwholesome, unless sparingly used. On the other hand, fresh vegetables, berries, fruit and bread are cooling, corrective, and what the palate most craves. Do not be afraid to go without meat for a month or so, and, if you like, live on a purely vegetable regimen. You will lose no more strength than is common to the time, and you will not suffer from protracted heat, as when dining on the regulation roast. Many persons regard a hearty desire for food as something unrefined, indelicate, and to be constantly discouraged. But this is all nonsense. It is just as necessary for the man who works only with his brain to eat beef and mutton as for the man who labors solely with his hands. The stomach and the brain are twins; the former being the elder, and having prior right to care. Let that be well provided for, and it will sustain its brother. The people who strive to check a wholesome and natural appetite, are the people who regard dinner merely as a feed, and not the centre of an agreeable social custom, and as the domestic event of the day. We are sorry for them, as they must regard eating as a prosaic duty, obligatory on them because they have a bias in favor of living. We all know that we must eat to live; by no means live to eat, simply because we enjoy what we eat. We are not gormands because we relish chops, nor are we invalids because we want strawberries. A good appetite is a good thing, but not if it is to be worried by urging or neglect.

☞ Always open to conviction—a thief.

Best Paint Material.

Any material that will not exclude water sufficiently to prevent the expansion of the grain of the timber or the oxidation of metallic substances, must be comparatively worthless for paint. Linseed oil possesses the property of drying when spread on a surface and forming a tenacious covering, impervious to water. Spirits of turpentine, benzene, Benzole, and certain kinds of lubricating oil, all of which are frequently used in preparing paint, will not form a covering sufficiently [illegible] to resist the action of paint that is made by employing these volatile materials will be found comparatively worthless for outside work.

Attempted Suicide by a Rooster.

Mr. Thomas J. Roach, owner of a chicken ranch near San Jose, Cal., tells a story of an attempt at suicide on the part of one of his fowls. The story is to this effect:

"He purchased several months ago a lot of fine cropple-crowns, which he kept aloof from his less aristocratic fowls, in a small yard. The chief of this family was a large blackbird of an exceedingly haughty disposition. He was monarch of all he surveyed till a week since, when Mr. Roach procured a white bird of the same breed and turned it into the yard among the cropple-crowns. The two male birds immediately joined battle, which after a gallant display of courage by both contestants, resulted in the defeat of the black cropple. The unsuccessful bird took its defeat sorely to heart. In fact, life was no longer worth possessing since honor had departed. The bird was seen trying to kill itself with its own spurs. Not succeeding it tried to jam its head under a gate, but also failed. It then flew upon a barrel half filled with rain-water, and after carefully surveying the situation plunged into the cask. Mr. Roach ran out, and found the bird with its wings closely folded to its side, its beak open and apparently endeavoring to repress the natural struggles at self-perservation. It was speedily rescued from its dangerous position, and being beyond recovery was dispatched with an axe to fit it for the table."

Saturday Night.

How many a kiss has been given, how many a curse, how many a caress, how many a kind word, how many a promise has been broken, how many a heart has been wrecked, how many a loved one has been lowered into the narrow chamber, how many a babe has gone from earth to heaven, how many a crib or cradle stands silent now, which last Saturday held the rarest of all treasures of the heart. A week is a life. A week is a history. A week marks events of sorrow or gladness of which people never have heard. Go home to the family, man of business! Go home, you heart-erring wanderer! Go home to cheer that awaits you, wronged waif of life's breakers!—Go home to those you love, man of toil, and give one night to the joys and comforts fast flying by! Leave your books with complex figures, your dirty workshop, your busy store. Rest with those you love; for God only knows what the next Saturday night will bring you.—Forget the world of care and the battle of life, which have furrowed the week. Draw close around the family hearth.—Go home to those you love, and as you bask in the loved presence and meet to return the loved embrace of your heart's pets, strive to be a better man, and to bless God for giving his weary children so dear a stepping stone in the river to the Eternal, as Saturday night.

No Discount.

A sharp-nosed woman with iron-gray hair called at the Grand Trunk ticket office yesterday, and after buying one ticket to Port Huron she asked the agent:

"Say, can't a fool ride for half-fare?"

"How old is he?" asked the agent.

"Fifty-three."

"No, madam, you will have to buy a full ticket."

"And you won't throw off?"

"Couldn't, madam."

She went around to the other side of the office where her husband sat on a trunk, and reaching out for more money said:—

"Stop looking cross-eyed, and give me the cash, for we can't discount a cent's worth."

The Effects of Advertising.

The man who advertises his business, if what he offers for sale is honestly what he represents it to be, or what it ought to be, is constantly assisted in his business by those who have been attracted to him and tested him. A buyer has read his advertisement, and gone to his store, or workshop, or warehouse, whatever it may be, and tried what was recommended. If it has satisfied him he is pleased and recommends it to his neighbor, who is likely to go to the same place and tell his neighbors in turn.—And thus little rills started by his advertisement flow in upon him from all sides, and the current of his business grows stronger and wider and more rapid, and he prospers and grows rich, all because to strict attention in business he added judicious advertising. But for this he might have lingered on in the community for years and his business would scarcely have been heard of.—Advertiser's Gazette.

East Weymouth Reform Club, 180 men, Martin Harvey, President. Accompanied by the Weymouth Band. Capt. Garey, Marshal.

Temple of Honor from East Weymouth, 100 men; William Rice, President. Geo. French, Marshal.

South Weymouth Reform Club, 30 men; Alvah Raymond, Jr., President; accompanied by the Simpson Drum Corp.

Stoughton Reform Club, 400 ladies and gentlemen; George H. Goward, President; accompanied by Britten's Cornet Band of Stoughton.

Quincy Reform Club, 325 men; Samuel T. Allen, President; accompanied by the Belknap Brass Band of Quincy; E. T. Bates, Leader.

The procession formed a line on Hancock street, and started over the route laid out at 6.10 P. M. Preceeded by the police force of the town, under command of W. M. French.

Marshal:—Geo. S. Phillips.

Assistant Marshal:—Samuel B. Turner.

Aids:—Charles A. Follett, I. M. Holt, Eugene Connor and William Emerson.

As the column moved forward, the bell on the Stone Church was rung and a salute fired. They proceeded up Hancock street, through School, Franklin and Water to Quincy Avenue, down Elm, Union and Edwards to Washington and then back to the Town Hall.

It rained the most of the way, yet the boys and girls still tramped, tramped, tramped along. On returning to the Square they were marched into the hall and churches, filling them to overflowing.

The residences of Benjamin F. Curtis, N. B. Furnald, Gardner Pratt, Jr., D. B. Stetson, A. M. Swallow, Albert Keating and others were handsomely decorated with flags, streamers, &c.

The music was a very creditable affair. The Weymouth Band made their first appearance in their new and elegant uniform, and the verdict of the multitude was that they played as well as they looked. The Randolph Band, under the leadership of Nelson Mann, played very finely. The Braintree Band played very well. Britton's Stoughton Band did well, and last, but not least, the Belknap of this town, did nobly.

The singing was very fine. The Stoughton choir is one of the best in this vicinity, and last night they added fresh laurels to their already enviable reputation. Hill's Orchestra, composed of some of the finest musicians in the State, together with C. T. Reed, of this town, pianist, played the accompaniment. Everything passed off in splendid shape.

The supper was a model of excellence, and reflected great credit on the managers who had charge of it.

Brother Lord, the doorkeeper was very efficient in attending to his arduous duties, and received the praise of all connected with the club.

Messrs. McGrath and Bigelow had charge of the singing, which was led by Mr. S. E. Johnson.

Messrs. Packard and Graham had charge of the halls and churches and were very successful in their efforts to please all.

The Stoughton Club did nobly yesterday. The same may also be said of the other societies.

The Randolph Band, during the evening, favored the audience with a splendid selection entitled, "The Mocking Bird." The cornet solo being played by Mr. Mace Gay of Stoughton. The mocking bird being rendered in fine style by Mr. S. A. Foster.

The little Reed girls sang their piece with a degree of beauty and effect which is seldom equalled by persons of a larger growth. The cry seemed to be by all—COME AGAIN.

About 50 signed the pledge among them were Messrs. Col. F. W. Parker, Sup't of schools, E. W. Underwood, of the Hancock House, W. B. Worster, Esq. N. B. Furnald, Ex-State Constable and Obed F. Allen, father of the President of the Quincy club.

Exercises in the Town Hall.

The meeting here was attended by a large audience that completely filled it in every part It opened with singing "Nearer my God to thee," by the choir; accompanied by Hill's Orchestra and C. T. Reed, pianist. Reading from Luke 15, by Dr. Reynolds. Followed by Rev. Samuel Kelley. The Weymouth Band then played a fine selection, composed by W. F. Burrell, a member of the band, entitled "Nettie Polka."

President S. T. Allen, Chairman of the meeting, then offered a few words of welcome. He was gratified to meet so many friends on this auspicious occasion. All know the meaning of our assembling to welcome back to our midst the drinking man's friend. We have gained fresh laurels since March 1st.—We are bound to go onward and upward in the good work till our labors are needed no longer. It now affords me great pleasure to introduce to you one who has accomplished so much temporal and lasting good,—Dr. Henry A. Reynolds.

Dr. Reynolds spoke substantially as follows:—

Mr. President, Brothers and Sisters,—Many are aware that I go about my labor realizing my inability to do this work myself. I toil with fear and trembling, looking to God for all. Look on me as one of God's feeblest instrumentalities, which he has raised up. If I didn't think it would be beneficial to the cause, I would not accept any ovation. To God I give the whole glory of my work. You have accomplished greater results here than any place I have visited. There is good material here for me to work on,—good men have planted their feet on the rock of total abstinence. People who want to do good, must not be too high-toned, and more than all they must not go above the level of the Saviour. Why don't all who have not signed come up, and "Dare to do right." I want 1200 men in September from Quincy to march with me in the city of Boston, in a procession of 40,000 temperance men of Massachusetts. I want to see the arms of brotherly love and charity extend all around our reform brethren. I belong to the world. The world is my home.—I've no axe to grind in pursuing my work of reformation. I don't want you to do anything for me, but be good to yourselves. You have accomplished a great deal since I was here before.—Quincy is the banner town of the State in the cause of temperance. I love you; as my brothers and sisters. Be good to yourselves, and God will help you, and you will be happy all your life. After thanking them for their kind attention he said he wanted them to pray for him. As long as God gives me strength, I will go on! go on!! go on!!!

Misses Lillie and Annie Reed of Stoughton, then sang beautifully the fine ballad, "Brothers beware of the snare."

Brother Kelley of Chelsea, was next introduced. He had signed the pledge only thirty-six hours ago, but was happy to say he was a "Dare to do right" man. Always stick to the pledge; never hide the red ribbon; but always stand up and "Dare to do right."

Brother Stone of Somerville, said he had signed the pledge, and he wanted all to pray for him that he might hold out. There was a man in Somerville, 67 years old, who had been drunk 55 years.

George H. Howard, President of the Stoughton Club made a fine speech. He said,—"When called on to give my testimony for the cause, I hope I may never refuse. We have now in Stoughton nearly 1800 temperance men and women. This is a glorious work. Behind lies the happiness and building up of many homes; before lies the rum-sellers whom we are bound to annihilate. I hope the time will come when all the people in Massachusetts will walk the ways of temperance and total abstinence. His remarks were followed by some fine singing.

Calvin Howland, of Stoughton, was the next speaker, and he is surely one of the best in these parts. He felt a deep emotion and could not do justice to the occasion, He paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of the late John Quincy Adams. We are, he said, now engaged in a great work. The liberties of our nation have been assailed by the rum-sellers. He never went through such a vast assembly before, where there was so little rum, as was seen to-night. We have never had a revival, or a dozen of them, that has done so much for our citizens as this total abstinence reform. The whole movement is before you,—keep the pledge and the rumseller will quail before you. Their days are numbered and justly too. Swear by the help of heaven, never to touch, taste or handle the accursed cup; and may the welcome plaudit reach you, "well done thou good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee a ruler over many. Enter thou into the glory of the Lord."

Etta F. Nightengale of Quincy, then read the following

Lines

Suggested by the forming of a Club to promote the cause of Temperance.

Stand firm for the right, brothers—dare to be true;
By aiding each other, your courage renew;
Falter not, brothers, go forth to the fight,
Trusting in Jesus, and strong in his might.

Stand firm for the right—the daylight appearing,
Shows us a future both glorious and bright;
Rouse up and work! the prospect is cheering;
God and the angels are guarding the right.

Tho' yours is a warfare 'gainst Satan and sin,
Still onward, press onward! the battle you'll win;
Eager eyes watch you, urging the fight,
And eager lips cheer you, doing the right.

True friends, ever ready, respond to your call,
Bearing malice to none, and true love to all;
Onward, still onward! pass on in your might,
Sure of a victory, doing the right.

Rev. J. Livesey, of Stoughton, was happy to be able to give his testimony. He endorsed the sentiments of his brothers of Stoughton, and made some very interesting remarks.

Wilson Tisdale, of Stoughton, who is a forcible worker in the cause, said he signed the pledge three months ago. When I signed I did more than dollars and cents can do,—I made my mother happy. That was worth more to me than any act I have ever done. We have not the influence of the wealthy citizens in Stoughton, but the churches are all open to us. N. Atwood, Esq., tenders the use of his hall to us, free of all expense, and as long as the movement stays here I will stick by them.

At this point the exercises were again enlivened by singing.

B. R. Ballou, of Stoughton, was next introduced. He said, when I hear the eloquent remarks of my predecessor, I feel sort of off the handle. I want you to recognize Mr. Bliss, as you recognize Dr. Reynolds. Such good men I never saw in any business. I would like to speak words that would make all people in this town total abstinence men and women. I hope this work will still continue in the upward path, till all are pledged and "Dare to do right."

Mr. Mellen, of Braintree, next stepped forward. He said, we are bound to make our influence felt in Braintree. We are determined to go on, and are bound to conquer, too. What liberty do you sign away when you sign the pledge? We number about ninety in Braintree, but before the summer we hope to roll up in large numbers. "With malice toward none and charity for all," we're bound to be the victors.

Brother Vaughn, of Braintree, said he was heart and hand in this noble work. He was determined to keep the pledge as long as God gives him breath. His remarks were followed by singing.

The following witty poem, by Mr. Geo. Randall of Peabody, formerly of this town, was next read in good style by that gentleman, and caused much merriment:

As I look around on your faces to-night,
And mark how this meeting has made your hearts light,
I feel quite reluctant to take up your time
With my ill expressed thoughts, though wrapped up in rhyme,
But my zeal for the cause impels me to speak,
Though what I may utter prove halting and weak.
The faults of my verses I pray you excuse,
My heart is all right; they're the faults of my muse.
In this age of credit and very short cash,
When even their brandy folks take with a smash;
When brokers go up as their stocks tumble down,
And the last defalcation's the talk of the town;
When wealth, which to get a lifetime has taken,
Is gone in a breath, like leaves when wind shaken;
When the force of Scripture injunction we feel
'Bout moths that corrupt and thieves break through and steal;
When murders, scandals, and such like romancing,
Leave us in doubt if the world is advancing,
'Tis pleasant to hail, 'mid the 'wildering storm,
The noble advance of the temperance reform;
So wishing to show I am up to the times,
I give you my hastily gotten up rhymes,
With the wishes of one who prays for success,
Who hopes the good work may go on and progress.
Now is it not strange, if you stop but to think,
What maneuvres men make when after a drink?
They'll dodge round a corner or into a lane,
And queerly will act when they come out again,
As if in search of a friend or a brother,
They start off one way and look round the other.
And then the excuses in which men delight,
When they want to be with the fellows at night:
"Well, wife, I must go; I'm so busy, you see,
I may be detained late, so don't wait for me."
Then bustling about, as though time was money,
He kisses his wife and calls her his honey;
He hurries down town and goes right by the store,
To whisky and billiards, till midnight or more.
There are too many chaps, deny it who can,
Who really must go out to just meet a man;
And others there are who are up to the dodge
Of going six nights a week to the lodge.

* * * * * *

Is any one living could really, you think,
Tell how many 've gone with Tom Collins to drink?
Or how many fellows have waited about,
With pocket-book empty, for some one to shout?
Or how many men have gone out for awhile
To indulge in a friendly reciprocal smile?
Is any one living could call the long roll
Of Satan's devices to ruin the soul?
Dear friends, do you not think it well through the land,
The teetotal people are showing their hand?
Do you think 'twould be well if we should
Just declare to the world where each of us stood?
Don't you think it would much encourage the others—
The Club, the ladies, the fathers and mothers,
The wives and the sisters—in fact, all who trust
The cause we are waging is holy and just?
Is it naught that on hearth stones a fire shall glow,
Where since love was wounded it long had burned low?
Is it naught the children shall lovingly greet
The coming of him whom the wife runs to meet?
That the happy mother shall shed tears of joy,
As she hails the return of her penitent boy?
Is it naught that sorrow and strife pass away
And joy, love and peace in their place hold a sway?
Now, brothers, who've taken this matter in hand,
And shown to the world you have taken your stand,
Keep a stiff upper lip; keep the object in sight,
Have faith in the Father, and dare to do right.

* * * * * *

And friends, let us keep this reform ball a rolling,
Till for intemperance we hear the bell tolling;
Don't falter; don't hesitate; keep pressing on
Till the battle is over, the victory won;
And though no reward here on earth you may see,
In mansions above shall your reeompense be.

Brother Hildreth one of the Vice Presidents of the Peabody Reform Club said he never expected to see Quincy so worked up in the temperance cause as it is now. You are all looking better, because of the stand you have taken. You are now on the true road to manhood and God will bless you in all your efforts.

Mr. Hildreth's remarks were followed with a song,—"Pull for the Shore," by Mr. S. E. Johnson, of Quincy, with choir and orchestral accompaniment.

Henry H. Faxon, Esq., of Quincy, was then introduced, who spoke as follows:—

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am happy to stand before you this evening,—to help aid in the reception of Dr. Reynolds; whose untiring devotion to the cause of temperance, has kindled the spark which has led to such glorious results.

I am glad to be here to thank you for the noble stand you have taken in forwarding this glorious cause, which is always conducive to the welfare of every community that comes within its blessed influence.

ONLY A FEW WEEKS AGO,

there were many in this good old town that were sad; made so directly or indirectly by the curse of intemperance, who now have joy beaming in their faces in consequence of the great reform that has been inaugurated in our midst.

Many are the tributes of thanksgiving that have gone up to God from grateful hearts of wives and mothers, who have to thank him for the deliverance of those dearest to them. To think of the great good that has been accomplished, and look into the faces of those made happy, fully repays me for all the money expended, and the patience and perseverance that I have had to exercise, for the past few years.

Work on with untiring zeal, for you must all remember that eternal vigilance is the only sure road to success. And here I must also take the opportunity to thank the Protestant ministers of the town for their efforts in securing the untold blessings that have already been realized. They have manfully stood up, and unitedly given their words of cheer to assist and stimulate those who have had the courage to stand up for the right.

Then there are many others, among them noble women, who have encouraged and aided us in pressing forward to a successful end, this cause, which has brought so many blessings.

In conclusion, I will say that there are many more to reform, but among them are some, that not only myself, but many others, are well satisfied cannot be reclaimed until the grog shops are banished from our midst. The proprietors of these places, defiantly say that they will sell regardless of law or constables.

Friends, let us apply the law, and in a way that they will have to repent speedily, stop their nefarious traffic, or leave for more congenial fields among their kindred. Of all the places which needs our attention, the first is yonder billiard saloon, where young men congregate and play for drinks, and whence only a few days ago, a man with good family was taken away helplessly drunk.

Here is where the young men begin, and they finally wind up at such dens as are located on Quarry street. This resort is kept by a man, who a short time ago told me that he should sell rum, if he did not get a license.

This is the kind of men that disregard all law; but if the town authorities, whom they defy, and the Court which tries them, do their duty, we will soon make them feel that the government must be respected. "No rogue e'er felt the halter draw with good opinion of the law." Men, women, and children,—break up such places, and thus make the streets safe for those who cannot resist temptation.

Brother O'Donnell of Chelsea made a few interesting remarks, which were followed by singing.

Rev. Mr. Smith, of Peabody, a very fine speaker and earnest worker, made a stirring speech in favor of temperance. We have reason for such enthusiasm as is now evinced. We have come to feel that we have had enough of the reign of King Alcohol. We are beginning to shake off the shackles of this tyrant of tyrants. The heart responds to that which is true and right. The hearts of the people have been melted together by the bond of human sympathy. Let us so exert ourselves that there shall be no occasion for enlarging our reform clubs, because everybody has joined the cause of truth and right.

William Leavitt, a member of the Quincy Reform Club, expressed joy at the wonderful change in this town. He gave some excellent advice about helping the poor, needy and fallen. Had been a moderate drinker forty years, and could indulge without going to excess.—Always in former years he had kept liquors in his house and treated his friends when they called. Had seen the effects of so doing by the example he had set his sons. He hoped all moderate drinkers would sign the pledge, for he considered they had more effect on the young man, than that class who indulge to excess.

Then followed music by the Randolph Band.

Brother Crocker of Peabody, thought Dr. Reynolds had lifted a load of trouble from him by his influence.

Mr. Conant, of Randolph, one of the old war-horses of the temperance cause, made one of his effective speeches, but the confusion incident to such a gathering was so great that he could hardly be heard.

The meeting closed with music by the different bands and singing.

Exercises in the Unitarian Church.

The exercises in this Church commenced about half past seven o'clock, by voluntaries on the organ,—Josiah B. Stetson presiding. The Rev. John D. Wells, pastor of the Society being absent, the Rev. Geo. W. Whitney, pastor of the Universalist Church, took charge of the exercises.

The Church was crowded,—from 1200 to 1500 persons being present,—every seat was occupied and many were obliged to stand in the galleries, entry and aisles.

After a prayer by Mr. Whitney, and a song by the choir, the presiding gentleman made a few introductory remarks, advised those present to refrain from any rude demonstrations, such as stamping and whistling, but in veneration of the place and the occasion, if anything was uttered that pleased them, to show their appreciation by clapping of hands. These remarks were well received and most cheerfully complied with, throughout the evening.

S. P. Smith of Peabody was then introduced. He said he came to Quincy for the purpose of rejoicing with it in this good cause. Nothing will fire the hearts of the American people with true patriotism, more than this grand incoming tide of Reformation. This noble reform began at Peabody last December. The tide was then at a low ebb in that place, but now the tide had turned. The man has come among us, who by his magnetic power draw us all together,—making us brothers and sisters; and we shall show a good work this centennial year.

Mr. Howland of Stoughton was next called. He said we have come from Stoughton to rejoice with the Quincy Club, on their success. When he saw the ladies waving their handkerchiefs, with their smiling countenances, it seemed to him like heaven, with the angels smiling down upon them. It was not a wonder to them now that the Quincy Club prospered, after seeing these evidences of hope and encouragement. Now is the day of salvation. We have scores of men to-day in Stoughton, who dare to do right. Now take these reformed men by the hand and welcome them, for they hold this reform movement in the palm of their hands.

James E. Tirrell, of Quincy, was then introduced. He said he had wrote a short poem to be read before the Quincy Club, but by request he would read it on this occasion. After the poem the choir favored the audience with a voluntary.

Dare to do Right.

BY J. E. TIRRELL.

Raise high the broad banner, and fling to the breeze
Our flag, with its motto forever in sight,
That the misguided man, whenever he sees
May turn from his follies, and dare to do right.

Proclaim to the nation, our iron-clad pledge,—
To its teachings and rules, all people invite;
That the tempted and weak may find a sure hedge
To shield them from evil, who dare to do right.

The rumseller shrinks from the fair beaming star,—
That orb which has risen so gloriously bright;
For in darkness he works, and hastens afar,
From the dreaded injunction,—Dare to to right.

Awaken, ye freeman! to duty awake!
And put the foul demon, Intemperance, to flight;
The fetters that bind the inebriate break,
That his soul may be free, and dare to do right.

May the bright nickle shield, and ribbon of red,
Fidelities armor and emblem unite;
And when on the breast they together are wed,
Give thy heart the inscription, and dare to do right.

Our cause is triumphant, and thousands are near
To join to the ranks of our army to-night;
Our foes are retreating, they shudder with fear
As they gaze on our motto:—"Dare to do Right."

Then onward, still onward, with Heaven to guide,
Till the deluge shall roar, the wave shall affright;
While the Ship of Reform shall steadily ride,
With her brave, noble crew, who dare to do right.

And when safely anchored in heaven above,
Securely moored in that haven of light.
May our voices united, sing praises of love
To God, our preserver, who ever does right.

Rev. R. H. Howe, pastor of Christ Church, Quincy, was next introduced. He said we have come together to give a worthy reception to him who had done so much for this reform. Deep gratitude was felt by us all, to the man who had started such a great reform. An angel in God's hand to perform this good work. He hoped each would try to do his duty in this glorious movement. He then showed the effect of intemperance on crime and pauperism. Giving good illustrations.

Rev. C. H. Rowe of Wollaston was next called. He said that rum degrades this noble work of God. The beautiful structure is made a wreck. Intemperance destroys home and degrades society. One false step by us may destroy many. Be strong. The hour demands courage. When the father signs the pledge how it lightens the home.

Rev. Mr. Gracey of East Weymouth was the next speaker. He blessed Dr. Reynolds. Their Club at East Weymouth was the youngest of his children. Only one week old. Still they numbered 238 men. Many of whom knew what it was to drink,—and drink hard. He spoke strongly and forcibly to the reform men. He hoped they would not rest as long as there was another to be reformed. Rest not, till you find him.

The choir then sung, "The morning light is breaking," and while singing in came Dr. Reynolds, President Allen of the Quincy Club and others.

Dr. Reynolds was then introduced.—He made but a few remarks; thanking the people kindly for this grand reception. He said 3000 men had joined the ranks since the 1st of April, and the number of reform men now was 22,000. He urged the members of the clubs to attend their meetings closely during the warm months, if they did not wash and put on clean clothes before they went to their club rooms. He said Boston had 2700 rum shops, but he hoped to make it the hottest winter for them that Massachusetts ever saw. Several came forward and signed the pledge and the meeting was then dissolved.

Exercises in the Orthodox Church.

A few people gathered in the Congregational Church as soon as the doors were opened, anxious to secure good seats to listen to the exercises of the evening. At 7.20 o'clock, the Reform Club entered, filling twelve pews on either side of the main aisle. The crowd soon followed, with the Belknap Brass Band of West Quincy.

Rev. Mr. Norton opened the exercises by inviting the audience to sing the Hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking," which was responded to in a hearty manner. Rev. Mr. Johnston then followed with prayer, afterward the 8th Hymn, "Coronation," was sung.

Mr. John S. Fogg, of South Weymouth, was then called upon to speak. He said that he had not thought of being invited to speak when he came to Quincy, but was always glad to say a few words for a good cause. He then gave a reminiscence of the old times of thirty years ago, when he used to pass through Quincy, on his way to Boston, always stopping at the Quincy Hotel, to give the horses water to drink, while the men took something stronger than water, and again this was repeated at Neponset. He was always a cold water man, but could not help referring to the old times, contrasting it with the present. He could call up in his mind twelve or fifteen men of those days, who took the social glass, that had gone down to drunkards' graves. He believed the time had come, when every man ought to take a decided stand for temperance, until not a drop of liquor was sold, not only in Quincy, but in the whole world. The band then played "Nearer my God to Thee."

Mr. Josephus Shaw, was next introduced. "He began by quoting God moves in mysterious ways, &c." He believed that the new interest in the cause of temperance had been brought about by the prayers of mothers, wives and sisters, and urged that all should take hold of the cause whether habitual drunkards or not, and commended as a watch word, Total abstinence, and Dare to do Right. His remarks were followed by the audience singing, "Hold the Fort." Mr. J. S. Reed of South Weymouth, was next called upon. He said that the sin of intemperance was the Devil's work. The intemperate man was a slave to his appetite; was not this worse than to be in bondage to man. He urged all to break from this bondage of Satan, and for God, humanity, and temperance, put on the red ribbon. He was followed by soul-stirring music by the band.

Deacon Childs, of Braintree, was then introduced, but as he mounted the platform, Dr. Reynolds entered the church, and was greeted with long and tremendous applause. Mr. Childs gave way to his co-worker.

Dr. Reynolds addressed the audience in his usual earnest style, and afterwards presented the pledge, which was signed by many ladies and gentlemen. Many other speakers followed, but owing to the lateness of the hour, we are obliged to close this report.

Stoughton.

This town was originally a part of Dorchester, and embraced within its limits the present towns of Canton, Sharon and the greater part of Foxboro. It was incorporated in 1726, and named in honor of Hon. Wm. Stoughton, Lieut. Governor from 1692 to 1702

A church was formed in 1744, and Rev. Jedediah Adams received the pastoral charge and continued for fifty-three years. There are now four churches in Stoughton centre, Catholic, Universalist Methodist and Orthodox,—the latter being one of the hardest working parishes for the cause of temperance in the town.

The Old Colony railroad passes the town about two miles from the centre.—The Stoughton Railway Co., chartered 1844, have completed a road from this place to Canton, on the Boston and Providence railroad four miles, costing about $80,000.

BUSINESS.

The leather business forms an important part of the enterprise of the town. The boot and shoe manufactory of the Stoughton company is a large and imposing edifice. About 150 persons are employed in good times and the amount of work done here must accordingly be very large. All kinds of work are done, from the finest calf boot to a rough heavy shoe. All the machinery that tends to the facilation of the business is to be found here.

The establishment of S. C. & J. G. Phinney on the corner of Summer and Winter streets,—counter manufacturers,—deserves more than a passing notice, when the fact is taken into consideration that this firm manufacture yearly more counters than all other firms in the country combined. They occupy a large building three stories high, 148 ft. long, by 30 wide, and at present furnished with steam power. About twenty hands are now employed. They make on an average 14,400 pair of counters per day, for which it takes 300 sides of leather. By strict attention to their many patrons and friends, they have won the confidence and esteem of all. A great part of their success is due to the valuable machine invented by their father, for cutting the counters, thereby saving twenty per cent. of the leather which was heretofore lost.

The business was inaugerated twenty-six years ago, by their father. Half a dozen sides of leather per day, was considered large in those days, now 500 seems comparatively small, when the increase in trade is taken into consideration. Boot and shoe makers from Maine to California, are supplied by this firm—and there are now among their many customers, some who have traded with them since 1850. This is itself a good recommendation for the firm which shows such a commendable spirit in striving to keep up with the times.

The last factory of Walker & Phinney is quite a place. It was started four years ago with four men. Now they have sixteen men, and make on an average nearly 175 pairs of lasts per day. In 1875 they made 50,000 pairs. Twelve of the sixteen men belong to the Good Samaritans,—the rest are soon coming in.

THE REFORM CLUB.

Never in the history of the town has so must temporal or lasting good been done as is now being done through the efforts of the good Samaritans. Starting, Jan. 13th, with a membership of 159, it has steadily rolled up, until now 1569 men and women are enrolled among the champions of temperance. This is one of the most energetic and hard working orders in the States. They have held two meeting a week since they commenced in January and the interest does not flag a particle. All are susceptible of feeling the influence of the hour. Mr. E. W. Bliss has great reason to be proud of his pet club of this town. They have worked hard and all are in earnest about this great work.

The club was named from the parable of the good Samaritan Luke 10;—25 to 37 as embodying the principles and rules of action. The members promise to watch over, help, encourage and sympathize with each other, and in every proper way seek to promote the place and advance the interests of the society as a whole. The object of the society being to promote the reformation of persons addicted to the use of strong drink. Any member who breaks his pledge may again become a member by renewing his signature. Any person may become a member by signing the pledge of total abstinence; and any member who has been two months in good standing previous to any election may be entitled to a vote.

The club is ably presides over by Mr. Geo. H. Goward who is a gentleman in every sense of the word, and is untiring in his efforts to promote the cause of right. The other officers and members join with him, and with their valuable assistance the cause of temperance in Stoughton will have a great stronghold.

The grand work goes on continually. Hundreds of men who have been known as among the hardest of drinkers here signed the pledge and were redeemed from the effects of the sinful curse, and have become good citizens, making their homes happy and themselves respected citizens. Rum has almost lost its power here and the dealers are at loss to know what they shall do next.

The meeting on Tuesday evening at Atwood's hall was addressed by the members, who made strong and effective speeches in behalf of the cause. Mr. S. C. Phinney however made the speech of the evening. He is about to leave town on business being absent about two months; he gave some very good advice to the club which if well heeded cannot fail to be productive of the best results.

Thus the good work goes on in Stoughton, "The Banner Town of the cause of temperance in the country."

MOWING. The fine lawn in front of Col. Packard's conservatory yielded its first crop of grass on Monday last.

WOLLASTON. The new Congregational church at Wollaston is completed, and will be dedicated on Thursday, the 7th day of May, the exercises to commence at 4 o'clock, P. M., at which time, the church already formed, will be recognized, and received into the Norfolk Conference of Churches. Right hand of fellowship by Rev. A. H. Plumb. Concluding remarks by Rev. I. P. Langworthy and others. The evening exercises commence at 7 o'clock; Prayer of Invocation, by Rev. Edward Norton; Sermon by Rev. F. B. Daw; Prayer of dedication by Rev. J. H. Means, D. D.; Benediction by Rev. J. H. Gurney. All interested in this new and prosperous enterprise are cordially invited to be present on this occasion.

SUNNYSIDE. The Baptist Church and Congregation at Wollaston Heights gave their pastor, Rev. C. H. Rowe, and his wife, a very pleasant recognition of a cherished anniversary day in their lives, by a welcome and enjoyable surprise visit on Tuesday evening of last week. Called away for the evening, their house was taken possession of by the people, who loaded the tables with many good things to the value of over one hundred dollars, and on their return welcomed them with singing and happy greetings. This thoughtful remembrance of the tenth anniversary of their marriage, the gifts of regard and esteem, both useful and ornamental, are highly appreciated on account of their worth, and especially that they signify, what is of the highest value, a warm place in the hearts of their people.

SOLD. The large three story house, known as the Belknap House, in West Quincy, was sold at auction by Joseph W. Lombard, Esq., on Monday last, for $3750, to Mr. John Neagle of Boston.

APPOINTMENTS. The Selectmen appointed on Saturday last the following Board of Engineers:—E. A. Spear, Herbert M. Federhen, John W. Hall, Amos M. Litchfield, J. H. Elcock and J. T. Penniman.

There will be a meeting of the Board this evening, for the purpose of choosing their Chief and organizing.

On Monday evening next there will be a meeting of the several engine companies of this town to choose officers for the year ensuing.

QUINCY YACHTS. Our yacht men are quite busy just at present, getting their boats ready for their season of regattas, the first one of which will probably take place May 27th.

AUCTION. Mr. Perez Chubbuck, Jr., was the purchaser of Mr. Peter B. Turner's yacht Jennie, which was sold at auction by Joseph T. French on Tuesday last, for $135.

BIG EGGS. Mr. James W. Rideout of this town has a hen of the light Brahma breed, "which has laid her master many eggs," which for size and weight would be hard to beat. The four that Mr. R. left at this office weighed fourteen ounces and looked large enough to furnish a dinner for a hungry man. Mr. Rideout says that this hen always lays these large sized eggs, so that it is no uncommon feat, done for show only, but an every day affair.

CAUCUS. The Republicans held a caucus at the Town Hall, on Saturday evening last. William B. Worster, Esq., called the meeting to order and Henry F. Barker was elected Chairman and John P. Bigelow, Secretary. After a very animated discussion as to the best method of chosing delegates, the following persons were elected:—

State Convention,—Henry H. Faxon, William B. Worster, Henry F. Barker, George F. Pinkham and Jonas Shackley.

District Convention,—Jedediah P. Jordan, Warren W. Adams, Samuel T. Allen, John O. Holden, Charles Marsh.

☞ The mowers began to mow last Monday in front of the State House.—Members of the legislature will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

SILVER WEDDING. Thursday of last week, Mr. Elisha Thayer and lady received their friends,—it being the 25th anniversary of their marriage. A very large number of friends were present and the happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts, including a very handsome silver tea service. The occasion was a very enjoyable one.

A PLEASANT VISIT. On Monday evening, the members of the Braintree Brass Band, learning that one of their number,—Mr. Oscar Carver,—had captured a young robin, paid him a visit at his home, and found him all ready to receive their congratulations. Good cheer and good wishes were the order of the evening, and some of the members of the Band are inclined to follow the example set by Oscar, and make the nest first and then capture a mate.

ANOTHER RALLY. On Wednesday evening the Braintree Reform Club held one of their temperance rallies. Addresses were made by Deacon Read of South Weymouth, S. A. Bates and Deacon Childs of Braintree. Miss Ruth Holbrook, accompanied by other ladies from Weymouth, and Mr. Porter from the same place, sang some temperance and other songs in fine style. The meeting was fully attended and those who dare to do right are constantly adding their names to the roll.

WINDOW GARDEN. Mr. Thomas Brooks, of Waltham street, Boston, a former resident of this town, informs us that he has an orange tree on which is now growing eighteen splendid oranges, besides being in full bud. He has many other fine plants, which are all in full bloom and are very attractive to those who are continually passing the house, and thousands have stopped to admire the beautiful fruit and flowers growing in the windows. Friend Thomas prides himself on his plant training, and says that this summer he intends having a very fine flower garden, something a little ahead of Quincy.

REAL ESTATE SALES. Since our last the following real estates in this town and vicinity have changed hands.

Mrs. Amelia A., wife of Mr. Joseph Adams of Quincy, bought of Edgar Howard 19,147 feet of land on Newton street, for $2000.

Warren M. Babbitt, bought estate on Washington street, Braintree, of George Campbell, for $6000.

Lucy, wife of James H. Welch bought 1-2 acre of land with buildings on Union street, Weymouth, of Mary M. Hubbard, for $1700.

EAST WEYMOUTH. The Temperance movement has reached our sister town and a series of meetings have been held there which has resulted in great good. Dr. Reynolds visited them and introduced his method of organizing the Reform Clubs, which they adopted. They held their first meeting last Saturday evening, and at the adjournment it was found that the Club had a membership of 10[illegible] The following board of officers were elected:—

President,—Martin E. Hawes.

Vice Presidents,—Jotham Saulsbury, Herbert Burrell, Samuel Linnell.

Secretary,—John Stewart.

Treasurer,—Mr. Sharpless.

Steward,—W. E. Burrell.

Marshals,—William Hayden and Mr. Linton.

Sergeant-at-Arms,—Mr. Sweden.

Their first business meeting last Monday evening, was held in the Vestry of the Methodist Church, Mr. M. E. Hawes, the president in the chair. There was great enthusiasm in the meeting and thirty-six more reformed men gave their names to the club. The entrance of Michael Cushing as a member of the club was received with three rousing cheers, as his place had been a favorite resort for many of the boys.

It was a unanimous vote of the Club to attend the demonstration in this town and they engaged the East Weymouth Brass Band.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH. Dr. Henry Reynolds was at the Union Orthodox Church in South Weymouth, on Wednesday afternoon and evening where he spoke and was assisted by Rev. Mr. Baker of the Universalist and Rev. Messrs. McLean and Stanton of the Congregational Churches, each of whom made brief addresses.

The evening meeting was presided over by Mr. Josiah Reed, President of the Reform Club, and was addressed by the doctor, Mr. Reed and Mr. Stewart, a reformed man from Lovell's Corner. The Doctor's plan of work was adopted by the club, which now numbers about ninety members.

☞ In the United States District Court Wednesday, W. H. Gertz, ex-State detective, for falsely personating a United States officer and demanding $1500 of Jacob Hersey of this town in settlement of an alleged violation of the revenue laws, was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $500.

The Womans' Union. The Womans' Christian Temperance Union of this town, held their regular meeting Thursday afternoon in the chapel of the Orthodox church. There were about one hundred ladies present. The principal business before the meeting, related to the State Temperance Fair, to be held in Boston, commencing May 15th, and which will continue five days. Every county and every town is to be represented, and it is hoped that Quincy will contribute liberally. Fancy and useful articles can be sent to Mrs. D. B. Stetson, President for this town. It was voted to hold a public meeting in about two weeks, and the ladies intend to make it one of great interest.

Hyde Park. A session of the Probate Court for Norfolk county was held on Wednesday. William Moore was appointed guardian of Gertrade Moore of Walpole; Benjamin F. Curtis of Quincy, appointed guardian of Ann B. and Emeline S. Curtis. Mr. H. C. Kendrick of Hyde Park, presented a petition as trustee under the will of George Pollard, asking to be allowed the use of a portion of the principal of the trust fund, as the income was not sufficient to support the widow. This is a new question in probate matters, and a hearing in regard to it will take place on the third Wednesday in May. Stephen W. Richardson of Franklin was appointed administrator of the estate of Moses W. Wilder.

☞ Hon. Charles Francis Adams has accepted the invitation of the city of Taunton to deliver the address at the forthcoming 4th of July celebration, for which great preparations are making.

Ice. The Messrs. Eaton and W. Gardner Prescott will soon be ready to serve their customers with clear ice of excellent quality; it is an article which is so much needed in every household during the warm season.

Convention. The twenty-ninth annual meeting, of the Norfolk County Teachers' Association, will be held in Walpole, May 12th and 13th.

Some of the subjects of lectures and discussions will be as follows:—

Promotions in our Public Schools.
What shall we teach in English Literature?
Methods in English.
The Metric System.
Primary Schools and their relation to Higher Grades.
A Reformed Alphabet.
Education in Popular Amusements.

All teachers, School Committees, and friends of education, are cordially invited to be present.

No Licenses at Taunton. An attempt to reconsider the vote, whereby no licenses are to be granted this year, was defeated in the Board of Aldermen last Wednesday evening, by a vote of 6 to 2. That settles the license business there for this year.

Fourth of July. Boys, begin to save your pennies for peanuts and popguns and crackers for the event which will take place ten weeks from next Tuesday. You know that this is to be a centennial celebration, and you must be prepared to celebrate it in a joyous and happy manner. The town committee seem to be working in a very quiet manner, but as they are the right kind of men, we shall have a big time without doubt.

Parricide, in Duxbury. Capt. Elisha Sampson, of Duxbury, was shot last Monday morning by his son Simeon, a young man of nineteen, who is subject to fits of insanity. The unfortunate man left his sick bed and went down stairs in his stocking feet into a back room, where he took a shot gun, opened the kitchen door and deliberately shot his father in the head. After committing the deed he returned to his bed-room where he was arrested and conveyed to Plymouth jail.

☞ There recently died in Ireland a jolly old centenarian named Patrick Sullivan. He was one hundred and two years old. Before his death he requested his wife, who is only eighty-six years of age, to see to it that there should be no mourning at his funeral, but merriment instead. He desired that two fiddlers, dressed in the old Irish national costume, should play at the head of his funeral procession. His requests were granted, and the patriarch went to his grave amidst great hilarity.

☞ We learn from an exchange that a Detroit seed firm recently moved six and a half sacks of its catalogues to Windsor, Ontario, and there mailed them to persons in the United States, saving $3170 by the transaction, or cheating the United States revenue, as some call it, out of that amount. The charge for what is known as "third-class mail matter" in the United States is four times as much as is charged for the same class in Canada. Under the late postal arrangement between the two countries, the United States and Canada each agree to take charge of the other's mails without charge. Hence the Detroit transaction.

☞ Twelve hundred tons of goods arrived at Philadelphia, on Wednesday, in the steamship France, from Havre,—all for the National Exhibition.

State Convention. The representatives of the Republican party at this State met at Tremont Temple, in Boston, on Wednesday last, for the purpose of electing four delegates to the National Republican Convention, which is to be held in Cincinnati on the 14th of June. The session lasted four hours and Messrs. Richard H. Dana, Jr., E. Rockwood Hoar, John M. Forbes and Paul A. Chadbourne were elected delegates at large to the National Republican Convention at Cincinnati, with power to choose their own substitutes. The Convention was very numerous and very respectable, 969 of the best representatives of the party being present.

Sales. A lot of land with buildings, on Water street, is to be sold by order of Mortgagee on Tuesday next, at 2 1-2 o'clock. Also, on Monday at 4 o'clock there is to be a sale of land with buildings on Willard street, West Quincy, by order of the Assignee. See advertisements.

Braintree. Our mother town, keeps the temperance ball in motion, and her people are as zealous in the good cause, as when the movement was first started in their midst. The Reform Club of this town, invited the Woman's Temperance Union, the Band of Hope, and the Holbrook Reform Club to join with them at the Great Jubilee, and they accepted. The Braintree Brass Band was engaged.

Social Party. Mr. Loring A. French, who for the past year has had charge of the culinary department at the National Sailors' Home, in this town, received a friendly visit from about thirty of his friends on Monday evening last, it being the fifty-second anniversary of his birth. Probably there are very few gentlemen in our town, who understand the epicurean art better than Mr. French, and the many good meals he has provided for his fellow-men, not only in our quiet village, but on the tented field, will not soon be forgotten. A few, desirous of remembering him for his many kindnesses in the past, decided on this appropriate occasion to give him a call, and the reader may rest assured that the party was most cordially received.

Mr. Joseph T. French in a neat speech presented Mr. F. with a beautiful gift in behalf of the party which was feelingly responded to. Next in order was a bountiful colation, which was well appreciated by the party, particularly by Horace and the Doctor.

Frost. Quite a heavy frost was noticed yesterday morning, in this town and vicinity.

☞ Decoration Day was observed at Atlanta, Ga., on Tuesday. The stores were all closed and thousands were in the cemetery decorating the graves.

☞ Barney Williams, the well-known Irish comedian, died at his residence in New York city on Wednesday.

☞ Free admission tickets will be issued for the Centennial, of two kinds—one for prominent officials, and the other for exhibitors, employes, and newspaper correspondents. The former will be printed on heavy bond paper in square note-sized sheets, and the others will be in the shape of a two-leaved book of card-board. Each recipient of the latter must have his photograph inserted on the third page before the 1st of June, or the ticket will be void.

☞ Two towns of Massachusetts, Hardwick and Ashby, still retain the ancient custom of levying a "minister's tax." The members of the Congregational Society are assessed for it on the basis of the town valuation of property. The tax is collectable by law. In Hardwick the rate of the tax was, 1875, $4.10 on the $1000, and at Ashby ninety cents for the Orthodox Congregationalists, and $1 on the $1000 for the Unitarians.

☞ An English school-mistress was recently fined "twenty-five dollars and costs." Her offence was this:—Among the children in her charge was a little child of two years, whom she punished so severely for some trifling fault that its mother afterward counted sixteen bruises on its back. The child was seized with fits, and died within six weeks. A society for the prevention of cruelty to children would not be amiss in England.

A Sermon in Court. A powerful temperance sermon was preached in the Superior Criminal Court of Boston recently. Joseph McDonald, the only ons of a widowed mother, has been addicted to drink, and through its baneful influence, he received a quantity of stolen property and was arrested. His counsel plead eloquently in his behalf, stating he had reformed, and Judge Aldrich consequently imposed a sentence of only eighteen months' imprisonment in the House of Correction. This announcement fell like a deathknell on the ears of the unhappy mother who sat in the witness seats, and throwing her arms in the air she exclaimed, "my child" in a voice of agony which struck to the heart of everybody in the room. Leaving the room, heartbroken, she paced the long corridor for an hour, evidently suffering intensely from the shame which had fallen upon her. And all this was because of strong drink. To feed and clothe a rumseller and his family, this boy had made the future of his own mother a life of sorrow and grief and ostracised himself from the society of his fellows. Yet, some people say it is a sacrifice to sign the pledge.

☞ It is related of a lady, residing on Fifth avenue, N. Y., who went to Europe and left two hounds in charge of a person, who received $200 yearly for their care, and was allowed a carriage once a month in which to give the dogs an airing.

☞ Although Archbishop Williams and Mr. John Boyle O'Reilly are now the owners of the Boston Pilot, the profits are to be devoted to reimbursing the bank depositors, and when this is accomplished Mr. Donahoe is to be given a large interest in the paper.

We are asked to believe that a Springfield, Ill., man drank on a wager four gallons of water in half an hour, and at another time two gallons in eighty-four seconds.

For the Quincy Patriot.

Sketches of North Quincy,—No. 14

Johnson in his "Wonder Working Providence" thus speaks of Dorchester in 1654. "The forme of this Towne is almost like a serpent, turning her head to the Northward; over against Thomson's Island and the Castle, her body and wings being chiefly built on, are filled somewhat thick of houses, only that one end of her wings is clift, her tayle being of such large extent that she can hardly draw it after her. Her houses for dwelling are about one hundred and forty; orchards and gardens full of fruit trees; plenty of Corneland, though much of it hath been long in tillage, yet hath it ordinarily good crops; the number of trees are near upon 1500. Cowes and other Cattell of that kind about 450."

Now Squantum of which we propose to speak in this series, formed in 1654, that part of old Dorchester described in form "almost like a serpent turning her head to the northward, over against Thomson's Island and the Castle." A more recent writer in 1837 says:—"Between Quincy and Dorchester Bays is a point of land, called Squantum, celebrated as having been the residence of the famous Indian Sachem, Chickataubut.—This place is the Mos-wetuset, a few miles south of Boston; supposed by some to have originated the name of the State.—Squantum is a rocky romantic place, six miles south of Boston, and a pleasant resort for fishing and bathing."

At the incorporation of Dorchester in 1630, Squantum was included within its limits. By an Act of the Legislature, February 23d, 1792, the territory of Benjamin Beale, Joseph Beale, John Billings, Ebenezer Glover and Josiah Glover, inhabitants of Dorchester, called Squantum, or the "Farms" was set off from Dorchester and annexed to Quincy. And this was the first stepping-stone of Squantum into Quincy. As we have already shown in a former number of these sketches, Neponset River was by no means the ancient boundary line between Dorchester and Braintree. The limits of these venerable towns ran in a southwesterly course, from a point near the slate quarries, and near the residence now of Mr. Lemuel Billings to Milton. And, until 1838, that section of Squantum owned by the Pope family, and the farms of Messrs. Oliver Billings, Moses Billings and Geo. B. Billings on Squantum street, remain a part of Dorchester,—results, frequent mild conflicts of jurisdiction as to school matters and town boundaries. The channel of Neponset river, since 1838, is the boundary line between Quincy and Dorchester District. The upland territory of Squantum will hardly exceed two hundred and fifty acres. The highest altitude is 99 feet above the sea. The marshes are very extensive.

In the interesting address of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Esq., at the Wollaston celebration of the 4th of July last, he remarked, that connected with the first settlement of Massachusetts, Squantum possessed historic reminiscences worthy of preservation; the truth of which we will endeavor to show in the next number of these sketches.

William B. Duggan.

☞ Mr. S. F. Dalby, a member of St. Paul's Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of this town, who died at his residence on Quincy Place, yesterday morning, will be buried with Pythian honors, on Monday next.

Reynold Lodge. This lodge of Good Templars of this town, held a business meeting at their Hall, on Thursday evening, and elected their officers, who are to be installed one week from their next meeting.

Red Ribbon Minstrels. Do not forget the entertainment by the members of the Reform Club this evening.—Their last concert was a very interesting one, and they propose to do even better this time, and are in hopes that a full house will greet them.

Improvements. Quite a good improvement is being made at the junction of Washington and Sea streets,—head of the canal. The old wall by the brook is being removed, and a strong handsome and durable one is being erected in its place. It is so well laid that it is doubtful if ever there is an occasion for another. The drive-way is narrowed and the street widened giving a chance for a good sidewalk.

The old church corner of Sea and Canal street, purchased by the Reform Club has been raised, the dirt removed from under and around the same, and now the foundation walls are being laid. Soon we may expect to see a fine building on this corner. It is a pity that Sea street could not be widened a few feet opposite this building before the new fence, about to be erected, is completed.

The masons are busy piling the bricks in the basement of Robertson's block.

Spring Work. The time for cleaning and renovating buildings and premises has now arrived, and painters may be seen every day, with pots and brushes, changing the appearance of many houses in town, making old places look as good as new, and causing the happy housewife to smile and be glad, at the neat and pleasant change made in the appearance of her home.

Deceased. Mr. Gridley Totman, for many years proprietor of the Elm street market, in this town, died at his residence on Friday morning, after a long and painful illness.

Linen Wedding. A few friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Elliott called at their residence on Thursday evening, the 20th instant, and gave them, a most agreeable surprise,—it being the anniversary of their linen wedding. Never were a couple more pleased to see their friends than Mr. E. and lady on this occasion, and by their smiling countenance all the visitors soon appeared perfectly at home. After a few social hours the party gathered around a bountifully spread table, and began to tempt their appetites by the many good things placed before them. "Uncle Jerry," says there was everything one could desire, and what he says we will not attempt to dispute. A big pile of dainties were stowed away and we think more would have been, if it had not been for a Locke. Those not being overloaded, about 12 o'clock went for a Rideout, and thus the time closed, and all are now pleasantly waiting for Father Time to roll on, that the occasion may be repeated.

☞ The Maine Editorial Association have arranged for an excursion to the Centennial, leaving Portland June 5.—Special arrangements have been made for the editorial party for $11.50 from Portland to Philadelphia and return, $1 extra for state-room, tickets good for thirty days. Board in Philadelphia will be arranged for, including lodging, breakfast and a 6 P. M. dinner at $2 per day.

☞ The Second Universalist Society of Boston, has accepted the offer made by Messrs. Jacobs & Deane of $450,000 for the building which occupies the site of the old church in School street. This will enable the society to pay off its present debt of about $100,000, clear off the mortgage of $200,000 on the School street property and have about $150,000 in its treasury as a permanent fund.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

West Windsor, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly,
L. McQuown.

RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. } Leon. McQuown. Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rhematism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"Jefferson, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

"Messrs. Rose & Co.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

For the Patriot.

To the Quincy Reform Club.

TEMPERANCE HYMN.

Joyful news—these comrades landed
From the whirlpool's deaf'ning roar;
Never may your boat be stranded,
'Mid the rocks that girt the shore.
CHORUS.
Let the temperance lights be burning,
High above this tidal wave;
Other weak and fainting brothers
You may rescue, you may save.

Oh! the scattered wrecks about you,
Sad and sick'ning was their fate;
Brothers, put out all the signals,
Friends to save 'ere 'tis too late.
CHORUS.
Let your lights be brightly shining,
Shining far across the wave;
Other weak and fainting brothers
You may rescue, you may save.

Ships out in the misty harbor,
Ere they may be tempest tossed,
Give the warning of the fog bell,
Lest in darkness souls be lost.
CHORUS.
Oh! let all the lights be burning,
Gleaming far across the wave;
Other weak and fainting brothers
You may rescue, you may save.

As our temperance ship is sailing.
One's on board the storm to calm;
Faith in Him will prove availing—
Lean on his all-powerful arm.
CHORUS.
Let our lights be trim'd and burning,
We are crossing o'er life's wave;
Christ our hope and He our anchor,
He will rescue, He will save.

A Clean Poultry House.

A clean, sweet fowl house is a very desirable thing. A building infested with vermin, is a wretched place to confine fowls in: and however generous may be their feed or the attention given to their needs otherwise, the neglect to keep the laying and roosting quarters free from lice, overbalances all attempts to maintain poultry in a healthy condition. Purity and cleanliness are absolutely essential to the health and comfort of the fowls; guarding them from vermin, and rendering even narrow quarters comparatively comfortable. White-washing is one of the most important aids to secure these results, and should be performed twice a year, spring and autumn, at least, and oftener, if necessary. The best wash is made from fresh lime slacked with boiling water, to which is added one ounce of carbolic acid to every four quarts of water. Some say that the building should be cleared of fowls, closed, and thoroughly fumigated by burning in it sulphur or tobacco stems in an iron kettle, previous to white-washing, but we have not found this necessary. White-washing every portion of the interior with the above mixture will do the business. The lime, besides purifying the building, covers unsightly stains on the walls, and greatly improves the general appearance of the room, while the acid destroys lice, fleas, and other vermin.

Plant a Grape Vine.

An exchange says:—Not one farmer in twenty will buy grapes or other fruit for himself and family; but grapes are so easily and cheaply grown that no family with a rod of ground should be without a few vines. Grapes can be got in bearing earlier than any other fruit, excepting strawberries, and with well-rooted layers I have had one bunch of grapes the first year after setting. Yet many a man spends $50 to $100 in setting an apple orchard, which will not bear till six or eight years after, who would begrudge $5 for a dozen of vines of the choicest grapes, which he might eat within two years, and have an abundance before five years had passed. I do not object to extensive and early planting of apple orchards, "this ought ye to have done, and not have left the other undone." It seems to me that the first duty of a settler on new land is to plant immediately half a dozen grape vines, and after that as many as he can afford. Fresh fruit is a necessity to the health of a family, and nothing is more quickly, easily or cheaply grown than grapes.

☞ Slops from the kitchen can be run upon a heap of dirt, which may be occasionally shovelled over and changed after it has absorbed a good deal of filth. It is then well worth removing as a fertilizer. It is better than running under ground into a pit where the odors generally find some way of escape, often into the kitchen, on account of some defect or stoppage of the pipes.

WASH FOR FRUIT TREES. A gallon of soft soap, one pound of flour of sulphur, one quart of fine salt; stir these latter ingredients into the soap, and apply with a paint or whitewash brush.—National Agriculturist.

Anecdotes.

Butcher:—"Come, John, be lively now; break the bones in Mr. Williams's chops and put Mr. Smith's ribs in the basket for him."

John, (briskly)—"All right, sir; just as soon as I've sawed off Mrs. Murphy's leg."

Visitor,—"Can I see Dr. Jones?"

Servant,—"No, Sir; he's not at home, Sir."

Visitor,—"Could I see his—er—deputy?"

Servant,—"Please, sir, you'd better wait till master comes home, as I don't know where it is, and he don't like his things meddled with.

John was thought very stupid. He was sent to mill one day, and the miller said:—"John, some people say you are a fool. Now tell me what you do know and what you don't know?"

"Well," replied John, "I know miller's hogs are fat."

"Yes, that's well, John. Now, what don't you know?"

"I don't know whose corn fats 'em."

Ayer's
Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Weary.

Weary of waiting, so weary!
  Longing to lay down and die,
To find for the sad heart and dreary,
  The end of this pilgrimage nigh.

Weary, so weary of wishing
  For a form that has gone from my sight,
For a voice that is hushed to me ever,
  For eyes that to me were so bright;

For a hand to be laid on my forehead,
  A glimpse of his glossy brown hair,
For a step that to me was sweet music,
  And a brow that was noble and fair.

Weary, so weary of waiting;
  Waiting for sympathy sweet,
For something to love, and to love me,
  And pleasures that are not so fleet.

Tired, so tired of drifting
  Adown the dark streams of life;
Tired of breasting the billows—
  The billows of toil and strife.

Waiting, and waiting so sadly,
  For love that was sweetest and best;
Willing to die, Oh, so gladly!
  If that would bring quiet and rest.

A. F. Woodbury.

Measure Cake. Two eggs, one cup of sugar, half a cup of cream, half cup of butter, two and one half cups of flour, half a nutmeg, and one half teaspoonful of soda. Let it be thoroughly beaten, and add the soda last. Bake nearly an hour.

Telling Good Eggs. The following is a simple but sure way to tell good from bad eggs. Put them in water enough to cover them. All that lie flat, as they would on a smooth surface out of water are good. Those of which the big end rises are bad. The vessel used should have a smooth, level bottom.

☞ The "marriage knot" among the Burmese is very easily undone. If two persons are tired of each other's society, they dissolve partnership in the following touching but conclusive manner:—They respectively light a candle, and, shutting up their hut, sit down and wait quietly until one is burned out. The one whose candle burns out first gets up at once and leaves the house (and forever), taking nothing but the clothes he or she may have on at the time; all else becomes the property of the other party.

THE DOCTOR'S LETTER.

"By Jove! what can this mean? Is it a stupendous fraud, a trick, or what?"

And Dr. Pomeroy stared, almost vacantly, at the closely-written sheet he held in his hand. He read:—

"Doctor Pomeroy, I will not apologize for the unparalleled service I am about to ask of you; suffice it to say that I have heard of your struggles to maintain yourself and invalid mother, and realize how hard a task it is for one so young in the profession, and without friends in the great wilderness of houses called a city. Also, permit me to say, I have been informed of the cruel blow you have received from the hand of one you loved, who was unworthy of you; and yet I am not acquainted with you, nor you with me. Indeed, we have never looked upon one another's face. Nevertheless, I am about to ask you to do me a great favor. Will you come to South Street Church to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock? Come privately, unattended, and never reveal what takes place there. Will you give a stranger a lawful claim to your name, and yet not know whom you marry? If you will do so, I will make over to you $50,000, payable to your order at the City Bank, as soon as the ceremony is over. Trusting that the money will be a temptation to you, I shall anxiously await at the appointed time."

That was all. There was no signature—nothing at all to give any clue to the writer's address or abode. Indeed, it was so terse and unfeminine in its details, that he was tempted to believe some of his male friends were trying to play a joke on him.

"I will not go—I will not be fooled!" he said to himself.

He flung the missive down; then he picked it up, folded it carefully, and thrust it into his pocket.

He remembered that he had patients to visit, and went out; but everywhere the contents of that strange letter were ringing in his ears. He then went to see his mother. She was suffering even more than usual, and a number of dunning bills had been left for his consideration—bills which he had not the most remote idea how to meet. He threw them down, and buried his face in his hands.

"Poverty is a curse, mother!" he groaned; "I do not know which way to turn."

She tried to cheer him, but in vain. "Oh, if that letter was only real!" he thought. "Fifty thousand dollars would make me rich."

And so he fretted and worried until the appointed hour—one moment vowing he would not go near the place, and the next tempted to see the farce out.

Eight o'clock found him stealing in. He saw two ladies, closely veiled, and a gentleman standing in the upper part of the building, while the minister sat in the chair.

There was but one gas-jet lighted, and he could just distinguish the forms. As soon as he entered, the gentleman spoke to one of the ladies, and then she advanced to meet him. "Are you Dr. Pomeroy?" she asked in a low tone.

"I am."

She led him up to where the gentleman stood, and he extended his hand.

"How do you do, Pomeroy?" he said; and Pomeroy recognized in him the President of the City Bank. "I am here by the request of this young lady," pointing to one who had not moved or spoken, "to inform you that if you agree to her proposition, I am authorized to pay to your order the sum of fifty thousand dollars."

Pomeroy tried to speak, but his voice was choked. It was no fraud—it was reality; he was to bid farewell to poverty.

He stood motionless for a moment, then advanced and offered his arm to the lady. She took it without a quiver, and went to where the minister awaited them.

The ceremony was quickly performed.

Doctor Pomeroy signed his name, and then looked with considerable curiosity at the bold signature, "Ellen Latour," which his bride wrote down. The minister hastily filled out a certificate which he had brought with him by request, and which the maid and banker signed as witnesses. The bride took it, kissed it, and thrust it in her bosom. One moment more, and they glided swiftly from sight.

Doctor Pomeroy then wiped the perspiration from his brow, and asked:—

"Who is she?"

"I do not know," said the minister. "I was requested and paid to perform the ceremony, and keep it a secret. It is perfectly lawful."

"And I," said the banker, "did not see the lady's face. She deposited the money with me and requested my attendance here, to assure you that her promise should be fulfilled."

The three men separated; the gas was turned out; the curtain fell on the first act.

The next day Pomeroy tried to realize what he had done. He had sold his name to an unknown woman, but he thought that could not injure him.

"She must have been in deadly peril," he meditated, "to pay such an exorbitant price for a simple name."

He took an office further up-town, and moved his mother to a nice home. Patients came pouring in; a different class employed the rich Dr. Pomeroy than those who had employed the poor one.

* * * * *

Five years passed away, and he had gained a reputation, and added considerably to his bank account. He had been an indefatigable worker, and now felt that he needed rest for a while.

"We will take a trip to Europe, mother," he said. "It will do you more good than you can imagine."

A great many gentle hearts felt a pang to see "the good doctor" leave, although their endeavors to catch him had been in vain. He felt no preference for any of the opposite sex. He had recovered from his disappointment and he never ceased to remember that he was a married man, or to think kindly of the woman who so radically changed his life.

They traveled leisurely through the route they had marked out before they started, and one night found themselves in a French village.

About the middle of the night the doctor was awakened by some one tapping at his door, and calling him to come out.

He did so, and found the landlord, who told him in broken English that one of his countrymen had just fallen down stairs in a fit, and seeing his name registered as an M. D., they had called him up.

He went to an elegantly furnished room, where a man some fifty years of age was lying in a dangerous condition.

A young lady sat near the bed fanning him. The doctor hastily examined the patient and found that it was impossible for him to live; but the day passed, and still another, before he drew his last breath. He never recovered his consciousness.

The lady told Pomeroy that he was her father. His name was Eugene Sydedham, a native of England, and she would like to have him buried where he died. They were traveling for his health she went on to explain, and he was a widower. Her only remaining relative was a young sister, who was being educated in the convent of the Sacred Heart, at Paris.

After Mr. Sydenham was buried, Miss Sydenham went under the care of the doctor and his mother to Paris. She insisted upon their taking up their abode where she had her apartments, and so not a day passed, but she was with Mrs. Pomeroy. The old lady got warmly attached to her, and talked dolefully to her son about the time when they should be separated.

She told them confidentially not to wonder that she did not mourn for her father, for he had endeavored to wrong her so deeply that it was not love that kept her at his side; and that in all her life she had never been so happy as now, that she was free. Dr. Pomeroy watched her. At first he was gallant, but at last he began to be reserved and cold; a feeling which he dared not cherish was growing in his heart, and it alarmed him.

"I do not love her," he muttered to himself. "I am bound."

Then for the first time, he felt how heavy were the fetters that bound him. She noticed the change. She tried to beguile him to forget the grief that was evidently bearing on him; and at last in a fit of desperation he told her all.

"I am a married man?" said he impulsively. "I love you and am not free to love."

She recoiled, but bid him tell her all.

"It was cruel, unkind of her to bind you so," she said.

"No, no!" he ejaculated. "She saved me—she blessed me—and I shall always respect her, but never before did my bonds hurt me till I met you. Now I shall be miserable forever."

"You may meet her."

"Impossible."

"But possible," she said with a sorrowful look. "I know your Helen Latour."

"You know her?"

"Yes. To-morrow I will introduce you to her. She is anxious to see you—she knows you are here, and she believes you loved me, and wonders if you are as upright as she always thought you to be."

He bowed his face in his hands, and Miss Sydenham left him.

The hour had come which he had hoped for in by-gone days—he was to learn whom he had wedded—but it gave him no pleasure now.

At an early hour the next day a servant told him that Miss Latour awaited him in her private parlor, and he was ushered into a strange room.

He scarcely lifted his eyes as he entered, but when he did they fell upon Miss Sydenham.

"I am Ellen Latour," she said simply. "That is my real name, though I never anticipated to tell you the truth."

"Ellen Latour! My wife?" asked the doctor.

"Listen to my story before you blame me," she said. "The man you saw die was my step-father. He wedded my mother when I was about five years old, and sister Ida a baby. My mother was weakly and she died a few years later, leaving all my father's property in that man's hands. He was our sole guardian, to hold our property under his control until we were married, or became of age. He placed me in the Sacred Heart and kept me there until I was sixteen, and then took me out and proposed to marry me to a friend of his. I rebelled. One night I heard a conversation between them, and found that he was selling me for twenty thousand dollars in gold, that being the sum that was to be paid down to him out of my property the moment that Turner became my husband. I had no friends to go to. I was totally at a loss what to do. He did not allow me to go into society. I made no aquaintances, and instead of allowing me to stay in my mother's house he kept me travelling around the country. At last I proposed to compromise. I told my step-father to take me to America, and when I returned I would marry his friend. He complied, and I got my maid to gossip with a servant in a hotel, and by chance she told her your history, as her sister worked for your mother.

Just before I started from England, an uncle of my mother died and left fifty thousand dollars in my own right, which my step-father could not touch. I had it transferred to New York, and determined to save myself with it. Hearing of you I adopted the plan of getting you to marry me. When we returned to England and my step-father commanded me to fulfill my promise, I showed the marriage certificate. He swore, but he saw that his case was lost; I had outwitted him, I did not leave him. I stayed to protect my sister Ida from a similar fate. I never expected to see you. I intended to have you sue me for a divorce as soon as he should die, and it would not endanger my safety."

"But that intention will never be carried into effect," Dr. Pomeroy exclaimed. "You will be mine forever, Helen."

"Yours forever," she answered.

And when they went to see his mother, there were no happier people to be found in the whole world.

Years have passed since, and Ida finds a home with her sister, who never repents that she was saved from a fate worse than death, by her strange letter.

A Look around the World.

The latest and best authority gives the population of the globe at 2,350,000,000.

In America, 72,800,000.
In Europe, 587,000,000.
In Asia, 789,000,000.
In Africa, 188,000,000.
In Australia and Polynesia, 6,300,000.

The adherents of the principal sects, recounting the whole population, are supposed to be thus:—

Roman Catholics, 195,000,000.
Protestants, 57,130,000.
Mohammedans, 400,000,000.
Buddhists, 340,000,000.
And six oriental churches, 6,500,000.
Other Asiatic religions, 260,000,000.
Pagans, 200,000,000.
Jews, 6,000,000.

Didn't Mention That.

A girl called at the residence of a gentleman to apply for a place. The lady of the house asked for her reference.

"I have lived five years at my last place," said the girl. "If you want to know anything more about me ask Father Hawley."

The lady was favorably impressed with a girl who had lived five years without changing her place, but she concluded to call on Father Hawley.

"Do you know a girl named So-and-so?"

"Yes."

"She lived five years at her last place?"

"Yes."

"All correct so far." But as the lady turned to go, Father Hawley inquired:—

"Do you know where her last place was?"

"No, she didn't mention that."

"It was at the County Prison!"

Contaminated Water.

The Journal of Chemistry warns the drinkers of water of wells near dwellings to beware of the typhoid poison, sure to be found sooner or later in those reservoirs, if any of the house drainage can percolate them. The gelatinous matter often found upon the stones of a well is a poison to the human system, probably causing by its spores a fermentation of the blood, with abnormal heat or fever. Wholesome, untainted water is always free from all color and odor. To test it thoroughly, place half a pint in a clear bottle, with a few grains of lump sugar, and expose it, stoppered, to sunlight, in a window. If, even after an exposure of eight or ten days, the water becomes turbid, be sure that the water has been contaminated by sewage of some kind.—If it remains perfectly clear, it is pure and safe.

Where it Came From.

A Detroit girl picked up a new beau the other evening at church, and when they reached her father's gate he accepted her invitation to go in. He was perfumed to kill, and it wasn't long before his musk reached the back room in which the old folks sat. The old man was heard stubbing around, muttering and growling, and presently he opened the door and passed out and walked around the house. He came back after snuffing around for a few minutes, and pounding on the parlor door he inquired:

"E-vangeline, where's that piece of candle?"

"I don't know, father; why?" she inquired in return.

"There's a skunk or something or other under the addition, and I've got to hunt him out or we can't live here over night."

The young man didn't stay long after that.

☞ Nations can better win success by noble deeds than by the cruel destruction of human life for selfish aims.

For the Quincy Patriot.

"Out Side Questions."

Many years ago, a prominent clergyman, a Doctor of Divinity, who was settled over a large Congregational Church in a town in Norfolk County, had leave of absence for several months on a tour to Europe. During his absence the question of temperance was agitated in the community to that extent, that this Church voted to use unfermented wine at the communion. When the Pastor returned and ascertained what had been done he at once, (without any vote of the Church,) ordered it sent back and to get "some of the other kind."

A few years passed away and the Washingtonian movement swept over the land. The town was agitated somewhat with this reformatory movement, and application was made for the use of this Church for a lecture by that celebrated temperance reformer, John Hawkins. It was granted, but the Rev. Doctor was opposed to have him go into the pulpit. In his opinion this pulpit, (that was afterwards used in defence of the fugitive slave law,) was too sacred to be used by a reformatory man for that purpose.

This Clergyman, who was somewhat popular in his denomination, has long since departed this life, as has many of his wealthy and influential parishoners, who coincided with him in his views of the reformatory movements of that day.

Two of them left sons who were dissipated, and have been placed under guardianship to prevent them from squandering the wealth left them by their fathers. The son of a third became dissipated, spent his property, and was imprisoned for robbery. Another in more humble circumstances in life, but who held a prominent position in the Church and Society, had an only son who became somewhat dissipated and died in early life. Few if any of the descendants of these four families now attend public worship in that Church.

They were of that class who wanted only the gospel preached in the Church (the Gospel as they understood it,) and were made happy, like the late Hon. Rufus Choate, who said he sat under the preaching of Rev. Dr. Adams of Boston for more than twenty-five years, and went to his pew Sundays without fear of being disturbed by out side questions.

Newspaper Patronage.

There seems to be a great many different ways of defining and understanding the phrase "newspaper patronage," and as a party interested in a correct definition of the same, we give the following disquisition on the subject by one who knows whereof he speaks. It may serve, perhaps, as a mirror, in which certain parties may be able to "see themselves as others see them."

Many long and dreary years in the publishing business has forced the conviction upon us that newspaper patronage is a word of many definitions, and that a great majority of mankind are either ignorant of the correct definition, or are dishonest in a strict, Biblical sense of the word. Newspaper patronage has as many colors as the rainbow, and is as changeable as a chameleon.

One man comes in, subscribes for a paper, pays for it in advance, and goes home and reads it with a proud satisfaction that it is his. He hands in his advertisement, and the advantages thereof. This is patronage.

Another man asks you to send him the paper, and goes off without saying a word about the pay. Time flies on; you are in need of money, and ask him to pay the sum he owes you. He flies into a passion, perhaps pays, perhaps not, and orders his paper stopped. This is called patronage.

One man brings in a fifty cent advertisement and wants a two dollar puff thrown in, and when you decline, he goes off mad. Even this is called patronage.

One man don't take your paper. It is too high priced; but he borrows and reads it regularly. And that could be called newspaper patronage.

One man likes your paper; he takes a copy, pays for it, and gets his friends to do the same; he is not always grumbling to you or to others, but has a friendly word. If an accident occurs in his section he informs the editor. This is newspaper patronage.

One hands you a marriage or other notice, and asks for extra copies containing it; and when you ask him for pay for the papers, he looks surprised:—"You surely don't take any pay for such small matters?" This is called newspaper patronage.

One (it is good to see such) comes in and says:—"The year for which I paid is about to expire; I want to pay for another." He does so and retires. This is newspaper patronage.

It will be seen from the above that while certain kinds of patronage are the very life of the newspaper, there are other kinds more fatal to its health and circulation than the coils of a boa constrictor are to the luckless prey he patronizes.

☞ A man (says Dr. Hall) may be quick in manner, decided in speech, and inflexible in purpose; but he may be courteous and kind for all that.

☞ "Learn this lesson: No one cares about the size of your foot except yourself; therefore be comfortable."

The Quincy Patriot.

With Supplement.

SATURDAY, MAY 6, 1876.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

COMMENCED. The Assessors commenced their arduous duties of collecting the polls and estates in Quincy, on Monday morning last.

MAY DAY. May day morning although cool, was a lovely one, and the air was pure and bracing. The few, who went into the woods in search of May flowers, were rather meagrely rewarded, as the month of April had been too cold to bring the pretty blossoms to view.

A merry party of young ladies in a dozen buggies, from Weymouth and Brockton, were tempted from their beds for a ride at an early hour, and at about five o'clock, discussed the subject of beaux, over their breakfast, around the town pump in the Square.

The first of May seemed to be a general moving time for the city folks, if we might judge by the many loads that passed through town this week. The weather, the first part of the week, was very cold, quite windy and disagreeable, making one almost long for a more mild and balmy atmosphere. We were shown the other day some pretty wild flowers, that were picked from the prairies in Illinois, last month, and sent by mail to Miss Hussey, by her sister. She wrote that apple trees and lilac bushes were then in full bloom.

TEMPERANCE GATHERING. There was a very pleasant meeting at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening last. The attendance was quite small compared with previous gatherings, but probably it was because no public announcement had been made through the columns of the Patriot, or by circulars. The meeting was called to order by the President of the Club, and the audience joined in singing under the leadership of Sam'l E. Johnson. Short and interesting speeches were made by Col. Parker, Superintendent of our public schools, T. H. Wasson, William B. Worster, Samuel E. Johnson, Joseph W. Whiting 2d, and Henry H. Faxon.

READ NOTICE. Joseph T. French, will sell at auction, on Friday, May 12th, a very desirable property on Pleasant street in this town. It is in a pleasant locality, and is near the Quincy Adams depot, which makes it convenient for any one doing business in the city to secure a country home.

CENTENNIAL CAMP-FIRE. On Wednesday next, the opening day of the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia, there will be a grand rally at Faneuil Hall; every Post belonging to the Grand Army in this State is to be represented, and it is expected that they will rock the old cradle of liberty as their forefathers did in 1776. It will be seen by a notice in another column that Paul Revere Post of this town, voted to attend this centennial camp-fire, and they have extended an invitation to all soldiers and sailors in this town to join with them.

FOR THE CENTENNIAL. Frederick H. French and Hiram P. Abbott, of this town, leave here on Monday next. They go with their company, the Boston Lancers, who do escort duty for Gov. Rice, at the opening of the Centennial Exhibition, on Wednesday next.

YACHT RACES. The first regatta of the season will take place at Quincy Point, on Saturday, May 27, at 1.30 o'clock P. M. The champion regattas will take place off Mears' Hotel, Hough Neck, June 24, July 22 and August 26th.

On June 17th, there will be a review at 8 o'clock A. M., at Quincy Point, followed by an excursion down the harbor, to be participated in by all the members of the club.

PRESENTATION. At a meeting of the Tiger Engine Co., on Thursday evening, a sum of money was presented to Thos. Williams, one of their members who is about to leave town, as a testimonial of their appreciation of his services the past year.

☞ The warrant for the execution of Samuel J. Frost on the 26th of May, has been prepared in the Secretary of State's office. The Piper warrant will be delayed for the result of the effort to secure him a new trial.

☞ Good progress is made each day on the work on Robertson's Block opposite the Patriot Office. The bricks and stones are piled higher and higher. Load after load of lumber has arrived this week, and the carpenters have commenced their labors.

☞ The Legislature of Massachusetts was prorogued on Friday evening of last week at five minutes past ten o'clock, after a session of 114 days. This is the shortest since 1861, and the members should be commended for the economy, both of time and money, they have thus practiced in the interest of the State. Most of their acts will meet with the approbation of the people, although in two cases the corrective power of the veto has been invoked, to some purpose, and we believe for the public good. Two hundred and forty-seven acts and fifty-seven resolves received the approval of the Governor, and are now a part of the laws of the Commonwealth.

☞ At one haul of a seine in the Wethersfield cove, Conn., last week, over three hundred dozen, or nearly four thousand, alewives and twenty fine shad were landed. Alewives sell for five cents a dozen and shad for from twenty-five to seventy-five cents each, or ten cents per pound on the spot. An eighty pound halibut was caught off Watch Hill last week, the first fish of the kind caught in that vicinity for eight or nine years.

Wollaston Heights.

The exercises attending the organization of the first Congregational Church, and the dedication of their new house of worship, took place Thursday afternoon and evening. Twenty-one members presented letters for admission to the church, and nearly as many more will probably do so soon. These exercises of the council call were mainly conducted by Rev. Drs. Means, Alden and Cushing. The right hand of fellowship, was extended by Rev. A. H. Plumb of Boston.

After this exercise, tea was served to about one hundred in the vestry.

In the evening, the church building was formally dedicated. Rev. F. B. Doe of Wisconsin, preaching the sermon. For the amount of cost, few church edifices will exceed this in beauty and comfort. Rev. Dr. Cushing of Boston will preach here to-morrow at 10.45, A. M.

All are invited.

SALES. The following property, was sold at auction this week, by Joseph W. Lombard.

Estate on Willard street, formerly owned by George W. Ripley was sold on Monday last, to James Nightingale, for $2,585.

House and land on Water street, belonging to Elbridge F. Hayden, was sold on Tuesday to Jeremiah Nightingale for $412.

RELIGIOUS. Miss Mary Kelly of West Quincy, left here on Wednesday, to enter a convent, in Yorkville, New York, where she intends taking the veil. She carries with her the best wishes of her many friends who hope that health, Heaven's choicest blessing, will follow her, in the duties that she assumes in her new home. It seems rather sad to see one so young, withdraw from the world and seclude herself in the cloister, but as it is her own choice, she no doubt feels that she can better serve her Heavenly Father in a quiet retreat, than by mingling with the world.

MAY. On Monday morning last, the first of May, we noticed some blossoms on a pear tree in a warm southerly exposure; also a cherry tree, in Water street in blossom. The owner informed us that the cherry tree had been in bloom on the first of May each year, for the last twenty years, with the exception of two. Last year it did not blossom until about the twelfth of May.

JUBILEE. There will be a grand temperance jubilee at Hingham, on Wednesday evening next. The Quincy Reform Club are making arrangements to attend. There will be a special train for the accomodations of those desirous of going to the celebration.

AUCTION. Joseph W. Lombard will sell at auction on Monday next, furniture, fixtures and goods left in the store of G. W. Ripley on Willard street, West Quincy.

EAST WEYMOUTH. The Reform Club of East Weymouth had a beautiful silk flag, costing one hundred dollars presented to them, on Friday night of last week, before they left that place for Quincy to take part in the grand demonstration. It was a gift from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and Mrs. Gracey, president of the Association made the presentation in a very neat and appropriate speech. The ceremony took place in front of the Methodist Episcopal Church, where the ladies assembled, when the Club and Temple of Honor drew up before them. Mr. Hawes, the president of the Club received the gift and made a very neat and pleasing speech.

On the return of the Club to Weymouth they were given a rousing reception. A banquet was provided by the citizens on Middle street, tar barrels were blazing in several places, and all along the line of their march red and blue lights were burning, and every house was illuminated. Such a grand demonstration has not been witnessed since the fall of Richmond and the return of our triumphant Union soldiers. A club house, reading room, and restaurant will soon be opened by the Woman's Union.

WEYMOUTH. A Reform Club has been started in Weymouth. Judge Bumpus of the District Court, was one of the first to sign the pledge.

Mrs. P. H. Linton met with a painful injury, last week, a crochet needle in her pocket penetrating the thigh, just above the knee pan, the needle entering its entire length to the handle.

The drum corps of Weymouth will not go to the centennial with Brown's Brigade band, after all.

Two of the saloons in Weymouth have succumbed to the temperance pressure, and closed up.

☞ The smallest State tax and the shortest session of the Legislature for many years, are among the good fruits of the centennial year.

☞ At the request of the American Government the British authorities have decided to detain Winslow, the forger, ten days longer, pending further correspondence on the question of his extradition.

☞ A white ash tree over 130 years old, was cut down last week in Hingham. It stood in front of the old Bates house, which was erected in 1768. Lafayette slept in this house in 1778, and probably stood under the shade of this tree. The trunk of the tree was sound.

☞ Edward S. Stokes, who is now a gray headed man, will make an appeal for freedom before the General Term in Poughkeepsie on Monday next.

☞ Colonel Eliphalet Stone, of Dedham, agreeable to notice, gave away over 400 young Baldwin apple trees to all boys who applied on May Day and who promised to take good care of them. It is designed to inculcate horticultural tastes in the young.

☞ A Boston firm, it is said, works over from five to six hundred pounds of rancid butter every day, selling it again for new and good.

The officers of this company were elected by a large majority, which shows the good feeling the members have towards each other, and it is the hope of all that their officers will serve the company with as much credit as the ones who occupied their positions in 1875.

Of the Foreman and 1st Assistant, little may be said as they have occupied the same positions before and were always highly respected by their men.

The Steward was elected by a handsome majority, as he served as steward last year, and was well liked.

HOSE COMPANY. At the annual meeting of the W. M. French Hose Company, held at their house on Monday evening last, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the year ensuing:—

☞ A 12 year old son of Thomas J. Turpin of Randolph, hung himself in that town Wednesday morning, whether accidentally or not is not known.

OBITUARY. Mr. John Mears of Dorchester, whose death has been recently announced in the papers, was of the old firm of Prouty & Mears, well known not only in Boston, but throughout New England, thirty-five and forty years ago. Mr. Mears took a deep interest in public matters, in all scientific discoveries, and in labor saving machinery,—particularly in the agricultural departments. He was Treasurer of the town of Dorchester, seventeen years, from 1821 to 1838. While health and strength remained, he labored to benefit others, and to make himself useful in the world. Age and infirmities have kept him from the active scenes of life for many years past. He died at the advanced age of 81. Funeral services were held in Trinity Chapel, Neponset, on Wednesday last, and were conducted by Rev. Dr. Means of the 2d Congregational Church in Dorchester.

☞ Mr. E. D. Winslow's "household gods" were sold at auction on Thursday last. Books, chromos, sideboards and crystal gazoliers were knocked down, and the sportive auctioneer requested that the articles should be "extradited at once," to make room probably for the spoils of the next victim to extravagance and fast living.

District Convention.

Pursuant to a call, the Republicans of the Second Congressional District assembled by delegates in convention at Town Hall, in this place, on Wednesday last. Hon. John D. Long of Hingham was chosen Chairman, and Mr. Ezra Daval of Taunton, Secretary.

The Hon. John D. Long in assuming the duties of the Chair made a brief speech, in which he thanked the meeting for the honor. He congratulated the Convention upon the prospect of the campaign in the district, and had no fears of the result. Recognizing the blunders, the follies, the crimes of those who have brought reproach upon our standard, he did not hesitate to say that in his judgment there was never a brighter hour for the great Republican party of this country than at present, never a nobler opportunity, nor a fairer outlook.

The Chairman then appointed Messrs. Charles Marsh of Quincy, Seth Mann of Randolph and Mr. Savage of Taunton as a Committee on Credentials, and they reported twenty-six towns and one city represented by ninety-two delegates.

The first ballot taken resulted as follows:—

Whole number of votes,	93
Necessary to a choice,	49
A. A. Gilmore, had	10
Hon. F. A. Hobart,	44
Hon. Edward L. Pierce,	46
John E. Sanford,	86

Mr. Sanford was accordingly declared a choice of the convention.

The second ballot was as follows:—

Whole number of votes,	97
Necessary to a choice,	49
Hon. F. A. Hobart, had	47
Hon. Edwin L. Pierce,	50

Mr. Hobart moved that Mr. Sanford and Mr. Pierce's election be made unanimous, and the motion was put and carried without dissent.

Mr. J. P. Jordan of Quincy, offered the following:

Resolved,—Should the occasion require to harmonize the Convention at Cincinnati, that it may be expedient to nominate other than a strict party candidate; that our delegates may present the name of an eminent citizen of this district—Charles Francis Adams—for the Centennial President, as combining with eminent statesmanship, reform, honesty and integrity in the administration.

This gave rise to a discussion which, however, was nipped in the bud by a motion to lay the resolve on the table. In disposing thus summarily of the resolution the convention showed its desire not to pledge its delegation for the support of any particular candidate which may be brought before the Cincinnati Convention. Adjourned.

CAUCUS. The Democrats of this town will hold a caucus on Saturday evening of next week.

☞ The City Government of Concord, N. H., passed an ordinance abolishing the city liquor agency.

☞ Eight thousand borings have been made for inserting explosive matter in the obstructions at Hell Gate, New York.

Temperance.

Friends of humanity may well be congratulated on the success the reform movement in this vicinity has already attained.

It augurs well for a community that a patent palpable proof can be given, that it is capable of rising to a high pitch of enthusiasm in a moral reform.

It is part of the appropriate enquiry of all true reform that it shall appeal to the best instincts of our nature, not relaxing on the coercive power of legislation, but seeking the development of that inward strength which marks real growth in moral stature, and it is as a movement of this character, a spontaneous uprising of the people in behalf of the good, the true and the beautiful, the exaltation of the moral and reasonable over the merely animal and sensual, that it merits as it receives, the meed of general approbation.

Among the great scourges of human existence has always been reckoned, the misery-creating vice of intemperance. Poets have failed, with all their magical powers of expression, to delineate all its horrors, and the denunciations of moralists, have not been severe enough to comprehend its manifold evils.

Reforms that are permanent are reforms that are slow, for every vice depending as it does on tendencies of individual organizations, as well as on peculiarities of social environment, can only be subverted by a continuous process of persistent efforts in the direction of manliness and self-control. Sleepless vigilance should be the watch-word of all temperance organizations, for like the arch-enemy of mankind the seductions and temptations of drunkenness are ever presenting themselves, and ever stand ready to aid in the work of destruction. No man is safe who can only be temperate by fleeing from the presence of the rum-seller, and seeking a refuge from his power. A moral strength must be secured, that shall enable a man to walk the streets with head erect, and to defy the allurements that lead to faltering and ruin. Nothing less than this can constitute a true reform, and it is inasmuch as voluntary movements of the character of the present one, tend to develop this root and core of manhood that they deserve the hearty support of intelligent men.

This then is the duty of all desiring to aid in the good work now going on, to see to it that there shall be no hesitating in the path-way of this reform; to make sure, that what is already attained, shall be tenaciously held, and to create a high standard of manliness which placing but little reliance on mere external props and supports, shall be its own protection and its own efficient guide and support.

APPROPRIATE SERVICES. At the Universalist Sunday School, the Sabbath following the death of Elmer H. Chubbuck, services were held appropriate to the occasion. The services were opened by singing, "There is rest in the shadow of Jesus wing."

The Superintendent then spoke of the circumstances under which they assembled that morning. It was the first time since his connection with them, on which he had been called upon to announce the death of one of the members of the school. Elmer had been taken from the circle of the Sunday School on earth, and had gone into the Sabbath School in Heaven. He spoke very feelingly of the loss of one of their members and the breaking of the Sunday School circle; and urged upon the teachers and scholars the lessons which the loss teaches.

The responsive service for the loss of a scholar was then read, after which the Pastor spoke eloquently of Elmer's character, and his associations with him, and strove to enforce the consideration of those truths which make life pure and enjoyable, and make for our peace and comfort in the hour of death.

He closed with a fervent prayer, committing the teachers, officers and scholars into the keeping of the loving Father.

After singing, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," the school passed to the consideration of the morning lesson.

Many of the school were deeply affected during the services, and the school in its meetings sorely misses the little scholar. J. O. H.

ENTERTAINMENT. The Mount Pleasant Lodge, Independent Order of Good Templars, will give an entertainment, at Kennedy Hall, (Dudley street, Boston Highlands) on the evening, of Wednesday, May 10th, in aid of the "Boston Highland, Womans' Temperance Union;" this organization is much in need of funds, and the Mount Pleasant Lodge I. O. G. T., have kindly offered their services for the before mentioned evening. As this entertainment is likely to be a good one, it is probable that some of the members of tho Quincy Reform Club, might like to help in this good work, by being present. The programme for this entertainment will consist of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," and the Commedietta of the "Broken Hearted Club," both plays to be performed by a very able company. Doors open at 7.15 P. M.

☞ We hear the question often asked, where did you get that new nice fitting Spring suit for your boy. The reply is, Richards is the man and the Old Corner the place, 25 Dock Square, where I take my boy. Richards always keeps a large stock and we can be sure to find just what we want. His stock this Spring is very large and complete and prices far below any other store in Boston. Call and see if this is not so.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation, torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anaemenia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions. 4w

PUBLIC DEBT. The Public Debt has been decreased during the past month, $4,781,181.49; and since June 30, 1875, 20,750,487.93.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

JOHNSTON'S PATENT
Dry Sized Kalsomine
READY FOR USE.
MANUFACTURED AT
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale from the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

The Swallows.

Thoughts suggested by the return of the swallows; some of whose nests have annually, for many years, been built beneath the eaves of an ancient building near the writer's window.

BY HARVEY CARPENTER.

See the little, sprightly swallows,
Spying eaves and nooks and hollows;
Seeking some secluded rests,
Where to build their fragile nests;
And where they may, ere autumn come,
In safety rear their tender young.

Architects, by God instructed,
Build their nests so well constructed,
That the storms and cold and heat
Ne'er their purposes defeat;
Instinctively, O what more just!
The providence of God they trust.

Eagerly will they be catching
Food for those they have been watching;
Fledgelings then will raise their cry,
As the swallows hover nigh;
And each, will open, tiny beak,
Secure what its true instincts seek.

Autumn skies will come, portentous
Of conditions most momentous;
Then the swallows must prepare
To escape the chilling air;
Both old and young will meet some day,
And with a twitter, fly away.

God regards his creatures feeble,
Little birds as well as people;
Swallows then which droop and die,
Fall beneath His watchful eye;
If such His care for birds I see,
How great His love and grace to me!

Agricultural, &c.

Planting Potatoes.

The experience of the last 25 years goes to prove that the only advantage in planting large potatoes, is the sustenance that they afford to the growing tubers.—If a large potato be planted uncut, it acts in some degree as manure, till decomposed, and is a great aid to the growing plants in times of drouth, while a small one would produce neither of these benefits. But in rich soil, and in seasons of abundant rain, small potatoes will produce as good crops as large ones.—The usual practice of cutting large potatoes into several pieces, may be continued with general good results, according to the practice of farmers, for generations of time; but they should be cut lengthwise, each part to contain a portion of the eyes of the seed ends of the potatoes. Planting in hills about three feet apart, produces about the same crops that planting in drills does, the seed being placed about a foot apart in the drills, but in less quantity than on the hill system.

Well Invested.

Bingham, Me., Sept., 30 1875.

BRADLEY FERTILIZER CO.,

Gentlemen:—I have used all the different kinds of commercial fertilizers sold in this vicinity. I have used your Super-phosphate of Lime with other kinds in the same field at the same time, thereby giving me a chance to decide what kind was best for me to buy. This season I bought one-half ton of your agents, S. A. & A. Dinsmore. I sowed two casks broadcast on two acres of poor land with no other manure and sowed the same with India wheat; the result was a very heavy growth, quite as much as could ripen well. Where the Phosphate was not sown, the wheat was not worth harvesting. I use it with very good results on my corn and potatoes.—Intend to use more next year and would recommend it to every farmer. I contend that money paid out for phosphate is well invested.

Yours truly, CHANDLER BAKER.

☞ The farmers in New Ipswich, N. H., are trying to solve a new problem. It is "How can a cow give milk without ever having borne a calf?" The cow in question is the property of Lyman Patridge in Ipswich. She is of Devonshire breed, and of dark red color, and will be two years old next May. When at the age of 13 months, she gave from three to five quarts of milk a day, and last summer Mr. Patridge made 5 lbs. of butter from her. He is offered a high price for her by farmers interested in such rarities.

TO KILL LICE IN POULTRY HOUSES. Fumigate with brimstone and charcoal, by setting fire to it on some iron pan, and use it freely, burning three or four pounds of it at one time, and eradicate them at once. It will make a big smoke, but there need be no danger. It will kill all the lice, sure.

☞ Forest planting is thriving in Minnesota. The St. Paul and Pacific railroad has set out over 4,000,000 young trees, and altogether it is estimated that 20,000,000 have been planted on the prairie land.

Anecdotes.

Two Dutchmen once got into a dispute about the English language, each one contending that he could command the best. They made a bet, at length, and appointed a judge to decide between them, and accordingly they began.

"Vell, Chon," said the first, "did it rain to-morrow?"

"I shall tink it vash," said John.

Wasn't that judge in a quandary?

Curran was once asked by one of his brother counsellors, "Do you see any thing ridiculous in this wig?"

"Nothing but the head," was the reply.

"Pa, do storms ever make malt liquors?"

"No, child. Why do you ask?"

"Because I heard ma tell Jane to bring in the clothes for a storm was brewing."

"Landlord, didn't you ever have a gentleman stop with you before?"

"Are you a gentleman?"

"Yes, I am."

"Then I never had one stop with me before."

GEOLOGICAL DISCUSSION. Principal—"Was it colder or warmer a hundred years ago than at present?"

Pupil (honestly)—"I really don't recollect, sir."

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For the relief and cure of all derangements in the stomach, liver, and bowels. They are a mild aperient, and an excellent purgative. Being purely vegetable, they contain no mercury or mineral whatever. Much serious sickness and suffering is prevented by their timely use; and every family should have them on hand for their protection and relief, when required. Long experience has proved them to be the safest, surest, and best of all the Pills with which the market abounds. By their occasional use, the blood is purified, the corruptions of the system expelled, obstructions removed, and the whole machinery of life restored to its healthy activity. Internal organs which become clogged and sluggish are cleansed by Ayer's Pills, and stimulated into action. Thus incipient disease is changed into health, the value of which change, when reckoned on the vast multitudes who enjoy it, can hardly be computed. Their sugar coating makes them pleasant to take, and preserves their virtues unimpaired for any length of time, so that they are ever fresh, and perfectly reliable. Although searching, they are mild, and operate without disturbance to the constitution, or diet, or occupation.

Full directions are given on the wrapper to each box, how to use them as a Family Physic, and for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Quincy:

The Assessors of the Town of Quincy, hereby give notice to the Inhabitants of said Town, and all other Persons liable to pay Taxes therein, that they will be at the Office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May from 1 1-2 to 5 o'clock, P. Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the Assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors be assessed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

JOHNSTON'S PATENT
Dry Sized Kalsomine
READY FOR USE.
MANUFACTURED AT
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH. — They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale from the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH. — They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Swallow.

BY THE HERMIT.

Sure, kindness in the birds is shown,
For here they come for daily cheer:
The birdies love the hermit's home,
And manifest for him no fear.

A swallow, built its nest one day,
In his chimney, curiously, enough,
It was not made of grass, or hay,
But of short twigs and sticky stuff.

The swallow, swallowing the glue,
That glued the nest together,
The sticks were rough, and the nest too,
Nor softened with any feather.

In that hard nest, four eggs were laid,
Such eggs as mother swallows lay:
On which, the swallow, sat 'tis said,
And hatched as all swallows may.

And so it was, those little ones,
Thus to a new life awoke:
And found their bed, glued to the stones,
Besmeared o'er with soot and smoke.

And, still growing, they filled their bed,
That hung, thus high, upon the wall;
They swallowed so much in being fed,
That, swift, it caused their nest to fall!

This fall it was, that killed them, quite,
For, sure, they never swallowed more!
Their mother, left them in a fright,
And darted quickly out the door.

Thus falling, it struck them dead!
Yes, dead! Nor life in them could be.
The old one, shocked, then quickly fled,
And left her nest and young to me.

Poor little birds! your life was brief,
And, sad indeed the swallows' lot!
But thus like you, we swallow grief,
And, soon like you will be forgot.

And thus, we mortals may be taught,
How much of our own grief we make,
Even when doing as we aught,
We suffer for each other's sake.

LADY FINGERS. One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, three cups of flour, four eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately; flavor with lemon; add enough flour to make the dough into rolls the size of the finger; it will spread in the oven to a thin cake; when baked dip in chocolate icing.

RHUBARB MARMALADE. Peel five oranges, taking away the white rind and pips; put the pulp into the stewpan, with the peel cut very small; add five pounds of rhubarb, cut small, and four pounds of loaf sugar; boil the whole two hours, and the fruit half an hour before adding the sugar. Three lemons instead of five oranges will make an agreeable change.

The Coquette's Punishment.

"So Julia Nottingham is engaged at last," said Mrs. Whiteley. "Well, I'm sure I'm very glad to hear it."

But she spoke in a tone which belied her words. For, somehow, Julia Nottingham was not popular among the ladies of her acquaintance.

"O, yes," said Mrs. Sibthorpe, with a sagacious nod of the head. "I have it from the very best authority—her own aunt."

"Indeed!" said Mrs. Whiteley.

"A rich widower," said Mrs. Sibthorpe. "Fifty years old, and bald."

O!" said Mrs. Whiteley. "There's no fool like an old fool."

"Keeps his own carriage and horses, and has bought an elegant country seat.

"Julia will queen it now," said Mrs. Whiteley almost enviously.

Mrs. Whiteley be it understood, was a widow not quite past the boundaries of youth, and not at all averse to a second marriage with some eligible parti.

"And how about Clarence Egerton?"

"O, she's thrown him over, of course," said Mrs. Sibthorpe. "That was nothing but a flirtation."

"Some people have all the luck," sighed Mrs. Whiteley.

And while her good fortune was the subject of popular gossip, Miss Nottingham herself sat in her own room at home, complacently surveying the set of solitaire pearl embedded in blue velvet, and the magnificent dead gold bracelets, which had just arrived with Mr. Philpotts' card attached.

"How superb!" said Mrs. Nottingham, a brisk little woman, with gray curls and a suspiciously unchanging bloom on each cheek.

"O, yes," said Julia indifferently.—"But I wish his name were any thing but Philpotts.

"Shakspeare says, "What's in a name?" archly rejoined the mother.

"Very likely," said Mrs. Nottingham, with a toss of the head; but you see Shakspeare wasn't a young lady just about to be married."

And she thought regretfully, notwithstanding her callous coquette heart, of poor Clarence Egerton, who had magnificent curls and a profile like Adonis.

But she went smilingly down to meet her middle aged fiancee that afternoon.

"My own Julia!" said Mr. Philpotts, beamingly.

"Dear Hiram!" sweetly responded Julia, with a little swallow of the unromantic Christian name in her throat.

"I have brought you a bouquet for Mrs. Poddington's reception to night," said Mr. Philpotts, producing a miracle of the florist art, wrapped in as many silver papers as a mummy.

"How kind of you, love," said Miss Nottingham.

"I will call for you in the carriage, at nine precisely," added Philpotts.

"I'm sure it's very considerate, dear," smiled Julia.

"And here," bringing out of his pocket a heavy gold necklace, from which hung a diamond-set locket, "is a trifle which I hope you will oblige me by wearing to-night."

Julia's eyes sparkled. She was a miser at heart, and gold and diamonds were very beautiful in her eyes. It was worth while, she reflected, to marry a man old enough to be her father, for the sake of treasures such as these.

But when the carriage came that evening to convey her to Mrs. Poddington's ball it was empty, and the servant handed her a note from Mr. Philpotts. He had an attack of his old enemy, the rheumatism, he wrote, and found himself most reluctantly compelled to remain at home.

"All the better," said Miss Julia to herself, with a last glance at the mirror before she wrapped the white cashmere opera cloak about her shoulders, and tripped lightly down stairs. "I can have a charming time with poor, dear Clarence, who is never at loss for something to say, and waltzes beautifully.

Miss Nottingham was not displeased with her own appearance, in silver-green silk, half hidden by clouds of snowy tulle, and a set of emeralds, which had been Mr. Philpotts' gift.

"Yes," said she, with a complacent little nod, as her mother complimented her on her becoming dress, "it's all well enough. But just wait until I come out in black velvet and diamonds as a matron."

Miss Nottingham enjoyed herself that evening. She waltzed to her heart's content, flirted enough for three, and finally disappeared in the green recesses of the conservatory with the straight-nosed Clarence Egerton.

The Poddingtons had more money than they knew what to do with, and had expended a goodly portion of it in the decoration of the great arched palace of plate glass which opened out of the supper-room. Acacias brushed the roof, passion vines swung their purple cups on every side, and a little grove of palms and oleanders in the centre enclosed a sparkling fountain of cooling spray, which tinkled down among mossy rocks, and into clusters of pale green ferns, like a forest waterfall.

Just within this enchanted nook a rustic seat, afforded an excellent corner for flirtation, and of course Miss Julia Nottingham and her rejected swain found their way to it.

"Now don't be ridiculous, Clarence," said Julia. "Let go my hand."

"But you shall answer me first," persisted Clarence. "You shall tell me whether you really love this old money-making machine you're going to marry."

"Of course I don't love him!"

"And you do love me?"

"Well, yes, I do—if that will be any satisfaction to you."

"Then, Julia, it is to me you should wed!" cried out the young man.

"Now you are getting silly again," said Julia, imperiously withdrawing the hand, which Mr. Egerton had contrived to keep captive until then. "When you know very well that your entire income would hardly keep me in gloves and slippers!"

"It's as well to be honest about it," said Miss Nottingham. "I do like you the best—and I shall appoint my chevalier-in-chief when I am married. To carry my fan and boquets, you know, and take me out to morning concerts and matinees, when my husband is at the bank. But old Philpotts is rich—and that's why I intend to marry him. Of course I don't love him—who could be expected to love a bald-headed old man like that? But I dare say I shall make a very good sort of a wife; and he can't live forever, you know, so when I am a rich widow I mean to suit myself."

"Don't, I beg of you, wait for that!" cried out a hoarse voice, half-choked with rage.

And, to Miss Nothingham's great dismay and surprise, Mr. Philpotts himself tumbled into the fountain-sparkling nook.

"I'm a bald-headed old man, am I?—I'm a mere money-making machine? Miss Nottingham, I couldn't have credited this if I hadn't heard it with my own ears. Perhaps you will one day be a rich widow, Miss Nottingham, but you won't be mine. I beg to release you from your engagement."

And Mr. Philpotts stalked out of the fairy bower.

Miss Nottingham sat looking after him, with clasped hands, and a face as pale as ashes. Clarence Egerton pulled hard at his moustache.

"Upon my word," said he, secretly enjoying the discomfiture of the young lady who had so coolly thrown him over but a few weeks since, "this is what one would call a pretty kettle of fish. The old chap must have overheard every word."

It was quite true, Mr. Philpotts, finding himself better as the hour for the reception approached, had resolved to give Miss Nottingham an agreeable surprise. He dressed himself and came to Mrs. Poddington's, a little late, to be sure, but yet in tolerably good time. Hearing from some one that Miss Nottingham had gone into the conservatory, he innocently followed her thither, and heard what the reader already knows.

Miss Nottingham's wedding-dress was never worn, and she is still on the lookout for a successor to the "rich old man" that she did not marry.

Ten Excellent Rules.

1. Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.

2. Never trouble others for what you can do yourself.

3. Never spend money before you have it.

4. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap.

5. Pride costs more than hunger, thirst or cold.

6. Never have to repent of having eaten too much.

7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

8. How much pain have those evils cost us which never happened! Wait, then, till trials come.

9. Take things always by their smooth handle. Make the most of mercies and do not exaggerate trials.

10. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred. He that does this will save himself from much sin and many sorrows.

Are We Degenerating.

Bayard Taylor says that the assertion that woman always held an inferior position to man, is glaringly false, for in ancient Egypt it is well known that women were honored and respected equally with men. Women often sat upon the throne and administered the affairs of government. There was also in Egypt a lofty appreciation of the marriage tie, and the wife's name was often placed before that of her husband, and the sons frequently bore the names of the mothers instead of those of the fathers. It is impossible, he says, to look upon the statutes of this period, and not feel what a high degree of culture was fairly claimed by the race. The surgical instruments are indentical with those of the present day, and various household utensils the same. So it follows that the more woman is equalized with man in the affairs of life, the greater the degree of civilization.

Early History of Scituate.

The following interesting sketch from the early history of Scituate, Mass., we copy from the Hingham Journal:—

Two hundred years ago, on the 20th of May, 1676, the Indians made their last desperate attack on the town of Scituate. They had made an attack upon Hingham on the 19th, killing John Jacob, of Glad Tidings Plain. The next morning, after burning five houses in Hingham, they hastened to Scituate by the Plymouth road. They came into Scituate by the "Indian path," so called, which led from Scituate to the Matakeeset settlements at Indian Head Ponds, by "the Cornet's Mill," on the Third Herring Brook, near the residence of the late Major Winslow. This saw mill they burnt, and tradition tells that they wounded and burnt a man in it; but this is doubtful. They then proceeded to Capt. Joseph Sylvester's and burnt his house. It stood north of the Episcopal Church hill, and nearly on the same spot where stands the mansion of Mr. Samuel Waterman. There was a garrison of twelve men at Joseph Barstow's, three-fourths of a mile south of Capt. Sylvester's, which they probably avoided, and proceeded down towards the town, burning as they went. But unfortunately we are only able to mention a few of the houses so destroyed, which we find incidentally mentioned in our town records. The next house which they burnt (of which we have any record,) was Wm. Blackmore's. It stood where stands the house of the late Capt. Elijah Curtis, forty rods west of the head of the lane that leads to Union Bridge, and on the north side of the street, (where Rev. Wm. Fish, of South Scituate, now resides.) Wm. Blackmore was killed in a former attack on the 21st of April. What was the fate of his family has not been ascertained; probably, however, they had escaped to the "block house," on the bank of the river, but fifty rods distant. The block house was attacked, but not carried. John James, however, whose house was near the block house, received a mortal wound, lingered about six weeks and died. The Indians then hastened forward to attack the principal garrison at Charles Stockbridge's. (The garrison was on the same locality where now stands the summer residence of the late Esq. Williams, of Boston.) Their path may be traced directly onward towards this garrison. The house of Nicholas (the Swede,) was next burnt, which stood on a hill thirty rods northeast of Parker lane. We observe that the town voted, the next year to allow him three pounds towards re-building his house. They passed over Walnut Tree Hill, on the northward of the late Judge William Cushing's, and entered Ewell's house, which stood at the "turn of the road," which spot may be known in modern times, by saying it was nearly mid-way between Judge Cushing's mansion and farm house. (It is on the southerly road leading from South Scituate to Greenbush, where the house of Mr. Philander Shaw now stands.) Ewell's wife was alone save an infant grandchild, John Northey, sleeping in the cradle. The house being situated beneath a high hill, she had no notice of the approach of the savages until they were rushing down the hill toward the house. In a moment of alarm she fled towards the garrison, which was not more than sixty rods distant, and either through momentary forgetfulness or despair, or with the hope of alarming the garrison in season, she forgot the child. She reached the garrison in safety. The savages entered her house, and stopping only to take the bread from the oven which she was in the act of putting in when first alarmed, they rushed forward to assault the garrison. After they had become closely engaged, Ewell's wife returned by a circuitous path, to learn the fate of the babe, and to her happy surprise found it quietly sleeping as she had left it. She carried it in safety to the garrison. In a few hours afterwards the house was burnt. There was a considerable village around this place, and the houses of Northey, Palmer, Russell, Thomas King, Jr., and some others were doubtless burnt. The garrison house of Stockbridge, was pallisadoed on three sides, the fourth being defended by the mill pond. Beside this there was a small outwork near the mill, on a little island between the mill stream and the waste way, where a blacksmith's shop has for several years stood. It was thought to be a point of importance to the settlement to defend these mills. Here the Indians fought several hours, made many efforts to fire the buildings, and sustained heavy losses from the well-directed shot from the garrison. They were not repulsed until night closed, when nearly the whole force of the town that was left at home, was collected for the purpose. Lieut. Buck had mustered all the men below, and the veteran Cornet Stetson had descended the river with what people could be raised in the south part of the town. Unfortunately, Captain John Williams, with thirty Scituate men, was absent, "ranging the woods" about Namaskett, (Middleboro.)

Took Away Her Teeth.

True love has its usual unpleasant course in the bosom of a woman in the upper part of Evansville, Ind., who loved not wisely but too well. Her lover presented her with a late style of false teeth to replace those missing from between her lips where his were wont to stray and steal the dew of love. But coldness finally came, and he sought another object for his affections. She, too, happened to be toothless, and the lover had recourse to her whom he had deserted, and the teeth were wrested from her and presented to the new love. No. 1 wants the assistance of the police to recover the apparatus wherewith she disposes of her usual pabulum.

Easy Times.

There is one simple rule that will always convert hard times into easy times: Never buy what you have not money to pay for. This does not necessarily imply that you must always buy for cash. It is often more convenient to keep an open account. But it does mean that your savings bank account must always keep a little ahead of your baker's, and grocer's, and butchers's. Most of us keep it a little behind; many of us a great way behind.

Any industrious, sober man, with a regular vocation and a home, can easily get credit. The temptation is strong to use it. He will have money next month; he can pay then. So we go on trading on our expectations of the future, and spending our money before we earn it. This makes easy times hard; when the whole community does it the times are hard for us all. And that is the trouble now. We have been discounting on the future. Now our paper is coming back on us faster then we like to take it up.

There are two ways of adjusting our purchases; one is to buy what we need; the other is to buy what we now have the means to pay for. There are no limits to need; there are very narrow limits to payment. He who buys what he needs is in perpetual debt; he who buys what he can pay for, lives in sunshine. It is better to wear your own shabby coat than your tailor's glossy one; to walk on your own legs than to ride in a beggar's carriage; to eat a rump steak that you have paid for, than to eat a tenderloin and owe for it.

Thrift is only another name for self denial. Whatever your income is, you can always have plenty of money if you will only resolutely refuse to spend money till after you have received it.—Illinois Christian Weekly.

Board and Lodging for Boots.

A short time ago, one of our citizens, who loves a joke about as well as folks generally do, had occasion to visit one of the small towns in the interior of the State; and knowing he would have considerable walking over muddy roads, he took with him a pair of long rubber boots. He arrived at his destination about nine o'clock in the evening, and upon inquiry he found the only tavern in the place was half a mile from the station. No conveyance was to be had, and the road was muddy in the extreme. Congratulating himself on having his long boots, he set off, and found the mud in some spots so deep, his boots were barely long enough. He reached the hotel at last, looking rather soiled about the feet. After supper, he inquired the charge for lodging.

"We usually charge," answered the landlord—who also had fun in his compositions—"twenty-five cents; but if a man goes to bed with such boots as them on, (pointing to his customer's feet,) we charge him fifty cents."

"A very good idea, I should think, replied the traveler.

After half an hour's conversation, the landlord showed him to his room, and they parted for the night, mutually pleased with each other The next morning our friend arose late, and inquiring for the landlord, found he had gone from home to attend to some business. After breakfast he handed a dollar to the landlord's wife, saying:

"There is fifty cents for my supper and breakfast, and fifty cents for my lodging."

"Twenty-five cents is all we charge for lodging," said the landlady.

"Yes," returned the stranger, "under ordinary circumstances; but in this case fifty cents is not too much."

The stranger departed, and the lady was deep in conjecture as to what could be the circumstances which required a man to pay double price for lodging, when the husband returned.

"Has that man who slept in the front chamber come down yet?" he asked.

"Yes," answered his wife, "and he has gone away. He paid fifty cents for his lodgings, and also said, under the circumstances, it was all right."

"The d—l he did!" exclaimed the landlord, rushing up stairs.

His wife followed, to learn the meaning of such a strange proceeding, and found her husband with the bed clothes turned down, and best bed looking more fit to plant potatoes in than it did for a human being to sleep in.

"You saw that man when he came here last night?"

"Yes."

"You saw his boots, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well," said the landlord, "the scamp slept in 'em."

A few days after, the traveler, on his return home, put up at the same tavern. Neither himself or the landlord said anything about the boots, which were in about the same condition as on the previous occasion; but the landlady looked daggers at him and eyed his boots with much anxiety. About ten o'clock, he said he would retire; "and by the way landlord, said he, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "what do you usually charge for lodging?"

"We charge," answered the landlord, with a most tremendous emphasis, "twenty-five cents."

Margetts with a handsome blue banner beautifully trimmed with gold lace and tassels. The president in a neat speech thanked the ladies for their beautiful gift. The procession then marched through several of the principal streets to the Agricultural Hall, where able and eloquent speeches were listened to until near midnight. Bountiful collation was furnished the guests and a general good time was enjoyed. About fifty came forward and signed the pledge.

Letter from North Weymouth.

The temperance wave, which is sweeping over New England with such tremendous power, has already reached this section of the town—the old garden of Weymouth. In its course across the plains and through the valleys, it has swept from our midst every vestige of beer; the tide has carried it away, and now no beer is sold in the place. The people in Old Spain have every reason to rejoice and thank God that those gentlemen who had been dispensing beer so long to their patrons, come out voluntarily, like honest men, and virtually said to the temperance wave, Roll on. Let your billows rise higher, and higher, until every beer-shop shall be swept from our land. Mr. Webster Burrell, proprietor of the saloon on Athens street, not only ceased to sell beer, but after the organization of the Reform Club, presented to them a roll of greenbacks, to aid them in keeping the wave in motion.

Our tonsorial artist, Alonzo Cleverly, who kept a saloon on Sea street, has stopped selling beer, and vacated his rooms, which he has occupied for several years, and is having a new building erected on a short street, leading from Sea street to Baker's court, which is nearly completed; where he will be happy to meet his old friends and patrons, and attend to their several wants, professionally and satisfactorily.

The Reform club have leased the rooms formerly occupied by Mr. Cleverly in Harmonial Hall building, and fitted them up in fine styles. The Ladies' Temperance Union lent their assistance in renovating and fitting up their rooms, which has been done with much taste. The Ladies are deserving of much credit for their efforts in assisting the Club in making the rooms pleasant and attractive. The room fronting the street is furnished and occupied for a reading room.

The Club meet every evening and enjoy themselves reading, and in various ways,—sociably and profitably to all. The Club have leased Harmonial Hall, where they hold their regular meetings. The hall, as well as the reading room, is embellished most elegantly. The Club numbers about one hundred members, and new ones are joining every week. Everything seems to be encouraging, the temperance wave does not subside in the least, the interest is still increasing, and may it continue to increase, until the Club shall count their members by thousands.

Rev. Mr. Voorhees, Pastor of the Pilgrim Church, delivered a very able and interesting temperance lecture in the Vestry, Wednesday evening of last week, to a large and appreciative audience. Mr. Voorhees is a zealous and able worker in the cause, and is doing whatever he can to induce every one to sign the pledge; and to live not only for temperance, but invites all, old and young to give their hearts to God and become christian workers in God's vineyard,—then the temperance cause will be a success, and the reformation a final triumph.

MAY 9th, 1876.

Centennialism just now is the order of the day. Like a huge tree spreading its branches in every direction it seems to overshadow the land. At one o'clock, P. M., the active part of the Government will take its temporary flight to the City of Brotherly Love, for the purpose of being present to witness the grand opening to-morrow. Special trains and all other necessary arrangements having been made by the proper officers of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad for them on its accommodation (that is the government.)

Investigations, Examining Committees, accussant witnesses, are all hidden or lost sight of in the more agreeable shade of the great Centennial. There is scarcely a Washingtonian who has not determined to visit Philadelphia before its close. As doubtless to be asked when it is all over, "Did you visit the Centennial," and to be compelled to answer no, will be mortifying indeed.—Such is fashion. One might as well be seen on the street with his grandfather's clothes on, as to admit that he had not seen the Centennial.

The next most prominent topic here, is the visit of Don Pedro, the Emperor of Brazil, and his movements. He is travelling simply as a Brazillian nobleman, and eschews all parade or public demonstration. The energy and activity he displays is really surprising, particularly for one of his extreme southern birth and education. He is up early in the morning and before half of our citizens have made their morning meal, he has visited half a dozen places of interest and enjoyed the morning air. By his quiet and unostentatious manners, and the sagacious comments he has made upon our city and national affairs, he has made here in common with all other places he has visited, a most favorable impression.

There has been more or less agitation in the large world of candidates the past week. Mr. Bristow shows some unexpected strength, but Mr. Blaine, as for a long time past appears to be leading all other candidates for the Cincinnati nomination. Of course it is utterly impossible to say who will be the coming man. Perhaps as in many a former instance, it will be some name that has never as yet been breathed in the political world. The disappointment to some of the prominent candidates for the nomination will in all probability be as great as was that of Mr. Seward when Mr. Lincoln received the nomination, he, Mr. S., so fully expected. The stars that appear brightest in the political horizon just now are Blaine and Bristow on the one side and Thurman and Davis on the other, but in what order they will be presented it is difficult to determine.

MAXWELL.

TEMPERANCE. Another rally in the cause was held on Wednesday evening, at the Town Hall, S. L. Gooch in the chair. D. Banks McKenzie of the Appleton Home, spoke in his usual interesting manner, to a crowded house. Mrs. Braden of Wollaston, sang some fine songs, and the cause is still prospering.

SURPRISE. On Thursday evening, Mr. Willie Tupper was surprised on returning to his home, to find a very large number of his friends from Stoughton and from Braintree, assembled at his house all ready for a good time. The programme was fully carried out, and the time passed in music, dancing, feasting and sociability.

LADIES' RALLY. Another Temperance rally is to be enjoyed on Saturday evening, arranged and conducted by the Ladies' Christian Aid Society. Mrs. Livesey, the president, will preside and the meeting is to be carried on wholly by the ladies.

☞ Richards, the clothier, 24 and 25 Dock Square, Boston, is a household word to all the Men and Boys who get "suited" at his old and popular headquarters. The Good Samaritans continue to push onward in the good work, with great vigor. Large numbers of new signatures have been added to the pledge, until the Club now numbers over 1650. Many were formerly the worst drinkers in town, but are now most zealous in serving the cause of temperance, making earnest efforts to induce their old associates to follow their example. Many heads of families, whose wives and children were suffering for the necessaries of life, owing to the drinking habits of husbands and fathers at the time of joining the Club, are now living sober lives, and providing their families with all the comforts of life. Instead of being dependant upon charity, and a burden to their friends, are respected and industrious citizens; contributing to the wealth and material prosperity of the country. At the meetings of the Club, the reformed men deliver short and just such effective addresses, as only they can deliver. The exercises are agreeably varied with some very fine music, and are in every way a success. It looks as though the last opponent to temperance will soon succumb, and this ancient town keep the lead in this glorious work of reformation.

The following is a short sketch of the life of Geo. H. Goward, Esq., President of the Good Samaritan Club of Stoughton. Mr. Goward was born in the town of North Easton, on the 2d day of Feb., in the year 1834. His parents shortly after his birth, removed to Stoughton, where he has since resided. He was soon engaged in the boot business and selected this occupation as a permanent trade; and, with the exception of seven years as a store-keeper, he has followed it ever since. He was one of the foremost advocates of a public library, and worked diligently for the purpose, and succeeded with the aid of a few other gentlemen of wealth and influence, in establishing one about three or four years age. The library contains about 1700 volumes, including a donation of Louis Clapp, Esq., who presented them with $500.00 worth of first class literature. Mr. Goward has commanded nearly all of the best fire companies; was Selectman, Assessor and Overseer of the Poor in 1869 and 70; Member of the General Court for 1870, and is a gentleman highly respected for his sterling integrity and high qualifications, for the honored position he now holds in the esteem of his fellow men. He was elected President Jan. 13th, and has continued in that position ever since. His genial and forbearing spirit, has earned for him a place in the hearts of his fellow-men, which would be difficult for another to fill. Long may he continue in the grand work he has so auspiciously begun, and finally reach that haven of rest where the traveller is never weary.

The meeting on Saturday evening was as usual very largely attended, many being unable to obtain even standing room. After singing by the choir, prayer was offered by Brother Stiles of Maine. Mr. N. F. Foster read a very interesting and instructive letter from S. C. Phinney, Esq., who is absent on business, which was received with loud and prolonged applause. The first speaker of the evening, was Brother Smith. He didn't care how low a man had been, if he signs, he will be respected by all. Some say temperance don't amount to much, but he cited an instance where a slave was sold for $1100, on account of his temperance principles,—Rob't Porter, Jr. Many thought the interest would die out, but when I see such a large and delighted audience as is here assembled, I feel that we are on the increase, rather than the decrease. I feel that we should all work earnestly and unitedly in behalf of this grand movement. I hope no one will work against us, and that those who come after us, may point with pride to our records in the way of reform.

John Hammond of Canton, told his experience on the night of the first meeting in Canton. Brother Bliss came, and he went to hear him. When he went home that night, after the meeting, he was so interested in what Mr. B. had said, that he tore down his bar, and corked all his bottles tight, never again to open them as a destroyer of happiness and mankind. He was once the leading liquor dealer of Canton.

Calvin Howland as usual gave one of his bright and witty speeches. He said we have laid aside the toils and cares of another week, and now come together to render thanks to the most high, for the good and noble work that has been done here. The gospel has been preached for 1800 years and will be preached for years to come. We intend to preach against intemperance, and now is the time to save yourselves from eternal perdition. I never saw a better time for the benefit of our fellow-men. Now is the time to manifest your goodness for the cause. We are making Christians every day, which is one of the great results of our labors in the cause of justice and right. Many of our Christian people don't like the idea of a smoking room, thinking it tends to injure the morals of youth. Is it not better for those young men to go to our rooms and smoke and play games, than to be playing in yonder saloon for beer and other liquors.

The meeting closed by singing the Doxology. In closing we would refer to the splendid music furnished by Hill's Orchestra, and the Stoughton Choir under the direction of Mr. Warr. They are highly proficient in the musical line, and evince a great degree of talent and skill,—the equal of which it would be very difficult to find in any country town in the State.

Philadelphia Correspondence.

MAY 9th, '76.

Eleven years a resident of the good old town of Quincy, combined with a sincere affection felt for the Patriot, which has ever been a welcome visitor, prompts me to a brief recital of some little facts, that in these centennial times, may prove of interest to those who may visit the festive scenes, and not prove altogether nseless to the stay-at-homes. I most sincerely wish that of the latter, there might not be one. That the heart of every one of Quincy's good people might be made merry by a peep at the grand show.

All are aware, that, God willing, tomorrow, May 10th, 1876, is the day fixed for the formal opening of the doors. No pen perhaps, may be able to give, only quite imperfectly, the varied scenes of this great occasion. It is the wish of every true American, that the Exhibition may make us a better people, in every sense of the word. Let us all from this day, make a resolve to do our part in the general reform of all things. Could a better time be selected for turning over a new leaf.

The buildings are so near complete, that but a short time will intervene before we can call them finished. A description of them I shall not attempt, they must be seen if possible. A brief outline of 190 buildings, were I to attempt it, would I think require nore supplements than you would care to issue. Season tickets good for 10 days, are now offered at half rates, by various lines from Boston, direct to Philadelphia, stopping at the Empire City if you choose to. Most persons will so choose, I suppose, for the great city has many attractions for those who have not been privileged to see great lions often.

As to comfortable accommodations, and at reasonable charges, no anxiety need be felt by any who wish to come. All can be accommodated thus far, is acknowledged by all who are so situated as to know the facts. The time for coming must be determined by each individual, as to convenience of his or her time. Should I advise, however, I should say, to see it in perfection, not to come before June 1st, there is plenty of time.

The most interesting incidents of daily occurrence, I will try and write you from day to day, and if you deem them worth printing, they are at your service.

Very truly yours, G. F. P.

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. KING GEORGE sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "OLD CRADLE," in FANEUIL HALL, by her mother, living in the "OLD CORNER" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to UNION, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. REAL ESTATE SALES. Emily Glover bought 43,924 feet of land on Central avenue, Wollaston, of Benjamin N. Adams, for $5344.81.

DEDHAM. No licenses are to be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors except to apothecaries, and the police have received orders to close up all the rum shops. In the Superior Court in Dedham last Saturday the jury disagreed in the case of Myrick P. Sumner, administrator, vs. the Massachusetts Life Insurance Company, a suit for the recovery of a policy of $1000 upon the life of Edmund Thomas, who committed suicide in the spring of 1874. In the case of Jane Smith vs. the Kinsley Iron Company the jury failed to agree and the papers were taken from them. In the case of Adaline E. Force vs. William H. Martin, a suit for the maintenance of a bastard child, the jury rendered a verdict for the defendant.

Fifty-two years ago last March a post-office was established at West Dedham, and Colonel Theodore Gay appointed Postmaster. He has retained the position from that day until now, and in the same building. He ought to go to Philadelphia.

☞ Richards' "Old Corner" Clothing Store, 25 Dock Square was, one hundred years ago, the old Sun Tavern, where merry hearts did congregate around its hospitable board. But now-a-days, the Boys congregate there in throngs, to get fitted to one of those beautiful Alexis suits, costing only $7, and go away with smiling faces and happier hearts than ever gathered there in olden times. The wonder is, how Richards can afford to sell so cheap. His motto is "Large Sales and Small Profits."

For the Patriot.

Woman's Temperance Union.

If it is not generally known, we desire to make it known far and wide, that the women of Quincy have an organization called the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which is in successful operation and largely attended, but still there are many of the wives, mothers and sisters of Quincy, who are not numbered with us. To every woman whom these words may reach, we extend a cordial invitation to join our Union, and enter vigorously into this grand crusade against the mighty foe of human kind.

For half a century the temperance movement has been carried on with alternate seasons of defeat and success. All this while, as if unconscious that she could do more than to silently suffer the unspeakable evils of the curse of intemperance, woman has been, with few exceptions, a mere spectator of the conflict, urged by virtue and philanthrophy against appetite and self-interest. Apparently unconscious of the latent power undeveloped within. But recently, as if touched by the electric shock of God's providence, woman has awakened from her indifferent state, seeming to realize the adage "who would be free, himself must strike the blow," and she has risen up in her dignity and strength, against the enemy of all she loved dearest and best. What was accomplished in those months, will, perhaps never be fully told. But that it developed thousands of workers among women is true. That it was a great spiritual blessing to those engaged in it, that it has drawn churches nearer to each other, and enlisted them in the war against rum and caused the ministers to preach more faithfully on the subject, are facts. And now, all over the land, woman is coming to the front, as the strongest pleader in this cause of human rights. We are learning, too, that grand victories are never won by desultory guerilla fighting ; but we need organization, union, persistent purpose ; and so all over our land, women are forming these local and state Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, and are "gradually consolidating their work into one grand, determined onset upon the rum traffic."

We have but begun in this town, but are advancing! We ask the noble, good and virtue-loving women to rally, and uplift public opinion toward the level of your own faith.

Much of our time has been taken up with the State Temperance Fair, to be held in Horticultural Hall, May 15th to the 20th. All articles for the Fair, sent to Mrs. D. B. Stetson, President of the Quincy Section, will be forwarded at once. The proceeds of this Fair is to pay necessary expenses connected with organizations to be formed, to keep an agent in the field, &c. All tickets purchased of our Committee for said Fair, will go to swell the proceeds of our section of the Norfolk County table. Those who have anything to give, (and we pray that every man, woman and child will donate something,) please give at home, for we are anxious to be the banner table. Remember the promise made at the State Convention.

A box of provisions will be sent on Wednesday next. All who can contribute in that line, send to Mrs. John Pratt, and she will be glad to forward.

Gentlemen who take meals in the city, are earnestly requested to patronize the Cafe' in the lower Hall of Horticultural building. Thus help on the good work.

Once more let me urge the women from all parts of our town to heed the call of the hour, and join zealously and gloriously in the campaign, fight the grand warfare, for God and humanity,—and share in the final victory, for "nothing fails with God behind it."

Centennial Trees.

I see that a great many towns are making arrangements to plant trees on this centennial year,—but I have as yet heard of nothing being done in Quincy. I would suggest to the Trustees of the Woodward Fund, that this would be just the time to arrange the School lot, so called, on Hancock and Greenleaf streets, by planting not only trees but such other shrubbery as would beautify the grounds ; —so that if the School House is ever built, some now living may have the opportunity to see how the grounds are to look if nothing more ;—or, at least, get rid of the high board fence now around it ; and not have strangers in passing through our town, ask if that is a cattle yard. GRIFFITH.

OUR SCHOOLS. We understand that Mr. Jacob Flint, the sexton of the Unitarian Church, has been engaged by the Superintendent of Schools to deliver a lecture to the school-teachers of the town on "The Management of Furnaces."

Coughs and Colds.

From Samuel A. Walker, Esq., the well-known Real Estate Auctioneer of Boston.

"Having experienced results of a satisfactory character from the use of WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, in cases of severe colds, during the past two years, I have full faith in its renovating power. I was first induced to try this medicine by the strong recommendation of a friend, who was well-nigh gone with consumption, and whose relief from the use of it satisfied me of its great value in cases of colds and decline, and most clearly demonstrated to my mind its great value as a restorative, that only needs a fair trial to insure a grateful recognition from the public."

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

☞ No physician who has watched the effects of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, in chronic colds, coughs or influenza, will hesitate to say that it is the finest pulmonic yet discovered. Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation, torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anaemia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions. 4w

A SINGULAR CASE. A young woman went into a family in South Hanover a few weeks since to live. After stopping three days she left quite suddenly, and about $200 was found missing. On the first inst., a lady appeared in our village, having the general appearance of the one that sudenly left Hanover. She took lodgings at Miss Francis Torrey, and went out shopping. She appeared to have plenty of money and bought a new suit for about $25, at Owen Adams' store, on Washington street ; other articles at Miss Hussey's, and Miss Hubbard's and the next day she left. Sheriff Bates of Hanover visited this place last week, but found his bird had flown. Nothing definite as to her whereabout at the present time, has been learned, to our knowledge. Her name is supposed to be Jane Wheelright, and she is about twenty-one years old.

☞ Mr. J. J. Hayes of Boston, gives readings at Washington Hall, East Milton, on Wednesday evening next.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

WEST WINDSOR, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT
"Screw the finger as tight as you can, that's rheumatism; one turn more, that's gout," is a familiar description of these two diseases. Though each may and does attack different parts of the system, the cause is believed to be a poisonous acid in the blood. Purify this by the use of Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient.
It will do its work speedily and thoroughly. It is the great friend of the sufferer from rheumatism and gout.

Poetry.

Mother Shipton's Prophecy,

The following, which was first put in print in 1488, and again published in 1641, is known as Mother Shipton's Prophecy. It is a remarkable prediction. The reader will observe that every event prophesied, except the last, which is still in the future, has come to pass.

THE PROPHECY:

Carriages, without horses, shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe;
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye;
Waters shall more wonders do,
How strange! yet shall be true;
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at root of tree;
Through hills men shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at their side;
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk;
In the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green;
Iron in water shall float,
As easy as a wooden boat;
Gold shall be found and shown,
In a land that is not now known;
Fire and water shall wonders do;
England shall at last admit a Jew;
And the world unto an end shall come,
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

Agricultural, &c.

Setting Fruit and other Trees.

One half the trees that die come to their death through bad management. In the first place, the owner should stand by or take a helping hand in digging them up; and care should be taken to obtain a good supply of roots, which are the life of the trees, and at the foundation of success. With a sharp knife, cut off the ends of the broken roots smoothly, trim the tops to conform with the roots, shortening in about half of the branches in good shape. Dig the holes amply large, saving the surface soil to go among the fibrous roots, tread the earth down very firmly when a tree is set, leaving room for a part of a pail of water, and finish filling in the next day, or as soon as the ground will pack well among the roots. Next put a light mulch of hay or straw around each tree, and in a very severe drouth water once or twice a week, and every tree will live.

Growing Small Fruits.

When a man lives near a good market for strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, currants and gooseberries, and has a farm or only a few acres of land, he will make a mistake if he does not grow some for sale, as they pay better than general farming. An acre of strawberries will generally produce from $150 to $200 net profit, and other small fruits do about as well. It is not advisable for one unacquainted with these fruits to go into the business at first extensively; but it is better to feel his way by degrees.

A Reliable Article. J. R. Burditt, of Auburndale, Mass., says, "he has used Bradley's Phosphate nearly every season for twelve years or more, for general garden culture. He has in that time made careful experiments to test its comparative value. It has always proved the most reliable and satisfactory, and for a crop of corn he prefers it to any stable manure he can procure. He has been looking for a cheaper and better article, but cannot find it, and until he does, he shall continue to rely upon Bradley's Super-phosphate.

Management of Horses.

A Correspondent to the Animal World says:—

"My opinion (based on an experience of upwards of forty years) is, that horses are not naturally vicious, and if a universal system of patience, kindness, gentleness, and firmness were practiced, they would become perfectly steady and quiet. We should hear nothing of vicious and unmanageable horses; an incredible amount of suffering would be avoided, and the cause of humanity promoted."

Anecdotes.

"Rose, my dear," said a mother to her daughter, "if you are so stiff and reserved, you will never get a husband."

"Ma," retorted the young lady, "unless the poets tells fibs, a primrose is not without attractions."

A grumbling car driver said to a passenger, "You always want me to stop when you get off."

"No, sir," said the passenger, who had no jumping notions, "I don't care what you do. I only want the car to stop. You can go on."

Wishing to pay his friend a compliment, a gentleman remarked: "I hear you have a very industrious wife."

"Yes," replied the friend, with a melancholy smile, "she's never idle.—She's always finding something for me to do."

"You have a considerable floating population in this village, haven't you?" asked a stranger of one of the citizens of a village on the Mississippi.

"Well, yes—rather," was the reply, "about half the year the water is up to the second story windows."

"I want the finest f'white horse you have in the stable," said a celebrater of St. Patrick's Day to a keeper of horses; "I want him for myself."

"I don't think I have a white one, Pat," said the stable keeper; "will not a gray one do you?"

"I don't mind a —— what color he is, so's he's f'white," was Pat's quick reply.

Two sons of Erin shoveling on a hot day, stopped to rest, and exchanged views on the labor question. "Pat, this is mighty hard work we are at."

"It is, indade, Jimmy; but what kind of work is it you'd like if you could get it?"

"Well," said the other leaning reflectively on his shovel and wiping the perspiration with the back of his hand, "for a nice, aisy, clane business, I think I would like to be a bishop."

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

The Quincy Patriot.
SUPPLEMENT.
SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1876.

Letter from San Francisco, Cal.

The following off-hand letter, written by a gentleman who once resided within a few miles of Quincy, we copy from a neighboring paper, thinking it might be of interest to our many readers:—

April, 23d, 1876.

To-day (Sunday) has been a splendid day, very much like some of the Sundays in Massachussts, in the month of June. But should some of the sober old deacons there, see the way in which the holy day is observed here, I am afraid they would be more anxious to send missionaries here, rather than to the heathen farther west. Picnics are now in order, one or more every day, and more than ever on Sunday. Bands of music march through the streets, and were it not for the occasional pealing of the church bells, and the chimes of St. Patrick's, one could imagine himself at one of the county fairs.

One thing in this town I like, is the perfect liberty one has, in which to spend the Sabbath, and each and every one can spend it as suits him best. The luxuries of the season are now quite common; strawberries are now selling from a "bit," to two "bits" a box, and at that price most every body can have them.

The cost of living I think is in many things cheaper than in the East; but rents are much higher. As regards business, I will say, that there is an immense amount being done of all kinds, the whiskey business best of all.

Being a mechanic I naturally shall say most about that class of business. In mercantile business if one is a clerk, he will find it very hard to obtain a situation, as the supply far exceeds the demand; but if one has capital, there is no better place to increase it than here. In all kinds of trades, business is exceedingly good. There are more buildings in progress to-day than a year ago, but strange to say, wages are lower, and it is harder for a carpenter or mason to obtain a situation.

The reason is obvious; on account of the hard times East, thousands of workmen have come here with great expectations, and still are coming. I would not advise any one to come here if he can possibly make a living there, for in nine cases out of ten he will be disappointed.

If a person has a little money and goes into the country, all might be well, but the majority stop here. There has been, and still exists great excitement here on account of the Chinese; thousands of them come in every Chinese steamer. Anti-Cooly clubs have been formed, and some of them have been supplied with arms. Chinatown was entirely closed a few nights ago; not a John was to be seen, while three hundred special policemen patrolled the streets in case a mob should attempt violence. W. A. J.

His Boy's Question. The other day a Detroiter, who has a good record of army service, took down his revolver to shoot a cat which had been hanging around the house. After looking at him while he fired six shots, the cat walked away. While he was loading up for more destruction, the shooter's small boy inquired:—

"Father, did you ever kill any one while you were in the army?"

"I suppose so, my son."

After a long pause, the boy continued: "Then you must have got near enough to hit 'em with an axe, didn't you?"

It was then discovered to be about school time.

☞ An entertainment called a "musical bee" has been invented in London, at which prizes are offered to the best amateur piano players and singers at sight.

☞ The tribes on the west coast of Africa have been fighting for three years past for the possession of an African Helen with the unromantic name of Mebbo.

☞ A married man, as he handed out twenty dollars for his wife's new spring bonnet, feelingly remarked that "it is the milliner that prevents a man becoming a millionaire."

☞ The essence of all disease is the want of some element to be supplied to the system or to be eliminated from it.

☞ During the year 1875 no less than three hundred and thirty-seven American hotels were burned, and not a hotel clerk so much as scorched.

The Devil's Mortgage.

The worst demoralizer of character is debt. The sad records of defaulting, embezzling and dishonest failures which we meet with so constantly in the daily press, are often indeed, most frequently, the results of the demoralization of debt, and consequent desperate efforts at extrication. The financial props have given way. The little debt, which at first was small as a grain of mustard seed, like the rolling snow-ball, has gathered weight and multiplied itself a thousand-fold. And still it grows, and like the fabulous hydra which Hercules was sent to kill, you no sooner strike off one head than two shoot up in its place. The struggle is severe, and in the end decisive; either confession is made of a hopeless bankruptcy, which might and should have been avoided, or integrity is sacrificed to the temptation of the moment. Debt ruins as many households and destroys as many fine characters as rum; it is the devil's mortgage on the soul, and he is always ready to fore-close.

Wanted No Monument.

It was one day since the late centennial celebration that a cadaverous looking fellow stepped up to a Boston woman's kitchen door, and confronting the hard-working mistress of the house, introduced himself as follows:

"Best-article-ever-patented-under-the-face-of-the-sun-for-takin'-out-grease-spots-cleansin'-whitenin'-and-purifyin'-leavin'-the-garment-sweet-soft-and-ready-to-take-a-stiff-smooth-polish-like-to-buy-some-of-our-superior-washin'-compound-ma'am?

And he held out a small tin box.

The woman leaned one elbow on the table, and looking hard at the intruder, when he was through, inquired;

"Are you done?"

"Yes ma'am."

Here the female slowly pointed her long index finger out of the door to some distant object, and again inquired:

"Do you see that over there?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the dispenser of washing compound, "that's Bunker Hill monument."

Then the woman squared herself on her heels, toes out, and conjuring up a look of irony in her eye, and gathering up a flat-iron in her hand, she asked:

"Do you want one of those raised on your head?"

The pedlar retreated. He didn't want any monument.

Putting Things Away.

Do women ever think how much time they spend in picking up and putting away? Of course we do not mean to intimate that it is wasted, or that all this labor is done unnecessarily. Women have a vast amount of such work to perform, and few men realize its extent or necessity until some accident or circumstance brings it home to them.

A married man said once that he never realized the amount of work done in bringing things out and putting them away until he happened to sit idly watching the operation of setting the table—"getting tea," as it was called—at a neighbor's house, washing the dishes and clearing them. It struck him for the first time, how much real labor had to be done in lifting and carrying between table and pantry, and he determined to lessen such labor in his house as much as possible, by constructing a kitchen in his house with every facility and convenience. He thought, with a sort of consternation, if one "tea" requires that amount of labor, what must the work of a house of a lifetime amount to? A very pretty problem, which we should like to have answered.

It is a fact, however, that "putting things away" becomes a sort of mania with some neat housewives, and not only gives them a vast amount of trouble, but sours their tempers, and is a source of annoyance to every member of the family. From a habit probably of being on one spot all the time, externally seeing and doing the same things, it becomes a sort of mania and in fact a symptom of disease. We think a good plan in such a case would be for the husband to insist on his wife taking a journey, making a visit home, or spending a couple of weeks at a watering place. The change of scene, the breaking up of the monotony of her life, would do her a world of good. Her ideas would become enlarged, her thoughts travel out of their accustomed routine; and when she returned she would take up life less as a burden and more as a basket of flowers, from which it is possible to extract beauty and fragrance.

☞ The bed on which Mr. Stewart died was of the most elegant description, built of solid rosewood and inlaid with gold.

Not Afraid of the Devil.

A colored man named Nelson was owing a butcher in New Orleans five or six dollars, and after trying in vain to collect the money, the butcher and a friend put their heads together the other night and laid a plan. About midnight they called at Nelson's house, and he was awakened by a rap on the window.

"Who's dar?" he called out.

"The devil!" solemnly replied the butcher.

"You is, hey?"

"Yes. I want you."

"What fur?"

"You refuse to pay your butcher, and I am sent to take you to the bottomless pit!"

"You is?"

"I am. Come forth at once."

"Ize-coming!" replied the negro, as he jumped out of bed. "I can't pay dat six dollars half as easy in any oder way, and de old woman is so mighty cross Ize glad to get away from home."

The butcher and his friend didn't wait for Mr. Nelson to come out.

☞ The man who is only honest when honesty is the best policy is not really an honest man. Honesty is not swerving policy, but stable principle. An honest man is honest from his soul, nor designs to stoop to aught that is mean, though great results hang on the petty fraud.

☞ On his return from a tour which he had been with his master in Switzerland, an Irish servant, being asked what he had seen, replied:—"Oh, shure, one can't see anythin'. There's nothing but mountains everywhere."

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1876.

Wonderful Subterranean Passage.

Recent proceedings in the Hungarian Parliament disclosed a most remarkable discovery. The story, as condensed from the official reports, is that two peasants, from the village of Ivan-Egerzeg, near the ancient city of Veszprim, and not far from Lake Balaton, came to Pesth, and to a jeweller offered some broken fragments of what evidently was some very old golden ornament for female wear, probably a bracelet or band for the upper arm. The jeweller questioned the shepherds, and, their answers being unsatisfactory, he had the men arrested on supicion of being thieves. On the examination, they told a tale which was so astonishing that it was communicated to the minister of the interior, and this functionary ordered an investigation by scientific officers. The information of the shepherds was, that in the woods skirting Ivan-Egerzeg, where they had some huts for shelter when out at night, they had been digging at a little hill. Suddenly they came upon what appeared to be a square structure of brick walls, with a stone covering the aperture. Removing this stone, they found that these wards enclosed an opening into the earth, and resolved to sound its depth. Lowering a stone tied to a rope, they ascertained that the shaft, about three feet in diameter, or nine square feet, descended perpendicularly to a depth of over a hundred square feet. The pebble they had lowered, reached what seemed like a stone floor beneath, and from the sound itself, they judged that this opening must lead to some large subterranean cavern or hall. A day or two afterward the shepherds were again at work. They prepared a small square board, freighted with stones, and in the centre of it they placed three lighted candles. This they let down through the shaft, and by the light of the candles, they saw distinctly that the inner sides of the shaft were smooth and apparently ended in some large apartment. They next prepared a rope ladder of the requisite length, secured several lanterns, and then one of them let himself down the shaft. At the bottom he stood in wonderment as he gazed upon a large square hall, the walls covered with faded paintings, chairs, benches and tables, standing around, ornamented with gold and ivory, and large heavy doors, hung on golden hinges, leading to other rooms. The shepherd climbed the ladder and told his companion of the discovery. Both of them went down together, and found themselves in a succession of rooms, abounding with elaborately carved furniture of a style they had never seen before. In some of them were low, large stands, evidently once used for beds ; there were also closets, bureaus containing armlets, rings, medals, coins, daggers, chains, swords, shields and helmets. There were also breastplates of leather, covered with iron and studded with ornaments in gold. Some of the armlets they took away, broke them up and carried them to Pesth for sale, in which transaction they were arrested, as above stated. The officers of the Hungarian Ministry of the Interior, began their investigation under the ancient law, which makes all such discoveries the property of the crown, and their report, as communicated to Parliament, is still more startling. Their researches clearly establish it as a fact that this subterranean structure was undoubtedly an old Roman castle, built many centuries before the Huns and Magyars left their Asiatic homes to invade this part of Europe. This section of Hungary was the province of Pannonia, of the Roman Empire, and in the vicinity of Lake Balaton, there was a large permanent Roman camp, the agricultural and military settlements of the Romans, extending for many miles, and traces of this Roman occupation, which continued down to the sixth century of the Christian era, have repeatedly been found. But how this vast structure, which is said to cover two acres, and built two stories high, with massive walls of stone and brick, was covered with earth to the depth of more than sixty feet, over which a forest of heavy timber had grown up—a forest, too, that is mentioned as existing in the oldest preserved chronicles of the kingdom the officers have so far found, is impossible to account for. In one room several skeletons of human beings have been found, but the bones were too much decayed to indicate with certainty, the race to which they belong. A thorough search of this wonderful building is now proposed. The shaft through which the first discovery was made is believed to have been either a chimney or an observatory, or lookout, as iron hooks have been found fastened to the wall inside, to which means of ascent and descent were probably attached.

Where we Differ.

The drinking man claims that he has a perfect right to drink what he pleases, when he pleases, and where he pleases, providing it does not interfere with any one else. In all of which we agree with him perfectly. But whoever knew a liquor drinker who did not sooner or latter interfere with the rights of others ? The mere act of patronizing a saloon is an interference with the rights of others, as it helps to sustain a public nuisance. Liquor drinking is a down-grade business; if not stopped, it is only a question of time as to its causing interference with the rights of others. And a family or a community have the right, or should have to ward off a threatened blow from this direction, by taking measures to prevent the use of liquor as a beverage, the same as to prevent any other evil from being developed in their midst—the sale of obscene literature, for instance. Herein, doubtless, is where we differ.—Liberty Blade.

Where to Buy.

A Vermont lady sends a protest against an article which appeared in the columns of a city paper advising people to go to the city to purchase their goods. She thinks country merchants should be encouraged; that their judgment and taste in the selection of goods is better than the average housewife's; that the time and trouble she takes in going to the city to do her own shopping gives poor returns; that she might better give the merchant a list of what she wishes, and get him to purchase for her, than go herself; that the practice of depending upon neighboring cities for shopping facilities tends to make towns suburban, and keeps them from retaining their distinctive character as country villages; that the ladies of her town who make their purchases in large cities do no better, so far as she can learn, than those who buy of the country merchant. She concludes thus: " I agree perfectly with what you say about buying by the quantity, but we can do that without going to cities; and just think of the loss of trade to country dealers, and the personal discomfort of husbands and children, if women, on the strength of your advice, flee to the city stores to spend their money this spring."

Graves of the Presidents.

The remains of three ex-Presidents, says the Springfield (Ill.) Journal rest in Tennessee—Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk, and Andrew Johnson. Five—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Tyler—repose in Virginia. Two—John Adams and John Quincy Adams—in Massachusetts. Two—Van Buren and Fillmore—in New York; William Henry Harrison in Ohio; Zachary Taylor in Kentucky; Pierce in New Hampshire; Buchanan in Pennsylvania, and Abraham Lincoln in Illinois. In all we have had eighteen Presidential terms of four years each, of whom only the present incumbent survives. At some period in the future an effort will probably be made to gather up the scattered remains of our Presidents and reinter them at the seat of government. Whether their descendants and the States which now hold their remains will consent to their removal is a question that it will be time enough to consider when the proposition shall come up in due form.

Thorough Workmen.

Rarely does a thorough workman seek employment. Especially if his habits and temper be commendable, the chances are that the work will seek the man, not the man the work. There are too many second-rate men in all vocations. Resolve to be a good workman. Once the reputation is acquired, it is so much capital. There is no more fatal error than the habit of slighting work. Whatever your hand finds to do, give it your attention. Slovenly workmen are soonest discharged when the press of business is over. The thorough workman is indispensable. When promotions are made, the thorough workman steps into the foreman's, manager's, or superintendent's shoes. It is so the world over. The rule obtains in all professions—in law, physic and theology; in educational institutions; in agriculture; in the army and navy. Make yourself thoroughly acquainted with the theory and practice of your business, its principles and applications, so that not a single move shall be made in ignorance.

Sharp Practice.

A lawyer once had an important case, and the decision depended on the way in which the jury would regard the testimony of one lady. He lost the case because the fair witness swore positively to an occurrence which she witnessed at the distance of a few rods, although there were several persons who stood much nearer than she that saw nothing whatever of it. The lawyer looked rather " blue " when the jury brought in their verdict, but revenged himself by rising and telling the court a story of a lady he once knew who was very near-sighted, but always declared her eyesight to be excellent. Accordingly, one day a neighbor stuck a darning-needle in the side of the barn, and placing her on the opposite side of the road, asked her if she could see it. " Oh, yes, replied the old lady," " I can see the needle easy enough, but where's the barn ? "

Poetry.

Life, Hopes, Destiny.

BY HARVEY CARPENTER.

What is this life? like the clouds in the morning,
Seen in the heavens, but suddenly gone;
Vanished from azure o'er which they were floating,
Never, no, never again to be known!
What is this life? as the dew, or a flower
Sensibly known by its odors so rife;—
Dewdrops are fleeting, and blossoms soon over!
If such are life's symbols, what then is life?

What are our hopes? do they cling as an anchor,
And hold us secure as each storm of life blows?
Shall fears give us pain corroding like canker,
E'er blighting our hopes, by their sorrows and woes?
What are our hopes, if the world through its pleasures
Quench aspirations which virtue promotes?
In vain is it merely to lay up earth's treasures,
For riches must perish! what are our hopes?

O where shall we be, after life here has ended,
And scenes now unknown shall have come to our view?
Will God love us then as He has condescended
To love us while here, with a love ever new?
O where shall we be, across the "dark river"?
With whom shall we dwell? shall we Jesus there see?
In Heaven with the saints! see Jesus our Saviour!
If we take his salvation now offered so free.

LEMON JUMBLES. One large cup of sugar, two cups of flour, 3-4 cup butter, two eggs, two tablespoonful of hot water, half a teaspoonsful soda, flavor with lemon, roll very thin, bake quickly.

PLAIN SUET PUDDING WITHOUT SODA. One pint of milk, one half pound of suet, chopped fine; three eggs well beaten; one half teaspoonful of salt; add flour gradually until you have made a thick batter. Tie in a cloth which has been dipped in boiling water, and well sprinkled with flour; let the water boil before putting in the pudding, and boil two hours. To be eaten with canned or preserved fruit.

COCOANUT PIE. Half a cup of butter, one cup of powdered white sugar, four well beaten eggs, (beat the whites and yolks together,) one cup of grated cocoanut, one quart of sweet milk. Mix butter and sugar together, then add the eggs and cocoanut, and lastly the milk.

THE WRONG PICTURE.

"A pretty face; a very pretty face, indeed!"

I turned the little photograph upside down, held it off at arm's length to get a perspective view, and scrutinized it closely with my eye-glasses.

Henry Wallis looked pleased; a man naturally likes to have his fiancee admired and appreciated.

"So this is the Bessie Armitage I have heard so much of. Really, Wallis, she does credit to your taste. A blonde, I suppose?"

"Fair as a lily leaf, with blue eyes and the sunniest golden hair!"

"Ah! Well, I must say I prefer the brunette style, so far as my individual taste goes; but then fancies differ, you know."

It was all very well for Henry Wallis to go into ecstacies about his pallid, fair-haired little Bessie Armitage; he had never met the glance of Cecilia Vernon's magnificent dark eyes. What did he know about the true type of feminine beauty?

"As you say, fancies differ," Wallis returned, lightly. "But I wish you would select a handsome frame for it when you go to town next—blue velvet, with a gold rim on the margin, or some such tasteful arrangement."

"I'll see to it," I said, depositing the picture in its envelope, and returning it to my inside breast pocket.

"You'll be very careful of it?"

"Careful? Of course I shall!"

I smiled a little loftily at Walter's solicitude, and we parted.

After all, Henry Wallis was better off than I was, for he was securely engaged to the dimpled, yellow-tressed little object of his affections, while I was yet, as it were, in outer darkness, uncertain whether my peerless Cecilia returned my ardent devotion, or whether she secretly inclined toward that unprincipled fellow, Fitzhugh Trefoil. A score of times I had resolved to settle the question; a score of times I had gone to the Vernons' house with the very formula of declaration on my lips, and as often had the words died away unvoiced and unspoken.

If fate had only gifted me with one-thousandth part of Fitzhugh Trefoil's off-hand audacity! I don't think anything short of the Deluge could check that fellow's cool self-possession; an earthquake wouldn't, and I don't think that the millenium could!

However, love inspires the feeblest heart with a sort of fictitious courage, and I was a new man since Miss Vernon had smiled upon me. What was the use of doubting, hesitating and trembling? Why not decide my fate at once? Henry Wallis' serene content exercised a stimulating influence upon me. I would fain have been even as he was!

"There is no sense in procrastinating matters any further," I said, half aloud, as I walked up and down the rather limited domains of my little law-office. "I have been a doubting fool quite long enough."

I'm afraid I wasn't a very amiable member of the domestic circle that afternoon.

"I think Paul is growing crosser every day," said my sister, shrugging her little plump shoulders. "Mamma, I wish you'd speak to him."

But my mother—bless her wise old soul!—knew better than that. She only looked at me over the rims of her spectacles, and went on darning stockings.

"Paul is worried with business matters, I suppose," she said, apologetically. "Paul will do well enough if you only let him alone."

I went up to my room after dinner and made an elaborate toilet, but all the pains I bestowed upon it served only to heighten the general effect of my awkwardness.

"I've two minds to wait until to-morrow," quoth I to myself, abruptly stopping, with my cravat half tied.

No, I might be a coward, but I was not such an unmitigated poltroon as that. I had begun the enterprise, and I would carry it through if it cost me the last drop of my heart's blood. Moreover, I had had an inspiration. An entirely new and original method of putting the momentous query had occurred to me.

"Hang Fitzhugh Trefoil!" I exclaimed, gleefully, half aloud, though there was no ear to hear my ejaculation. "I'll win the dark-eyed treasure yet, in spite of him!"

I opened my writing-case, and carefully took out a little carte de visite wrapped in tissue paper, and tenderly laid away with a pink silk perfume sachel that Minnie had made for me once. It was Cecilia's picture; she had allowed me to steal it away from her, with scarcely a remonstrance, a week before. Then was the time I ought to have proposed; but, like a timorous, doubting moon-calf as I was, I had let the golden tide of opportunity slip unimproved away from me.

I drew Bessie Armitage's vacant, doll-like face from its envelope, and compared the two with a thrill of triumph in my heart.

"Colorless water beside crimson, sparkling champagne! a pale violet in the shadow of a royal rose! pearls eclipsed by the fiery flash of diamonds!" I exclaimed. "Henry Wallis' taste may be very correct and classical, but give me my radiant brunette! These bleached-out beauties don't correspond with my ideal of perfection."

It was a lovely spring evening as I entered the wide graveled path that led up to the broad porch of the Vernon mansion. Mr. Vernon sat there smoking his meerschaum.

"Won't you sit down and have a smoke?" he demanded, hospitably. "It's a real luxury to be able to take a whiff out of doors, after being shut up in the house all the winter. Or maybe you'd prefer going in to see Cecil?"

Sensible old gentleman! he had not forgotten his own young days. I intimated, not without considerable awkwardness, that the special object of my visit had been to "see Cecil."

"Well, she is in the parlor, all by herself," said he, good humoredly, motioning me in. "Walk in, walk in."

Cecilia Vernon was sitting in the parlor alone, as her father had said, the bright centre of a cheerful circle of lamp-light. A bit of crochet work was lying in her lap, and an open volume of poems—poems I had sent her—was on the table.

Cecilia Vernon was always fair to look upon, in my sight; to-night, however, she seemed more than ordinarily beautiful.

I sat down, and began hesitatingly upon the never-failing topic of the weather. A proposal had seemed the easiest thing in the world as I walked along the dewy edges of the peaceful starlight road, contemplating it from afar off; but now that I was face to face with it, Alps upon Alps of difficulty and perplexity seemed to surround its accomplishment. I would have given all that I was worth to postpone the evil day but twenty-four hours—all but my self-respect, and that was imperiled now.

Cecilia tried her best to keep the ball of conversation in motion; she introduced new subjects, asked leading questions, and feigned deep interest in the most abstruse of topics. But even Cecilia couldn't talk on forever, and presently, with a little sigh of despair, she subsided into silence.

Now was the eventful moment of my destiny.

"Cecilia!" I said, softly.

She raised the liquid brown eyes to mine.

"I want to confide in you to-night. Have I your permission to speak?"

"Certainly, Mr. Markham."

"I am very much in love, Cecilia. In fact, my heart has long ago gone out of my own possession into that of——"

I stopped, with the fatal husky feeling in my throat. Cecilia was blushing divinely. I drew my chair close to hers, with the sensation of a man who has just pulled the string of a cold shower-bath.

"Who is the lady?" faltered Cecilia. As if she didn't know perfectly well already.

"Shall I show you her picture, Cecilia?"

Miss Vernon inclined her head almost to the level of my shoulder to look at the little carte de visite I drew from my pocket. I skillfully stole one arm round her waist.

"See, dearest."

But, to my horror and dismay, she snatched her hand from my clasp, sprang up, and started away, like some fair avenging goddess.

"How dare you insult me thus, Mr. Markham?"

"Cecilia! how—what——"

"Don't presume to call me Cecilia, sir!" sobbed the indignant girl, bursting into tears, and sweeping from the room.

I sat like one palsied. What had I done? Why was the gracious mood of my enchantress thus suddenly transformed to gall and bitterness? Surely she would presently return and apologize for her capricious exit?

But she did not return, and, after waiting long in vain, I sneaked out of a side-door, and crept dejectedly home, my heart burning with wonder and resentment. I had no mind to meet the assembled family group, so I admitted myself with the latch-key, and stole noiselessly upstairs, where my lamp still burned—the lamp I had lighted with such high and bounding hopes.

I threw off my coat viciously. As I did so, the forgotten carte de visite dropped from my pocket. I stooped to pick it up. It was the portrait of Bessie Armitage! And there on the mantel, where in my heedless haste I had left it, was the divine countenance of my queen, Cecilia!

I had shown her the wrong photograph!

All was clear now. Her indignation and resentment—the whole tangled web of mystery was unraveled now. I caught up my hat to rush back to her, but at that moment the clock struck eleven!

It was too late now. All apology and explanation must be deferred until the morrow. And with a discontented spirit I sought my couch.

Early the next morning I walked over to the old Vernon mansion; but, expeditious as I was, Trefoil had been there before me. I met him coming whistling down the walk as self-possessed as ever.

"Good morning," I said, briefly, endeavoring to pass him. But he detained me.

"Congratulate me, my dear fellow. I am the happiest man in the world. Cecilia Vernon has just promised to be my wife."

I stared blankly at him, and, with one or two unintelligible murmurs, turned short round and walked home again. My rival had improved the propitious opportunity, and caught Cecilia's heart in the rebound.

Well—so goes the world, and I am a bachelor yet. There is but one Cecilia, and she, alas! is married to Fitzhugh Trefoil.

A Practical Use of Dogs.

It is a fact, perhaps not generally known, that there is a firm doing business in San Francisco, who purchase the thousands of dogs slaughtered by the Pound master of that city, or that may have been otherwise killed, for which they pay forty cents each. The carcasses are conveyed to their manufactory at South San Francisco, where the skins are removed and sold to the tanneries, the hair taken off and resold to plasterers, the hides tanned, and made into gloves, and sold in the market. The denuded carcass is then thrown into a huge cauldron and boiled until the bones are easily separated from the flesh, when they are removed and sold to the sugar refineries, where they are ground to a fine powder and used to clarify sugar. The oil that rises to the surface of the boiling mass is skimmed off and manufactured into cod-liver oil, and the remainder is used for the purpose of fattening hogs.

The Hill Climbing Engine.

The novel contrivance known as the hill climbing engine continues to excite much interest in France. This engine, as described, has no wheels, and consequently does not roll, but in place of them it is furnished with what are termed legs, upon which it accomplishes the purpose in view. It is like an ordinary engine in most respects, but is supplied with straight rods, terminating in broad, circular skates. There are three of these legs in front and three behind. The cylinders, in place of actuating wheels, raise the feet. The apparatus is claimed to be especially adapted for carrying great weights up railway inclines. One of them, weighing ten tons, is represented as running four to five miles an hour, and can accomplish twelve and one-half miles if desired.

Man Only.

Man is the only animal that blows his nose. The aligator has a nose nearly two feet long, but he never blows it. The elephant can reach over his nose and tickle his hind legs, and he often does; but he never wipes it. The blue-nose baboon has a cerulean probocis of which the noblest animal might be proud, but it goes unblown. The double-nose pointer has an immense capacity for blowing, but he never will; and the oyster, whose nose reaches clear around to his back, refrains from exercising it. Man alone has reached to the height of a pocket handkerchief, and he proudly waves his bandanna as a sufficient evidence of his superiority.

☞ "Ann," observed a housekeeper to the hired girl the other morning, "as we have entered upon the dawn of another century of our nation's history, I guess you had better get a tooth brush of your own."

A Cheap Picture Knob.

Nails are never satisfactory, even when furnished with an ornamented head, for they spring the lathing and damage both plaster and paper. The nice porcelain knobs are deemed too expensive to furnish a house throughout, and do not always correspond with the other furniture. Take empty spools No. 60 or 80, sawing each in two parts, and shorten each half a little. Put them up with 1 1-4 or 1 1-2 inch screws, reaming the spool a little to sink the head of the screw. They can be easily touched with white paint, or stained to match the border. They are much neater and more satisfactory than one would suppose. Mirror and picture knobs should always be placed near the ceiling of the room.

Origin of Things.

Cinderella's fairy godmother, when she made a satin robe from rags, performed a feat no more wonderful than many miracles which are wrought every day by the modern artisian. Nearly all the things that we throw away in the alleys, or even through our drains, are valuable, and after going through the hands of skilled workmen, come out in new shapes and have new fields of usefulness.

Our gelatine was originally rat-skin; toilet-soap is furnished by defunct cats and dogs; perfumery owes its existence to coal-tar; toilet-powder is found in drains; choice ale is flavored with putrid cheese; that obnoxious animal, the skunk, supplies the ladies with lotions for the complexion. We call largely on the animal creation for both necessities and luxuries. Tatting-shuttles, crochet-hooks, dice, etc., once adorned the jaws of a horse. Guitar and violin strings have been indispensable to the comfort of Grimalkin. Hair brushes first saw the light on the back of a hog. As for the clothes we wear, who can count the vicissitudes they have endured before assuming their present shape. All our fine stationery comes from the ragman's bag. Well may the scented, rose-tinted sheet blush for its ancestry! All this goes to prove that we cannot well be fastidious in this world, in which the original of all things is—dust.

A Procession of Dead Men.

The Denver Times says:—A strange funeral procession arrived at Santa Fe. There were twenty freight wagons in the procession, and each wagon was a hearse loaded with the remains of soldiers in different stages of decay. These had been buried, one by one, ranging through a period of several years, at Fort Craig, and recently the remains were ordered to be removed to the government cemetery at Santa Fe. The bodies were exhumed, packed in gunny sacks and each one labeled, just like sacks of ore. Only one body, that of Lieutenant Drew, was transported in a coffin. The officer perished of thirst on the Jornada del Meurta six years ago. His remains when exposed to inspection at Santa Fe, presented a rather natural appearance. The tongue, or what remained of it, still protruded from the mouth, evidencing the suffering attending his horrible death. In this singular and ghastly procession were 140 bodies. The wagons discharged their skeletonic freight in the government cemetery, and each gunny sack and contents were dropped into a separate grave. There were no religious or military services or ceremonies, and the men hired to accompany the procession tossed the sack of bones about with as little care and feeling as they would boxes of merchandise.

Back Pay.

Some years ago a certain Detroiter settled a debt by giving his note of hand. The holder tried for two years to collect it, and then filed it away. The other day he had an opportunity to work it off on an innocent party, and shortly after so doing he encountered the maker of the note, and said:—

"Now you'll have to come to time! I've sold that note of yours!"

"You don't say so?"

"Yes, I have; got it off on a man for seven dollars."

"See here, Tom," said the debtor, in a pleading voice, "if you got seven dollars for that forty dollar note against me, and won't give me at least two dollars, I'll never do another favor for you in my life."

A Word to Boys.

Truth is one of the rarest of virtues. Many a youth has been lost to society by allowing falsehood to tarnish his character, and foolishly throwing truth away. Honesty, frankness, generosity, virtue,—blessed traits! Be these yours, my boys, we shall not fear. You are watched by your elders. Men who are looking for clerks and apprentices have their eyes on you. If you are upright, steady and industrious, before long you will find good masters, and the prospect of a useful life before you.

☞ An exchange says that an "ungrateful man has less honor than a thief;" gratitude is virtue that many who hold their heads very high do not possess.

☞ Bad luck is simply a man with his hands in his pockets and his pipe in his mouth, looking to see how it will come out. Good luck is a man of pluck with his sleeves rolled up and working to make it come out right.

With Supplement.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

FIRES. Shortly after 4 o'clock, Tuesday morning last, our citizens were aroused by the ringing of fire bells, occasioned by the the burning of the cosy residence of Maj. William G. Sheen, on Greenleaf street. The whole fire department was early on the ground, and worked like heroes. The furniture was nearly all removed very carefully by the neighbors, before the house was flooded by the Fire Department, which was necessary to save it from total destruction. Loss on house nearly $1000. Fully insured on house and furniture in the Quincy Mutual and Citizens' Mutual Insurance Company of Boston. It originated from a defective chimney.

Thursday morning about 10 o'clock, as workmen were preparing concrete, in the rear of Patch's coal sheds, at Quincy Point, the tar took fire and in a few minutes the neighborhood was enveloped in a huge cloud of dense smoke. An alarm was given, and the Vulture engine was soon on the spot. Damage trifling.

ACCIDENT. On Tuesday morning last as our enterprising young grocer, Mr. Thomas E. Furnald, was driving up Granite street, his horse became unmanageable and run over the stone trough at the town-pump, throwing Mr. Furnald from the wagon. As he fell he struck the horse on his heels who in return gave him a parting kick, hitting him in the head, but fortunately doing no serious injury. The horse then ran on to the sidewalk in front of our office, where the stone posts and trees soon made a complete wreck of the wagon. We learn the horse was uninjured.

ANOTHER. About 6 P. M., the same day, as a lady with a small child, was turning her horse and buggy around, in Hancock street, near Whitney & Nash's store, the pole of a passing grain team, hooked into one of the hind wheels, throwing the lady and child to the street, and dislocating the spokes of one wheel. Fortunately the occupants of the carriage suffered more from fright than injuries.

PRESENTATION. Last Sunday morning, the Superintendent of the Unitarian Sabbath School, Rev. Mr. Wells, was presented by the members thereof with a valuable gold time keeper, made by the Waltham Watch Company. It was an entire and evidently agreeable surprise to him on his first appearance there since his return from his western journey, whither he had been to locate a home for himself and family, for the restoration of failing health, by a change of climate. The remarks made in presentation and response, evinced a depth of feeling and attachment between the Superintendent and his charge, consequent on his long and faithful services in that position. He leaves for Denver, Colorado, early in June.

DECEASED. Henry W. Nightingale, a Quincy boy, died in Brockton on Thursday of last week. He was a member of the Columbian Fire Co., of that town for many years, and his funeral, which took place on Sunday last, was attended by that company, also by the Protector Company, both in uniform, and by the engineer of the department, in honor of his memory. His remains were conveyed to Mount Wollaston cemetery in this town for interment.

HAT PRESENTATION. On Monday evening last, the Hook and Ladder Company presented Mr. James T. Penniman, our newly appointed Engineer, with an elegant fireman's hat. The presentation speech was made by Mr. John W. Hersey and suitably responded to by the recipient.

RUDOLPHSEN ENGLISH OPERA. By reference to our advertising columns, will be noticed that this company will render their New Opera "The Sleeping Queen," and the Musical farce "Cox & Box," at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening next.

This company has been highly successful in its performances, if we can judge from the very complimentary editorials of the Boston daily papers.

Miss Anna Starbird, Soprano.
Miss Florence Holmes, Contralto.
Mr. W. G. Tower, Tenor.
Mr. J. F. Rudolphsen, Baritone.
Mr. J. H. Gilbert, Basso.

Of course the reduction in the price is for an obvious purpose, the hall having been engaged for this company previous to a public announcement of any Opera.

ANOTHER TEMPERANCE RALLY.—Another public meeting of the Reform Club, was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening last. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by the President of the club, Mr. S. T. Allen.—The hall was well filled, and the exercises of the evening, which consisted of spirited speeches by S. E. Johnson, Col. F. W. Parker, C. W. Carter, J. N. Walsh, H. H. Faxon, Esq., James E. Tirrell, Esq. and Edward Southworth, interspersed with singing under the leadership of Samuel E. Johnson, were listened to with attention and apparent pleasure by all.

OPERA IN QUINCY. It is with pleasure we announce the coming on Monday evening, May 22d, of the Bay State Opera Company. They give the opera of the "Bohemian Girl," by Balfe. It is to be hoped that they may have a crowded house. It will be remembered that Mrs. Kempton sang here gratuitously at the Centennial Concert last fall.

Mrs. Anna Granger Dow, the soprano, is too well known to need further mention. The reputation of the other artists accompanying the troupe is also well known.

The tickets will be for sale at John O. Holden's, on Saturday, any hour after 9 A. M.

TRIP TO PHILADELPHIA.

Wednesday May, 17th.

As everybody at the present time is thinking of visiting the Centennial Exhibition, a few words in relation to our trip to the Quaker City, and in a future number what we saw while there,—may not be entirely uninteresting to the readers of the Patriot.

We left Quincy station at 4.32 P. M., yesterday. It was with pleasure that we met at the depot, Mr. Charles Henry Hardwick, who had secured a ticket for New York, where he was going on business. We, therefore, had the pleasure of his company on the cars and boat to that city. On leaving Quincy, we rode as far as South Braintree, and after waiting about six or eight minutes, stepped aboard the Fall River train, and was carried to that place. We arrived at 6.25, after a pleasant ride of nearly two hours. The large and splendid steamer Bristol, was lying at the wharf waiting for its precious freight. After procuring a stateroom, we promenaded its spacious decks and spent an hour pleasantly, until the Express train arrived,—puffing and blowing under its heavy load of human freight, bound for the city of Gotham.

In a few moments all were aboard, and we were on a move. Although there appeared to be a large number of passengers, there was an abundance of room, and a most delightful sail ovor the Sound was enjoyed,—the water being very calm.

We arrived in New York at 6.40, A. M., and on leaving the wharf, hailed a passing horse car and rode five blocks to the Communipaw ferry. After crossing the same, we took the new line for Philadelphia,—distance, 88 miles, and reached the Quaker City, after a delightful ride of three hours. The grass was green and beautiful; the apple orchards in full bloom, besides many other trees and bushes. For the first forty miles from New York, the country appeared like a prairie; very level, giving a large and splendid range for the eye. We passed many new and beautiful houses, which appeared to be built with great taste.

The cars by this new route, takes its passengers if they desire, directly to the exhibition grounds. The fare from Boston out and back, good for thirty days, is $11.00.

The streets here are filled with flags of all sizes and kinds. On some of the prominent thoroughfares, they can be counted by thousands. P.

Shall We Celebrate?

The committee appointed at the last annual town meeting to arrange for an appropriate celebration of the coming Fourth of July, (at which time the town voted to expend the sum of six hundred dollars for that purpose, provided a like amount could be raised by individual subscription), have employed two of our most worthy citizens to canvass the town for contributions, and it cannot be otherwise than that they will meet with a hearty and generous response from our whole-souled and patriotic citizens. The old historic town of Quincy,—the birthplace of some of the most illustrious Patriots that ever graced the page of history,—owes it to herself and to the memory of her noble dead, to make such an observance of the Centennial Fourth, as shall show to the world that the spirit of liberty still burns as brightly in the bosoms of her sons of the present generation as it did in the times that tried men's souls. Contribute, then, fellow citizens, early and liberally for the celebration. We have an excellent committee of arrangements, whose names are a guarantee that all monies put in their hands will be spent in the most judicious manner for the furtherance of the great object aimed at.

For the Patriot.

The Rudolphsen Opera.

Some explanation is in order, about the appearance of two opera troupes at the Town Hall, on Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week, as it would seem a great mistake for the good of either troupe to have it so. There is nothing accidental about it, however, but, on the contrary, a well laid plan to operate against the success of Rudolphsen's troupe. We have the authority of this gentleman, in saying that after he had arranged to appear in Quincy, on Tuesday, the manager of the Bay State Troupe found it out, and at once, (with the revengeful spirit that latterly governs all his movements of this kind,) came out and hired the hall for Monday evening, in the expectation of securing the greater patronage and gain, and perhaps cause his adversary to postpone or withdraw altogether. We hope, however, that our citizens will give Mr. Rudolphsen's troupe a hearty welcome and a full house on Tuesday evening, as he is determined to give a fine performance of "the Sleeping Queen," and "Cox and Box." and as a further inducement, has reduced the price, (for this occasion only,) to 25 cents, with reserved seats, bringing a first class performance within reach of all. J. B. S.

Decoration Day.

M., at the Town Hall, and go by detachments to decorate the graves at National Sailors' Home, old and Mount Wollaston Cemeteries; returning, form and leave Town Hall for the Cemeteries in the south and west parts of the town, at 9.30 o'clock, headed by the Belknap Brass Band. Returning, partake of a collation at the Lyceum Hall.

The Post will form at 1.30 o'clock, P. M., in front of the Town Hall, where all Societies and Citizens are requested to form in line and proceed to Mount Wollaston and decorate the monument; then to the Town Hall, where the Oration will be delivered by Rev. Geo. W. Whitney.

The Post most respectfully solicits donations of food,—the same to be left at comrade's J. Q. Bent, at Point; Francis Kimball's of the West District; Chas. A. Follett's of South Quincy; and at the Lyceum Hall on the morning of Decoration Day.

The graves are to be decorated with baskets of plants, and those desiring can transplant them.

BRAINTREE.

The mass temperance meeting of last Saturday evening, was a success. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Braintree lead in this meeting, Mrs. Livsey presiding very acceptably. Mrs. L. P. Ward, of Salem, was the first speaker. She thanked God for giving woman something to do in this cause, and gave some account of the reform in Salem. She was followed by a reading by Miss A. L. Brown of Quincy. Next came remarks by S. T. Allen, President of the Reform Club of Quincy, and a gentleman from Randolph. Reading, by Miss M. Ford of Braintree, and remarks by Messrs. Wilkins of Randolph and E. I. Humphery of Hyde Park, who rejoiced that the women of Braintree were at work in the cause. Mr. Childs of Braintree, then spoke, and was followed by Dr. Allen, of Randolph, who was, he said, a woman's rights man.—Last but not least, was a short speech by a reformed Irishman, from Holbrook, who declared that Randolph was red with red ribbons.

The Dexter Land Company, have disposed of twenty-eight house lots. They are to be built upon immediately, and the Old Colony Corporation will make a station at the new village soon to spring up in the extreme south of Braintree.

The Fair held by the Good Templars, passed off finely and satisfactorily to all concerned.

Dr. Reynolds is expected to be in Braintree, June 6th. There is to be a procession, &c., for which the Reform Club are making preparations. D.

LECTURE. A very entertaining lecture will be delivered in the basement of St. John's church, to-morrow evening, by Charles R. Brainard, Esq., a former pastor of Christ Church of this town. Mr. B. having spent some time in Florida, will no doubt make his lecture a very interesting one. See advertisement.

A GOOD HAUL. Deputy Sheriff French assisted by Constable Locke made a seizure of three gallons of brandy and sixty-two gallons of ale, at the house of Bernard Donnelly, West Quincy on Monday. At some future day Mr. D. will be brought before the District Court for trial.

A DAY OF ACCIDENTS. Tuesday last was truly a day of accidents; in another column will be found a fire and two accidents in this town. On the same day a sad and fatal one, occurred in our neighboring village of East Braintree. The carding room of the Boston Flax Mills was the scene, the victim being John Fitzgerald about 12 years of age. While creeping beneath a carding machine, into an aperture 15 or 18 inches in height, to remove the waste which had accumulated, a hasty movement brought the boy's body within reach of the teeth of the machine, swiftly revolving just above his head, and in an instant he was literally torn to shreds, his legs, only, remaining untouched. This is the first fatal accident which has ever occurred in these mills.

Notices of the Press.

ENGLISH OPERA,—"A thoroughly good performance of Balfe's opera, The Sleeping Queen, and Sulliyan's operetta, Cox and Box. It was an artistic and a highly enjoyed musical performance."—Boston Post.

"Balfe's opera is a most charming work. The action is sprightly and comic, and the music which intersperses the dialogue is for the most part very graceful and pleasing. The costumes were rich and elegant, and the opera was very handsomely brought out in all respects. 'Cox and Box,' is intensely amusing. The music as well as the action is full of oddities, although some of the ditties may also lay claim to intrinsic beauty. Mr. Rudolphsen was particularly happy and kept the audience in a roar of laughter while he was upon the stage."—Boston Jour.

"THE SLEEPING QUEEN," an operetta by Balfe, proved to be well adapted to such an entertainment, musically rich in gems of melody and effective concerted pieces, and continually piquant, pleasing and interesting in its dramatic development and situations. The entertainment wound up with a rattling rendering of the intensely funny 'Cox and Box.' Mr. Rudolphsen, it is heardly necessary to say, with his magnificent voice, his stage experience and his unflagging comic talent was the life of both pieces."—Evening Transcript.

"The former proved a most pleasing production, melodious in its numbers, and quite interesting in its plot. The musical farce gave keen enjoyment. The numbers are all delightful, and Mr. Rudolphsen as Cox, Mr Tower as Box and Mr. Gilbert as Mr Bouncer, all fulfilled their assignments with good judgement. Mr. Rudolphsen is especially to be praised for the fun and humor he threw into his performance. Hardly a better programme could be arranged. They can but afford great pleasure wherever heard. Mr. S. L. Studley made an admirable musical director, playing skilfully throughout the evening.—Traveller.

East Milton.

Mr. J. J. Hayes of Boston, gave a reading at Washington Hall, East Milton, on Wednesday evening last, to a select company. (Rather more select than was necessary.) He would no doubt be greeted by a larger, if not a more appreciative audience at a second entertainment of like character. The selections were popular and unusually well rendered.

A thrill of sympathy was felt by every listener, with the brave slave of Charleston, who after saving the church stood before the multitude and pleaded for a recognition of his manhood.

"Miss Maloney on the Chineese Question," was the hit of the evening. This inimitably written piece was inimitably read, and Katy as she descanted on the short comings of that "hathen nagur the chineeseman, Fyng Wyng," was heartily applauded.

The reader's exquisite conception of the authors meaning was no where more noticeable, than in his rendering of "The Face against the pane." The tearful face watching the beacon through the mist of rain, the raging storm, the solemn tolling of the bells, and the fisherman toiling up the sands with their lifeless burden, were told with tender sympathy.

We are all very well acquainted with "Mark Twain's Guide," but his frenzy over the unimpressionable Americans was irresistible.

"The Deacon's Story," was substituted for "Father Phils' Collection," and the gentlemen at least, sympathised with the widowed sinner, and forgave the kiss and the wedding that followed.

"The New Church Organ," was excellent, and ranked next to "Miss Maloney" in its fun producing qualities. Who did not pity the toothless old spinster, who had held her own in the choir for five and thirty years, but found that with the new organ she was sure to be too fast or too slow for "Mansions in Heaven." When the quavering complaint of this ancient sister was done, the hall shook with peals of laughter, and we humbly hope that her wishes will be complied with, and she will be laid in her peaceful grave without a squeak from the "patent machine."

The rest of the programme was equally enjoyable. P. C.

Resignation. We copy from the Rockland (Me.,) Free Press, the following notice of Rev. J. E. Hall, a former pastor of the Congregational Church, in this town:—

"With unfeigned regret we learn that ill health compels Rev. J. E. Hall, pastor of the Congregational Church in this city, to relinquish for the present, the labors incident to his charge, and seek rest. Mr. Hall will have been settled in this city three years with the expiration of May. He has been a diligent, studious, hard-working minister, preaching finished, able, practical and progressive sermons. His society will agree with us that he has enlarged and enlightened their views of Christian obligations and duties—that his preaching has aimed to promote brotherly love, honest dealing, kindness of man to man, rather than to theological speculations and the honoring of sectarian dogmas. He has entertained the minds of his hearers, and cannot have failed to exercise a wholesome influence upon their actions and upon the community of which they are an influential part. His parish will part with him reluctantly; indeed, they have prevailed upon him to withhold a positive resignation, and at a meeting held last Sabbath, unanimously voted him leave of absence, and also not to engage any other minister for at least six months, or until Mr. Hall should signify a wish for them to do so. The Congregational Society has had greater prosperity under Mr. Hall's ministration than it ever before attained. Should permanent separation be necessary, our citizens generally will be sorry to have Mr. Hall remove from the city."

Piano Tuning. Mr. J. A. Littlefield, a gentleman who always attends to his orders with promptness, and has given perfect satisfaction in his work, is expected to visit town to-day, or the first of next week. Orders left at this office will be attended to.

Philadelphia Correspondence.

May 16th, 1876.

Dear Patriot:—The day of hopes and fears has passed. All can' now refer to the undisputed fact, that the Great Centennial is opened. Your correspondent was the 250,000th part, estimated of living humanity who was fully electrified by the great, grand, glorious scenes enacted within the gates of our great national entertainment, of May 10th. Much has been said, more will be said, and still much remain unsaid, may be that could be said, without over-estimating this truly wonderful occasion.

We may now, without hesitancy, say to the good people of the East, West, North or South, come and join with us, make merry, the likes never will be seen again. People who expect to view the sights in a day, find that such an achievement is an impossibility, and stand dumbfounded among the beautiful sights thus attracted on all sides.

That the ladies should be largely represented, for they are entitled to a large share of the praise due for the success of this great enterprise. An undisputed fact, that without their aid, this great fraternal union showing the great advance of 100 years, never, never would have been accomplished.

Side entertainments are numerous. I refer to the old established Theatres, of which Philadelphia can boast of many that are first class, and now, in rivalry with them are many young aspirants for public patronage, embracing a variety, to please the fancy of a mixed people, for we shall certainly deserve the title of a mixed multitude, during the next six months. Space will not admit of any particular description of our varied amnsements offered. Opertis Tropical Garden, opened last evening, and from the fact of its being a new entertainment unlike any other in America, will undoubtedly be visited by the multitude.

Atlantic City and Cape May will be found most desirable resorts for those who enjoy the sea shore. The former is Philadelphians favorite resort, and the accommodations offered this season to the travelling public, by the Camden and Atlantic Railroad Company, are all that can be asked for in point of comfort.

I shall try and keep you well posted in all little matters that may be likely to interest the readers of the Patriot, sincerely wishing that it may be their privilege to come and see the sights, that the pen can but imperfectly describe.

Democratic Caucus. On Saturday evening last, the Democrat's of Quincy, assembled at the Town Hall, to choose delegates, to attend the Second District convention, to be held in this town, on the 24th inst. The meeting was called to order, by J. T. Penniman, chairman of the Town committee, and the meeting organized by the choice of Dr. William S. Pattee chairman, and George Cahill secretary. A committee of five was appointed to report a list of thirteen regular delegates and six alternates, and their report, which was as follows, was unanimously accepted by the caucus: Regular delegates, Dr. William S. Pattee, William A. Hodges, James T. Penniman, Eleazer Frederick, William Parker, Geo. Cahill, Thomas O'Brien, John H. Dee, Joseph A. Bass, Seth Dewing, Jr., Benjamin Curtis, P. F. Lacy, John A. Duggan, alternates, Geo. H. Hobart, Hosea B. Ellis, James E. Maxim, Joseph T. French, William Barry, James Sullivan.

The delegates were instructed to vote at the District Convention for such delegates to the Congressional Convention as would give their votes an influence for the nomination of Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, Governor of New York, as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. A committee of five was appointed to make an effort towards a more complete organization of the Democratic party in the town, and the caucus adjourned subject to the call of the committee.

Saving Lives!—The safest and only reliable Cure for Consumption, Sore Throat and Lungs, Bad Colds, Chronic Coughs an Catarrh, is Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, a purely Vegetable Remedy, which never fails to purify the Blood and remove every vestige of Pulmonary Disease!

Coughs and Colds.

From Samuel A. Walker, Esq., the well-known Real Estate Auctioneer of Boston.

"Having experienced results of a satisfactory character from the use of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, in cases of severe colds, during the past two years, I have full faith in its renovating power. I was first induced to try this medicine by the strong recommendation of a friend, who was well-nigh gone with consumption, and whose relief from the use of it satisfied me of its great value in cases of colds and decline, and most clearly demonstrated to my mind its great value as a restorative, that only needs a fair trial to insure a grateful recognition from the public."

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of ea h—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation, torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anaemia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions. 4w

West Fairlee, Vt., Jan. 11th, 1871.

Dear Sir:—For seven or eight years past I have been in poor health, and for the past year or more very feeble. My health continued to decline, and my flesh and strength wasted away, until I was unable to work or even go up stairs without great exhaustion. I suffered from frequent and distressing attacks of palpitation of the heart, my food distressed me, causing ascidity and pain in the stomach; and I suffered from extreme nervousness, constipation and debility of the system generally, my blood being thin and poor and sluggish in circulation, and I was for years suffering all the tortures of a confirmed dyspeptic. About six months since I concluded I would try a bottle of Peruvian Syrup, and received so much benefit from it that I purchased five bottles more, and have continued the use of the Syrup until quite recently. It has restored my health to such an extent that I felt myself as good as new. My digestion is good and my weight has increased in the past four months from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and thirty-eight pounds: my strength has returned, and my general health is thus wonderfully improved, and I can truly say I owe it all to the use of your Peruvian Syrup. I earnestly recommend all sufferers from dyspepsia and debility to give it a trial, hoping it will do them as much good as it has me.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. S. B. Bemis.

☞ Our friend Richards at the "Old Corner," 25 Dock Square, seems to have found the Panacea for Hard Times. The big fire, which scorched him, compelled him to close off his stock of slightly damaged Clothing at ruinously low prices, but the great rush of trade satisfied him that there was money, if inducements were made to call it forth. His new and stylish stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing, made up since the fire, he is now offering at about the same hard pan prices as he sold his soiled goods.—Consequently the rush of trade to the "Old Corner" is simply enormous.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

West Windsor, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly, L. McQUOWN.

"State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before } Leon. McQuown.
me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. } Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"Jefferson, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

"Messrs. Rose & Co.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Barnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

Pause, Stranger!

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. King George sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "Old Cradle," in Faneuil Hall, by her mother, living in the "Old Corner" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to Union, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. The Sons of Liberty now flock in crowds to the same "Old Corner" House, where is found in endless variety

By Rev. Peter Pennot. 12mo, cloth....$1.50.

The manly, whole souled, and devoted young clergyman is no fancy sketch; Deacon Sterne, the sanctimonious hypocrite; the plain-talking old maid sister; the sneaking, spying aunt, are life-like and real, while the heroine, Achsah, is a lovely character, with whom the reader is in deep sympathy.—These, with the various other characters of the story, are so combined as to produce a book full of interest from beginning to end.

Poetry.

Be Patient.

Be patient! oh, be patient! Put your ear against the earth:
Listen there how noiselessly the germ o' the seed has birth—
How noiselessly and gently it upheaves its little way,
Till it parts the scarcely broken ground, and the blade stands up in the day.

Be patient! oh, be patient! The germs of mighty thought
Must have their silent undergrowth, must underground be wrought;
But as sure as there's a power that makes the grass appear,
Our land shall be green with liberty, the bladetime shall be here.

Be patient! oh, be patient!—go and watch the wheat-ears grow—
So imperceptibly that ye can mark nor change nor there—
Day after day, day after day, till the ear is fully grown,
And then again day after day, till the ripened field is brown.

Be patient! oh, be patient!—though yet our hopes are green,
The harvest fields of freedom shall be crowned with sunny sheen,
Be ripening! be ripening!—mature your silent way,
Till the whole broad land is tongued with fire on freedom's harvest day!

Agricultural, &c.

Caterpillars and Worms.

As the warm weather comes on, the insects will rapidly increase and if not looked after will do vast injury to fruit trees and to the crop of apples, pears, currants and other fruits. They must be headed off so far as lays in our power. As for caterpillars, they not only injure the trees, but constitute one of the greatest eyesores on the farm. A tree all covered with the nests of the web caterpillar, is highly suggestive of shiftlessness. Fortunately they may be easily seen even before the foliage has got to be very thick. It is an easy matter to fix a swab on the end of a pole, dip it in gas tar and go at them. Gas tar kills every one instantly when it touches him. The great point is to touch him. Whale oil soap is good also, and so is thin lime wash.

Soft soap is good to apply to the trunks of apple trees. It helps destroy the eggs of the borer. But after the fellow has made its hole, it is necessary to hunt him up and give him a sharp punch with a wire, or some other sharp and flexible instrument. Towards the end of this month, the curculio will begin to show his work on the plum trees. One way to head him off for the future, is to collect all the young fruit as it falls and burn it, or otherwise get it out of the way. This destroys the larvæ. Another way is to turn in the pigs or the hens and let them take care of the little Turk. Jarring the trees will knock down a great many, and if they fall on a sheet they can easily be consigned to the flames.

On the whole, it is best to adopt the plan of actually killing most kinds of insects. They are not easily scared, and death is good enough for them.—Ploughman.

A Good Whitewash.

The following described whitewash is very durable, and may be used on wood, stone or brick: Slack a half bushel of unslacked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it, and add a peck of salt, dissolved in warm water, three pounds of good rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste; half a pound powdered Spanish whiting and a pound clear glue, dissolved in warm water; mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible with either painters' or whitewash brushes.

A Cheap Fertilizer.

Rutland, Vt. Aug. 19, 1875.

BRADLEY'S FERTILIZING CO.,

Gentlemen:—I have used Bradley's Super-phosphate of Lime for six or seven years, both on sandy loam and slate soil for corn and potatoes, and can recommend it as a cheap and sure fertilizer. I find nothing equal to it for my garden, and our women are quite partial to it for flower beds and plants. In late seasons it brings forward everything upon which it is used, much earlier than stable manure or any other fertilizer. I have tried it repeatedly beside the best barn-yard compost, and the result is always in favor of Bradley's Phosphate.

Yours truly, B. R. GREENE.

Anecdotes.

"Say!" said the city youth to the modest countryman, "got the hay-seed out o' your hair yet?"

"Wall," was the deliberate reply, "I jedge not from the way the calves run arter me."

In a horse-car, the other day, an old lady seated opposite a sharp-looking gentleman kept her eyes on him a long time, and finally asked, "Mister, are you a pickpocket?"

"Why, no, madam, I'm a tradesman," he answered.

"Is that so?" she sighed.

"Well, I'm awfully disappointed, I wanted to try and see if I could reform you."

"I say, boy, whose horse is that you're riding?"

"Why, it's daddy's."

"Who is your daddy?"

"Don't you know?"

"Why, Uncle Peter Jones."

"So—you are the son of your uncle?"

"Why, yes, I calculate I am. You see dad got to be a widower, and married mother's sister, and now he's my uncle."

"How much are them tearful bulbs by the quart?" asked a maiden of a grocer. He stared at her a moment, recovered himself, and said:—

"Oh, them inyuns? eight cents."

HALL'S
ON THE HAIR
HALL'S
VEGETABLE SICILIAN
HAIR
RENEWER.
Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation; which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."
Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.
Price One Dollar.
Buckingham's Dye.
FOR THE WHISKERS.
As our Renewer in many cases requires too long a time, and too much care, to restore gray or faded Whiskers, we have prepared this dye, in one preparation; which will quickly and effectually accomplish this result. It is easily applied, and produces a color which will neither rub nor wash off. Sold by all Druggists. Price Fifty Cents.
Manufactured by R. P. HALL, & CO., NASHUA, N.H.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 20, 1876.

Household Hints.

Pure soft water is the best of all blood purifiers. It dissolves most every impurity that may find its way to the blood, and passes it off through the skin, lungs and kidneys, thus washing out the blood without any irritation in the system, and without those chemical changes and deposits which are likely to arise from the action of drugs. Why then use doubtful, dangerous, and often injurious drugs for purifying the blood, when pure, simple, safe, and far more effectual water may be had without money and without price?

A hot lemonade is one of the best remedies in the world for a cold. It acts promptly and effectually, and has no unpleasant after effects. One lemon properly squeezed, cut in slices, put in sugar and cover with a half pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed; do not expose yourself on the following day. This remedy will ward off an attack of the chills and fever if used promptly.

Power of Beauty.

In vain do plain women exclaim that beauty is only skin deep, and loudly declare that true beauty lies in intellectual gifts. The fact remains the same—beauty possesses a mighty power of fascination. Men who will remain unconvinced by hours of lengthy, logical argument, will hopelessly succumb to its influence, and do what they know to be wrong for its sake. Beauty has drawn money from the pockets of misers; it has called smiles to faces which have become wrinkled by much scowling; and it has made the greedy act as if they were benevolent. The power of a pretty woman can scarcely be estimated, and she too soon learns the lesson.

Necessarily, the woman who possesses an uncommon share of good looks is vainer than the woman who is the owner of but a paucity of the same; the flattery to which she is subjected, naturally makes her so. She would be more than human if she could be the daily recipient of spoken and implied compliments, and remain as modest as she would were she compelled to exist in a sphere, in which there were no flatterers and no mirrors. She would be a wonder, indeed, if she could see crowds of admirers flocking to her side, while less gifted females stand neglected, and yet refrain from imagining that she is altogether a very superior sort of mortal. Consequently she becomes arrogant. If she has a lover, she feels bound to be continually showing him that she is amazingly condescending to have anything to do with him, and that, unless he acts very humbly and discreetly, she will decline to continue her connection with him.

More frequently, however, a woman of the sort in question has no lover in particular, but a great many in general, whom she does not think are nearly good enough for her, and whom she cuts and wounds so unmercifully that, notwithstanding her charms, they desert her one by one, and she at last discovers, to her amazement, that her beauty is faded, and that there is no one, who is worth anything, ready to marry her. Then begins her humiliation, and she soon learns that beauty is a transitory gift, which, once gone, leaves its former owner poor indeed.

A Delightful Legend.

There is a beautiful legend connected with the site on which the temple of Solomon was erected. It is said to have been occupied in common by two brothers, one of whom had a family, but the other had none. On the spot was a field of wheat. On the evening succeeding the harvest, the wheat having been gathered in shocks, the elder brother said to his wife:

"My younger brother is unable to bear the burden and heat of the day. I will arise, take off my shocks and place them with his, without his knowledge."

The younger brother, being actuated by the same benevolent motives, said within himself;

"My elder brother has a family and I have none. I will contribute to their support. I will arise, take off my shocks, and place them with his, without his knowledge."

Judge of their astonishment when, on the following morning, they found that their respective shocks were undiminished. This course of events transpired for several nights, when each resolved in his own mind to stand guard and, if possible, solve the mystery. They did so, when, on the following night, they met each other half way between their respective shocks with their arms full.

Upon ground hallowed by such associations as this was the temple of King Solomon erected—so spacious, so magnificent, the wonder and admiration of the world.

A Quaker Printer's Proverbs.

Never sendest thou an article for publication without giving the editor thy name, oftentimes secures publication to worthless articles.

Thou shouldst not rap at the door of a printing office, for he that answereth the rap sneereth in his sleeves and loseth time.

Neither do thou loaf about, ask questions, or knock down type, or the boys will love thee like they do shade trees—when thou leaveth.

Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case, or the sharp and hooked container thereof or he may knock thee down.

Never inquire thou of the editor for the news, for behold it is his business at the appointed time to give it to thee without asking.

It is not right that thou shouldst ask him who is the author of an article, for it is his duty to keep such things unto himself.

When thou dost enter his office, take heed unto thyself, that thou dost not look at what may be lying open and concerneth thee not, for that is not meet in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof sheet, for it is not ready to meet thine eye, that thou mayst understand.

Prefer thine own town paper to any other, and subscribe for it immediately.

Pay for it in advance, and it shall be well with thee and thine.

Hints to Young Writers.

Bouquet is a French word; boquet is not. Sobriquet is a French word; soubriquet is not. Hors de combat is a correct French expression; hors du combat is not. Illy is not an English word. To say that a person is illy adapted to any employment is as incorrect as it would be to say that he is welly adapted to it. Ill adapted is the proper expression. Firstly is not an English word; first should be used. Secondly, thirdly, etc., are correct. The use of the word most instead of almost, is a vulgarism of New England origin. Nouns ending in ey, form their plural regularly by adding s; as key, keys; monkey, monkeys; journey, journeys; attorney, attorneys; money, moneys. Ignorance leads some persons to write attornies and monies, instead of correct spelling. The word whisky has no e in it, and its plural is whiskies, not whiskeys. Don't write except when you mean accept.

Keep the Cellar Clean.

It is particularly healthful to keep the basement rooms of the dwelling house clean, dry, and the air pure. Old boxes, barrels and whatever rubbish there may be which is not needed, should be carried out, and the floors, walls and ceiling carefully swept, and all the loose dirt from the bins where vegetables have been stored, should also be taken away to the stable or garden. Have one or more windows open nearly all the time. Pure air is as needful in the cellar as in other rooms of the house. The cause of many of the diseases prevalent at this season may undoubtedly be traced to the neglect of the cellar. A circulation of fresh dry air is needful for the preservation of the sills and floor joists of our buildings. We have known the timbers of a comparatively new house to require replacing at a heavy expense, simply because the cellar windows were never opened. Whitewash made from lime and water makes an excellent dressing for cellar walls, and there is little danger of applying it too often. Fine wire screens fastened over or in place of the windows are very useful in keeping flies, insects, and other vermin from the cellar. The cost is trifling, compared to their value.

Unhandy Things.

Many years ago, a bill being introduced in the Rhode Island Legislature "for the organization of the militia," a hard-headed member, who had been instructed by his constituency not to let them city chaps have everything their own way, arose in his seat, and said:—

"Mr. Speaker, I goes in agin that bill. I goes in agin organs; they'll be dreadful unhandy things in battle, now let me tell you."

It is everywhere predicted that the Newport season will be the gayest and most brilliant on record.

Odors and Memories.

Wonderful is the link between odors and memories. A sprig of wild mint or pennyroyal takes one back to early childhood and sunny fields bordered by old oaks and chestnuts, and down the fox grape hollows, all now grown visionary in the distance. A breeze across the barn in mid-winter will set us in the summer fields amid the new-mown hay, and the songs of the bobolinks and the murmur of the woods.

None the less are odors linked with the airy brood of the imagination. An orange bud will carry us to Sorrento—a rose to Persia and the paradise of the houris. Even the scent from a city ware-house will send us far out to sea, away to China and the wealth of Ormus of Ind.

Any one with the least musical ear knows how subtle and powerful is the link between certain tunes or passages of music, and persons, places, scenes, associated with them; how they set us musing on the past—unlock the mysterious chambers of memory.

Not less subtle and powerful are the enchantments of odors. There is as much poetry in them as in sights and sounds. A lady with a sandalwood fan will diffuse around the room delicate dreams of Araby the Blest. The rose in her hair or on her bosom, the bouquet she holds in her hand, the faint perfume of her dress will carry one's thoughts, not only to the flower garden and the conservatory, but to all the amenities of refined female society. She will bring with her everywhere suggestion of refined culture and Christian civilization.

How can there be wrath and harsh words and brutal deeds in a room where flowers are breathing out the perfumes which seem so naturally absorbed by a woman that they may be called feminine, adding the last touch of beauty to her person by their odors as by their forms and colors?

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, MAY 20, 1876.

A Venerable Lady's History.

Mrs. Rachel Souther, supposed to be one of the oldest inhabitants in South Boston, has recently celebrated her 91st birth-day in company with two of her sisters, aged respectively 70 and 80 years. This lady was born at North Weymouth, her maiden name was Damon and her maternal grandfather was Capt. Isaac French. She was married to Job Souther, grandson of Capt. Joseph Souther of Cohasset. She has a vivid memory of the battle between the Chesapeake and the Shannon, and describes the sound of the first attack as being like that of the roaring of a thunder tempest; the house shook and the air was dark, dense and full of the smell of powder. Mrs. Souther has been the mother of 11 children, five of whom survive. The names of John, Job, and George Souther have long been familiar in connection with the old Globe Works on First street. During the past 51 years she has occupied the first house built on the old Dorchester road by her husband.

Her life has been an unbroken chain of happiness, and no blot mars her historic record. Her great secret is her living in communion with her God and trusting in his promises. Among the interesting narrations of her life, is the following in her own words:

"I was looking out of my back window, and saw a poor little miserable boy eating crumbs out of the swill pail in the yard. He put some in his hat and placed it on his head. A sickening sensation fell on my heart. I learned from him that his mother was dead; his step-mother was harsh and cruel. She kept ducks, and the emaciated child had to gather clams every morning and pound the shells to feed them. I procured a home for him with a good gentleman in the country, and left him safe with God. At the expiration of 11 years he returned to Boston a settled Methodist minister, and to find his father an inmate of the old South Boston poor-house."

This is only one of the beautiful acts in the life of this estimable lady. She connected herself with the First Congregational Church in South Boston, and has been for years a respected member of the E street Church. She has a refined, pleasant face, and is tenderly cared for by a faithful daughter. She displays quite a wealth of silver hair without occasion to resort to powder; says she can eat corn, talk with ease; make and take a joke, and pleasantly remarks that her teeth never ache. She has almost enough vigor to visit the great exposition.

A Strange Law.

They have some queer laws in France. Mr. Geo. S. Taft, son of Mr. A. O. Taft, of Point Shirley, while crossing a street at Paris, in endeavoring to avoid a passing carriage, was thrown upon his back, and besides other injuries received in the fall, his right arm was fractured near the elbow. He was conveyed to his hotel, and a few days afterwards was waited upon by the officers of the law, brought before the court and fined three hundred dollars for allowing the accident to happen. There was no recourse, it was French law, and that was enough. His landlord, in endeavoring to console him for this singular decision, remarked: "Why, Monsieur, it was only last year that one of my guests got killed, and it cost his estate two thousand dollars to settle with the Prefecture." We in America are behind the times. If all foreigners who visit this country were as careless as the Yankees who visit Paris what an income could be secured to the cities of New York and Boston, where many such accidents occur which are never made public.

No Exercise Equal to Laughter.

Nothing acts so directly upon the organs within both chest and abdomen. Ten hearty laughs, real shouts, will do more to advance the general health and vitality than an hour spent in the best attitudes and motions, if done in a sober, solemn spirit. Of course I know you can't laugh at will, so you must play with the dog, play with your children, introduce a hundred games which involve competition and fun. Open the folding-doors, move back the center-table, and go it. Play with the bags, run for the pins, play any of the games which you can recall from your early experience.

Quincy Yacht Club.

At the Annual Meeting held April 1st, 1876, the following Officers were chosen:

The words, 'working sails,' when applied to sloops, are to be construed to include a gaff-topsail."

Not so Bad as That.

It is no sin not to be well up in the classics. 'Liakim Dutton was not. But he loved the American fair. In fact, he loved two of them. Those two felt emotions of love toward 'Liakim. And they quarrelled about him like two Kilkenny pussies. Consequence was, all three were brought into court. 'Liakim, being the cause of the struggle, was thus addressed by his honor:

"And so those women were fighting about you?"

"I believe so, sir."

"You are a sort of Adonis, then?"

"Sir?" inquired 'Liakim, his eyes protruding, and a shade of pallor creeping into his face.

"You are an Adonis," the court repeated.

"Oh no, sir—never as bad as that; but I've been in the penitentiary for stealing horses."

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the Assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors be assessed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their Office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated; notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or a schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

JOHNSTON'S PATENT
Dry Sized Kalsomine
READY FOR USE.
Manufactured at
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our Patent Dry Sized Kalsomine and Fresco Paints, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

First.—Their cheapness.

Second.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

Third.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

Fourth.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

Fifth. — They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale from the wall.

Sixth.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

Seventh.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

Eighth. — They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

For Me.

BY A. J. PRESTON.

The sun climbs up the glowing east,
The dusky shadows creep away,
The opening flowers on dew drops feast,
Through crimson curtain breaks the day,
For me.

The blue bird pipes his morning song,
The crickets chirp beneath the eaves,
Gold-tinted clouds drift slow along,
And gentle zephyrs kiss the leaves,
For me.

The noontide comes with grateful heat,
Calling to life the buried grain.
The violets droop their petals sweet,
May flowers bloom and smile again,
For me.

The old elms spread their welcome shade,
And squirrels sport in careless mirth,
The grass puts up its tiny blade,
And clothes with verdure Mother Earth,
For me.

Days come and go; moons wax and wane;
The seasons bring their treasure trove;
The heavens, the earth, sunshine and rain,
All breathe of God's unfailing love,
For me.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

COCOANUT PUDDING. Grate cocoanut; then stew it slowly in one quart of milk; pour this on a half loaf of baker's bread; when cold add one pound sugar and one-half pound butter, beaten to a cream; then add six eggs, and bake.

ORANGE CAKE. One cup white sugar, one small half-cup butter, two cups flour, one-half cup cold water, five eggs—whites of four only, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, juice and rind of one orange; bake like jelly cake; frost each layer; make frosting of the remaining white.

☞ When Mark Antony threw himself upon the "dear remains" of his loved Cæsar in a Pittsburgh theatre the other evening, he struck the "corpse" fair in the stomach, which had the effect of doubling it up wiih a grunt that rather detracted from the solemnity of the occasion.

☞ There are many trying things in life, but a man's self-respect is never so wounded as when he sees a silver ten-cent piece lying on a show-case; makes up his mind to steal it; gently reaches out his hand to take it in, and then discovers that it is glued on to the under side of the glass.

☞ It is related of Sidney Smith that once, on entering a drawing-room in a West End mansion, he found it lined with mirrors on all sides. Finding himself reflected in every direction, he said that he "supposed he was at a meeting of the clergy, and there seemed to be a very respectable attendance."

☞ It is a rule of etiquette in Arkansas that no true gentleman will eat with his leg thrown over the back of his neighbor's chair, if he can help it.

☞ Do not be anxious "to get on," but rather aim "to get up." It is not the length of the journey in this world which fits us to enjoy the next, but the height which we soar above it, and the closeness of our sympathy with heaven.

☞ The most extravagant luxury in the world is that mean economizing which seeks to get the best class of work done by the best workers without paying for it.—Golden Rule.

A Kansas darkey stole a can of nitro-glycerine, and, thinking it a can of oysters, tried to break it open. They gathered up about a pint of him.

Miscellany.

Mr. Cornell's Visit.

"What has Fanny written?" inquired Sophie Phillips of her sister, Kate, who was reading a letter that her father had just brought her from the post-office.

"It isn't from Fanny."

Kate spoke so sadly that Sophie looked quickly up from her sewing, and asked,

"Whom is it from?"

"Mr. Cornell."

"Who is he?"

"Why, Henry Cornell, whom I met in September, when I was on to Fanny's. I wrote about him to you when I was there. You cannot have forgotten about it."

"No, I remember now who he is. But I couldn't think when you first spoke. But what has he written, that you look so very doleful?"

"He says that he is coming to spend Thanksgiving with us."

"Without being invited?" exclaimed Sophie.

"Something was said about his coming when I was at Fanny's. I don't remember just what. But I know he was wishing, one evening, that he had an uncle living in the country, that he could go and spend Thanksgiving with. Fanny told him that he could come and see me. He asked me if he could, and of course I said yes. But I didn't have any idea that he would come. What do you think father will say?"

"I don't know," replied Sophie, thoughtfully. "When is he coming?"

"To-morrow, in the train that is due at the village by two o'clock."

"How provoking! Why couldn't he wait until Wednesday, and then come in the last train? How we will ever get the baking done to-morrow morning I cannot imagine, and mother not at home."

"I wonder if we can't send for her," suggested Kate. "You know the doctor said that Mary was out of danger when father was over there last week. John can go for her."

"I don't think father will be willing to have her sent for. He said she was not to return until the last of next week. But I'll tell you what I will do," said Sophie, brightening up. "I will ask father if we can't have Sarah Smith to help us."

Their father just then coming in prevented any further discussion on the subject.

That evening, as Sophie and her father sat together by the fire, after Kate and John had gone up stairs, she told him of Mr. Cornell's intended visit.

"Is he coming to see how much I am worth?" asked her father looking at her.

"I don't know. What makes you think that is his motive for coming?"

"I can't tell but that he may be looking out for a rich wife. Well, I think he will soon be convinced that he must look somewhere else for her."

The old gentleman said this more to himself than to Sophie, so she made him no reply. But she sat thinking the matter over to herself, wondering if Kate cared for Mr. Cornell, and what his object was in coming; if her father was right in thinking that he was only coming to see how much they were worth. If that were his motive, he would soon have his curiosity satisfied. She knew it wouldn't be of any use now to ask her father to hire Sarah to help them, for he would be sure to shake his head, and say that would be pretending to be worth more than they really were; so she went up stairs without saying anything about it to him.

The next day John and Kate went to the station to meet Mr. Cornell. Sophie was only dressed in time to open the door for them, there had been so much to do. She had hoped that the train would be late, but it seemed to her that it must have arrived before it was due. She felt nervous and excited; how she wished Sarah was there to go to the door, so that she could become a little composed before she went down to see him, instead of having to hurry on her last bow without seeing whether it was right or not!

She was surprised, on opening the door, to see them just coming up the steps, for she thought that she had heard Kate knock. She felt cross, and must have shown it in her looks, and for a troubled expression came into Kate face; and, to make matters worse, she said such a very stupid thing!

"How quickly you have returned! Charlie must have gone faster than usual."

She regretted the words as soon as they were spoken, for she knew that Charlie was not a fast horse, and the time had only seemed short to her because she had been in no hurry for their return. Kate was provoked with her; she knew it by the quick way she spoke.

"No, Charlie didn't go any faster than he ever does."

Then she introduced her to Mr. Cornell, in a very formal way, as it seemed to Sophie. He was fine looking, with dark brown eyes and hair, and a frank pleasant smile. She liked his looks, and the pleasant way he spoke, but still she didn't feel at ease with him, and only wished that she could leave the parlor. But Kate sat so stupidly silent—never speaking a word—that any one would think she was deaf and dumb.

"Mr. Cornell is her company," thought Sophie. "He has come to see us by her invitation. Why doesn't she try to entertain him, and not leave it all for me to do? She might know that the kitchen fire will want to be seen to by this time. Why doesn't she go and see to it, or give me a chance to do so; she knows father will soon be in for his tea, and he is always cross when he does not find it ready. How I wish I could catch her eye! I would try and make her understand that I want to leave the room, and she must come and talk to Mr. Cornell. I am sure she has been looking out of that window for the last half hour. Oh, dear! Mr. Cornell has been saying something to me, I can see by the way he looks at me, and I cannot for the life of me imagine what it could have been! How am I ever going to answer him? I suppose it will be best not to make him any answer. I wish I could think of something to say to him, but I can't. I never was so provoked with Kate before in my life! I wonder if she would be so indifferent to Mr. Cornell if she thought there was any danger of his falling in love with me? There—he is going to make another attempt at conversation. I must not lose what he says this time."

"Do you know where your brother is?"

"Yes, you will find John somewhere near the barn."

Mr. Cornell left the room.

"Well, I am very glad that he has gone out, but I never would have thought he had been brought up in the country,—would you Kate?"

"What did you say?" inquired Kate, as she left the window, and came and stood by the stove.

"Didn't you hear what Mr. Cornell said, just before he went out, about having lived in the country the first twenty years of his life."

"No. I wasn't paying any attention to what he was saying."

"It was a great relief to me," replied Sophie, "to hear that he had resided in the country, for you know he won't think it so strange because we do our own work. And I am sure he went out to the barn on purpose, so that we could go and get tea."

Kate made no reply, for she felt very discontented with her lot, and wished that they had things as she thought Henry Cornell had expected to find them. She had liked him when she met him at Fanny's home, but had thought that he cared nothing for her, but had come every evening to see Fanny, and was polite and attentive to her, because she was Fanny's friend. But now she knew he didn't care for Fanny, for he had told her, as they came home from the station, that Fanny would be married to his brother sometime in the winter, and had expressed his regrets at her not having met him when she was at Fanny's. It seemed to her that he regretted it for some other reason than just because his brother was to be Fanny's husband; and she thought, while a great happiness stole over her, that perhaps he had come to ask her to become his wife, and for that reason had wished that she had met his brother. But when she thought how differently they lived from what he had probably expected—for Fanny had told him that Kate's father owned a splendid farm—she became very despondent, and couldn't rouse herself to appear as unconcerned and as agreeable as she wished to before him.

"Just look out of the window!" exclaimed Sophie, as they went into the kitchen. "There is Mr. Cornell and father talking as if they had always known each other."

"It will save me the trouble of introducing them," said Kate indifferently.

But as she went into the pantry, singing, Sophie knew that she was glad that their father had spoken to her guest, though she did not say so.

Mr. Cornell stayed a week, and when he went away the people of the farmhouse knew that he would soon come again. But none dreaded the thought of his coming, for he had made himself so pleasant and agreeable that they all looked forward to his second visit with pleasure. And Kate, with her father's consent, promised to become his wife if he would wait a year for her, which he was willing to do.

Crape on the Door.

Few people give themselves the trouble of inquiring into the origin of the custom of placing crape on the door of a house where there has been a recent death, and many suppose it is a local custom of recent introduction. It has evidently had its origin in the ancient heraldic customs of the Anglo-Saxon race, and is as old as the time of Henry I., of England, who reigned from A. D. 1100 to 1135. Even at that early period hatchments or armorial ensigns were placed in front of houses when the nobility and gentry died. These hatchments were of diamond shape and contained the family arms, quartered and colored with sable, in such a manner that the spectator at a glance could tell what branch of the family was dead, whether the deceased was young or old, married or single, widow or widower.

A PONDEROUS DOCUMENT. The Secretary of the Treasury has had copied, at an expense of some five thousand dollars for additional clerk hire, a complete list of the stockholders in national banks. It is a ponderous mass of manuscript weighing upward of 200 pounds, and should the House order it to be printed it will make two volumes of eight hundred pages each.

Letter from California.

SANTA BARBARA, April, 13, 1876.

While this fair one is wrangling for her rights, and that abused woman is clamoring for more privileges, we decided to take the privilege to which we had a right, of doing as we please, so long as that pleasing hurts no one and helps us. Moral. — Woman has more rights now than she can use, if she but take them all. Our speckled hen makes so much fuss lest her chickens be hurt, that we are tempted to take them from her lest she hurt them herself.

We desired to see Gaviota Pass, to camp out, and to have a good time without any gentlemen friends to take care of, and we did it. The we in this case is a jolly company, whose acquaintance you may like to make. Allow me to introduce to you, first, this exceedingly dignified lady on the left, being the only one of the party who has yet taken to herself a husband, claims the right of being first presented: —Aunt Charity—ladies and gentlemen; so called, for when we proclaimed as we started that we want "Faith, Hope, and Charity," she answered, "I'm Charity—the greatest of these." The braided tresses, and short, sensible, gymnastic suit of the little girl beside her, made the name we call her, "Ray," seem fitted to the occasion, for we would never dream that so many summers had passed over her head, or that she could be the dignified little puss we have seen her.

This young lady is "Jo," like no one else, original, captivating; as she tosses back her brown hair, her grey eyes laugh into yours, if you chance to call her friend, be content and thankful. But let not your imagination run away with the vision of a dainty piece of womanhood, with fluttering bows and flowing tresses; the hair tossed carelessly to the right as her hat is raised with a boyish grace, (Jo, never could do anything with her hat on), and the rifle she so deftly handles, prove her not merely a parlor ornament, though she can grace a parlor well. Always beside her you will see Kate, the Martha of the party, who sees all the places where carelessness might mar the pleasure of her friends. Lastly, we are told that every one has a duty in this world, but the duty of some seems to be "to fill the chinks." So, to fill the chinks here, is my duty. To carry this "merry quintette," and the appurtenances for a six days' trip, an express wagon is provided; worthy Mr. B. holds the reins, and "Jenny and Fanny" draw the whole affair. Horses would be too common-place for our notions, though mules do not often figure in romance.—More intelligent animals, however, it would be hard to find, and our respect for them has greatly increased since this acquaintance. Who else would understand that "We-e-e-up, Fanny," "Au-aa-gh, Jenny, you little rat," meant simply, "Be very careful."

We agreed to start at precisely six, and we felt no little amount of self-congratulation that we finally turned our faces northward, at eight. Two hours' delay gives but a small proportion to each of five ladies.

Gaviota Pass lies about forty miles north of Santa Barbara, being a pass in the Santa Ynez Mountains, where the road from San Francisco to the south passes from the inland valleys to the coast. It is the only entrance to this valley, and the place where the railroad must come if we ever get one.

We passed scattering houses all the way from the city to La Vatera, little nests built here and there in sunny slopes, and covered with leafy branches or blushing blossoms; — but you have been over this road with me, already.

Twelve or fifteen miles from home we passed the beautiful ranches of Colonel Hollister and Mr. Edward Cooper, which I hope to have the pleasure of a full description, later.

Six miles beyond, Dos Pueblos, the site of two old Indian villages and now a large ranch of fifteen thousand acres, was reached and passed, and then farewell to houses, for but three roofs greeted us between there and Gaviota. The hills grew longer and steeper, their smooth brows grew shorter, until the road grew dizzy, going straight up and down, and went from summit to summit in graceful curves.

Aunt Charity meekly asked to be allowed to walk down the hills, until Mr. B. gently hinted, that meant to walk to her journey's end, and her shrieks of distress subsided, until at last only a gentle moan at each fresh descent, told of her fears.

In one place the road wound down into a lovely dell, where one of the sparkling streams which laughed at us in every canon, had stopped to play awhile 'neath the hill-side, and the stately old live-oaks were watching it.—Cries of pleasure at the pretty scene were suddenly stopped by a sharp crack, and our swingle-tree proved a swindle-tree.

We trusted that it would not have the audacity to break, and were determined nothing should mar our pleasure, so went on. By two o'clock each tree spread out inviting arms to us, and beckoned to leafy shade, while the rippling brooks sang soft invitations to stop. Lunch was spread, and the hour passed all too quickly. Dainty ferns were gathered and pressed by those who loved the tiny things, and Jo. was encouraged by a lucky shot. An energetic jump brought down an armful of the long grey moss which draped the trees, and with a rich harvest of woodland treasures we slowly turned away from "Camp Content."

In one of the many canons, whose name was legion, a tiny streamlet crossed the road. A little, insignificant stream, which I could bridge with my hands, gave Jennie courage to step carelessly, and—our swindle-tree justified its name.

The sun was but half an hour high, our camping ground an indefinite number of miles away, and it was Saturday night. What should we do? We did the most sensible thing in the world—burst into a united shout of laughter.—But ropes took the place of more substantial wood, and we again took up the line of march.

Mr. B. thought we were to camp at the next wooded canon, but was not sure, (in California dialect, "wouldn't bet a cent on it"), but the next and the one beyond were passed, until it grew monotonous, and still we were not there. The golden light faded, and silver rays gleamed and glittered on the peaceful bosom of the Pacific; the mountains blushed rosy 'neath the hot kisses of the parting sun, then hid them 'midst a veil of purple and violets, and even that was lost, and their huge forms seemed in the moon-light to crowd us closer to the sea, and the many voices of the night were heard until we wondered at the stillness of the day, before we looked at one another and cried, "We are there!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Widow's Protest.

One of the saddest things that ever came under my notice (said a banker's clerk) was there in Corning during the war. Dan Murphy enlisted as a private and fought very bravely. The boys all liked him; and when a wound, by-and-by, weakened him down until carrying a musket was too heavy for him, they all clubbed together and fixed him up as a sutler. He made money then, and sent it always to his wife to bank for him. She was a washer and ironer, and knew enough by hard experience to keep money when she got it. She didn't waste a penny. On the contrary, she began to get miserly as her bank account grew. She grieved to part with a cent, poor creature, for twice in her hard-working life she had known what it was to be hungry, cold, friendless, sick, and without a dollar in the world, and she had a haunting dread of suffering so again. Well, at last Dan died; and the boys, in testimony of their esteem and respect for him, telegraphed to Mrs. Murphy to know if she would like to have him embalmed and sent home; when you know the usual custom was to dump a poor devil like him into a shallow hole and then inform his friends what had become of him. Mrs. Murphy jumped to the conclusion that it would only cost two or three dollars to embalm her dead husband, and so she telegraphed "Yes." It was at the "wake" that the bill for embalming arrived and was presented to the widow.

She uttered a sad wail that pierced every heart and, said: "Sivinty-foive dollars for stuffin' Dan, blister their sowls! Did them devils suppose I was goin' to start a Museim, that I'd be dalin' in such expensive curiassities!"

The banker's clerk said there was not a dry eye in the house.

A Moral and Example.

"Listen," said I, "listen and attend, and you shall have a moral and example. When the wasp now in the window entered the room, you flew at it with all kinds of violence. I wonder it did not sting every one of you. Now, in future, let a wasp, when it comes, have its bout and make its little noise. Don't stir a muscle—don't move a lip—be quiet as Venus or Diana, or anybody of that sort until the wasp seems inclined, as at this moment, to settle, then do as I do now." Whereupon, dipping the feather end of the pen in the cruet of salad oil, I approached the wasp, and, in the softest and tenderest manner possible, just oiled it upon the body—the black and yellow, like a green waistcoat—when down it fell, turned upon its back, and was dead in a minute. "There, girls," said I, "here's my moral and example: When a husband comes home in ill-humor, don't cry out and fly at him, but try a little oil—in fact, treat your husband like a wasp."

The Original Copy.

The President has given directions to have the original Declaration of Independence removed to Philadelphia and placed in Independence Hall in a safe made for the purpose. The document is nearly illegible, not because the ink has faded, but because much of it was removed on damp transfer paper by a heavy roller, and then retransferred to a copper plate covered with a thin coating of white wax, through which it was traced on the copper and then engraved. The engraving is a perfect fac simile of the original as it was.

☞ There is no reason why the brown hand of labor should not hold Tennyson as well as the sickle. Ornamental reading shelters and even strengthens the growth of what is merely useful. A corn field never returns a poorer crop because a few wild flowers bloom in the hedge.—The refinement of the poor is the triumph of Christian civilization.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

DECORATION DAY. The officers and comrades of Paul Revere Post No. 88, G. A. R., of this town, are busily at work perfecting arrangements for the proper observance of the day, which occurs on Tuesday next. We learn that the graves of the soldiers in the several cemeteries will be decorated by detachments of the Post in the forenoon. At 1 o'clock P. M., a procession will be formed in front of the Town House, consisting of the Post, soldiers and sailors who served in the late war, societies, school children and citizens generally.—The Belknap Brass Band has been secured, and Co. L, First regiment M. V. M. will act as escort. The column will move at 1.30 P. M., proceed to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where the Soldiers' Monument will be appropriately decorated; from thence return to the Town Hall, where Rev. G. W. Whitney will deliver an oration. By reference to the general order of the commander, it will be seen that flowers and refreshments are solicited, and will be received at the lower hall during the forenoon of Tuesday next.

LITTLE WANDERERS. Two small children, one aged two years and the other eighteen months, belonging to Mr. Joshua Nutting and Mr. John Pierce, who reside on Centre street in the west part of the town, wandered from their homes last Wednesday. They were found by Masters Elliott and Goodwin, after an absence of three hours, near Capen's bridge, Braintree, which is about a mile and a half from their homes and returned to their anxious parents.—The young men received the heartfelt thanks of the parents who no doubt had spent those few hours in great anxiety.

TOWN BY-LAWS. The By-Laws adopted by this Town, at the annual town meeting, have,—after a delay which has been unavoidable,—been approved, by Judge Colburn of the Superior Court for Norfolk County and so recorded, exactly as they were passed without exception or alteration in any particular. We shall publish the same in our issue of June 3d, and after that time, printed copies can be obtained of the Town Clerk.

A NUISANCE. The numerous peanut venders and other peddlers who adorn Hancock street, particularly on pleasant evenings. It is time enough to tolerate them when our own merchants fail to supply the demand for all such articles.

☞ Don't fail to attend the meeting at the Town Hall, next Monday evening. By reference to another column, it will be seen that many talented and accomplished ladies, will take part in the exercises. We predict a success for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, on this occasion.

BASE BALL. The new amateur Active nine, will play a match game this afternoon, with the Randolph nine, on grounds back of Point schoolhouse, where they have, through the kindness of Mr. Pinkham, received permission to play. All interested in base ball are invited.

ABSENT MINDED. At the recent fire on Greenleaf street, one of our well known citizens was seen crossing the street, heavily laden (?) with a child's rubber in one hand and an inkstand in the other, which he carefully deposited and returned for more.

POSTPONEMENT. The great Land Sale of the Boston Land Co., advertised for Tuesday, June 6th, is unavoidably postponed until Saturday, June 10th.

☞ "Our Henry" talked right out in meeting, at the Temperance Mass meeting at Tremont Temple Wednesday evening last. "He wanted Governor Rice to cease the use of champagne at his home, and then he might talk temperance as loud as he pleased." He further advised the presentation of leather medals to Mayor Cobb and the License Commissioners for their "masterly inactivity" in applying the license law.

BRAINTREE. The Braintree Reform Club, hold a public meeting at the Town Hall, in that town, this evening.

DISTRICT COURT. Patrick Barry of West Quincy, was before the Court last week for making an assault on Patrick Garrity, 4th, of the same place. He plead not guilty but the Court on due consideration thought otherwise, and he was fined $3 and costs.

THURSDAY MAY 25TH.

The wheels of the court had began to grow rusty from a ten days' rest, when Constable Garey, appeared with three vials of grease and set the machine again in running order, thus making happy the court officials, lawyers, witnesses, reporters and the numerous professional jurymen who have been so constant in attendance since the court was established. The first day's work was quickly done. Andrew J. Shaw of Weymouth, was the first victim, on complaint of officer Garey for the sale of liquors plead not guilty, and his case was continued to Friday. J. E. Tirrell for the defence.

Frank Blackington, and George H. Bolles, both of Weymouth, on complaint of the same officer were convicted of the crime of illegally selling intoxicating liquors, and were each fined $50 and costs. They appealed. Bolles was also defended by J. E. Tirrell, Esq.

FRIDAY MAY 26TH.

The only case to-day was that of A. J. Shaw continued from yesterday. Counsellor Tirrell called a witness who flatly contradicted the previous testimony, and Shaw was discharged.

The Lancers' Anniversary occurs June 14th.

Analysis of Liquors.

Just before the Spring elections, the public had every reason to expect to see in your columns a report of the results of the analysis of the liquors, taken by the Chief of Police, from the licensed dealers of this town; but, from that time to this we have searched your columns in vain. Come now, Mr. French, Mr Selectmen, Mr. Printer, or whoever has charge of the matter, and let us know what our drinking citizens had for beverages the last year.

AN OLD DRINKER.

Practical Friendship.

The following correspondence accompanied by a check for $1000, which passed between a committee of the 1st Church of this town, (Unitarian,) and its Pastor, Rev. John D. Wells, the present week, is more expressive of the relations existing between them than any article we can indite.

Quincy, May 23d, 1876.

DEAR FRIEND:

It is not a pleasant duty to write what will no doubt be the last official letter from the society, with which you have been so long and happily connected, but, since we must part, it certainly is a joy to know that the last act is one of love and good will.

At a meeting of the Parish, in March last, the undersigned were constituted a Committee, for the purpose of presenting you with a testimonial from the whole Society, and they now desire you to accept the enclosed check, and with it the kindest wishes for your future health and prosperity. Most truly yours,

E. H. Dewson. Wm. B. Worster, Edw. Whicher, Mrs. John D. Whicher, Mrs. E. B. Pratt.

To REV. JOHN D. WELLS,
Quincy.

Quincy, May 24th, 1876.

MY DEAR FRIENDS:

I am fairly overwhelmed by this last proof of your kindness and affection. I had supposed the limit of your generosity already fully reached, in the beautiful gifts recently made to my wife and myself; but you have now gone so far beyond both my deserts and my most extravagant anticipations, that you have put it out of my power sufficiently to thank you. I cannot say what I would. I will only ask you to believe that my gratitude is as deep and endearing as it is above expression.

Wherever I may go, and whomsoever, I may hereafter serve, I shall always account it a privilege to subscribe and call myself still,

Your friend and minister.
JOHN D. WELLS.

THE OPERA. The "opera season" in Quincy, although rather late, has been very fruitful. On Monday evening the Bay State English Opera Company presented Balfe's popular work, "The Bohemian Girl," and on Tuesday evening the Rudolphsen English Opera Company gave an entertainment, consisting of Balfe's charming opera, "The Sleeping Queen," and the Musical Farce of "Cox and Box." On both evenings, the hall was well filled with the beauty, intelligence and fashion of our town, and as a matter of course, enjoyed two most admirable musical entertainments. Notwithstanding there may be a slight "onpleasantness" existing between the two rival companies, both Mrs. Kempton of the Bay State and Mr. Rudolphsen have many friends and admirers in Quincy, and may be sure to meet with a cordial reception whenever they appear upon our boards.

Philadelphia Correspondence.

MAY 23d, 1876.

DEAR PATRIOT. Last week, our good city suffered somewhat, from both showers and sunshine. I refer not so much to Nature's refreshing showers, or Sol's scorching rays, but to a condition of affairs that has been local, but soon will be national,—the opening of the Centennial on Sunday. So bitter and divided a sentiment, never would have been dreamed of. The Clergy are preaching about it, learned and unlearned, biblists are offering some very crude arguments on the subject. The winning side will surely be opening the Grounds, allowing man to visit the entertainment if he chooses so to do,—or to do otherwise if he may so elect.

Aside from this unfortunate controversy, all things are prosperous. Rapid progress to a near completion is quite apparent to those, who like your correspondent is privileged to a frequent visit. It is true, that to see, creates an intense desire to see again and again; this takes time. So interested do all appear, that to hurry you cannot, only stand spell bound, surrounded by beauties beyond mortal comprehension.

The daily attendance is fast improving in numbers, the facilities for a journey from the most remote sections of our country are quite complete, if I may except the tariff on some of our railroad lines, but competition will cure that complaint. Eastern people passing through N. Y., will find it to their interest to patronize the N. Y. & Philadelphia New Line, Bound Brook road, which leaves foot of Liberty St., two trains in the morning and one at 3 P. M., with a corresponding number from Philadelphia. This road is in complete order. New cars with all the latest improvements, 2 1-2 hours through.

As some of your readers may not know of the quality of Philadelphia evening entertainments. I here suggest that Col. Wood's Museum, 9th and Arch streets, is worthy a visit. It contains a choice collection, and is open from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. Then Kiralfy's Alhumbra Palace, Broad and Spruce streets, is a most enchanting garden, with a performance, admirable beyond praise.

Women's Centennial Music Hall, corner of Broad and Master streets, need not be forgotten. It is under the direction of Theodore Thomas, whose very name guarantees success, and deservedly so. There is no lack of entertainments, if our friends choose to stay six months, they can be entertained. The variety is ample, let the fancy be what it may. All can select such mental entertainment as may best please them.

For the Patriot.

Letter from Mrs. Kempton.

Had the article which appeared in your most excellent paper, on Saturday last, been written by yourselves, or by any of the company whose cause it assumes, I should not have deemed it necessary to have replied; but, why a gentleman not interested, should rush into print, and give falsehood his official signature, is more than can be understood. His personal feeling must have got the best of his judgment. Notwithstanding the malice of the gentleman referred to, it is always a pleasure to me to sing before a Quincy audience. I have always been treated with the greatest cordiality when there, and I wish to thank the ladies of the committee, and the public who so kindly supported me on the evening of the 22d.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. Jenny T. Kempton.

For the Patriot.

Memorial Day.

General J. F. Hartrauft, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army, has issued a general order designating, Tuesday, May 30, as Decoration Day. General Horace Binney Sargent, Commander of the Department of Massachusetts, has also issued similar orders to the Posts in this State. In closing, General Sargent gives a quotation from an address of the late Gov. Andrew and says:—"These words are our joint heritage of glory. Let the soldier-citizens of the republic that they defended, engrave them, with his sweet memory, upon their hearts, and bear them proudly aloft upon their banners, in the solemn march to the graves of our companions in arms." In the Patriot of last Saturday appeared the programme of Commander Emerson of Paul Revere Post No. 88, of this town, requesting all societies and citizens of the town, to join with the Post, and take part in the memorial services. "In this Centennial year, when each true patriot hopes to see the proofs of peace and good will, and we meet as a united people to commemorate the events connected with the birth of our Nation, the memories of our dead Heroes whose lives were required for the establishment of that peace, should be very near to our hearts, and command our choicest offerings."

Therefore it is hoped that all soldiers, sailors and patriotic citizens of this time-honored town, will co-operate with this little band, by joining in its short march to the cemetery and take part with the Post in the observance of the ceremonies of the day.

Remember, that Quincy produced the leaders of the Revolution, and still mourns the loss of the first soldier killed in battle, in the late fratricidal war.

Veterans, nine-month's-men, and one hundred days' men, lay aside all petty jealousies, for one day at least, and join with them, that the memory of our fallen comrades may be appropriately honored.

A PRIVATE.

Personals.

☞ Our Editor-in-chief arrived home from Philadelphia yesterday morning, looking well but complaining of the cold weather. Look out for a full description of the Centennial next week.

☞ Henry Barker, John O. Holden and W. B. Rice with their wives leave this afternoon for Philadelphia. Dr. Gilbert and many other distinguished gentlemen and ladies are making arrangements to visit the Centennial next week.

☞ We learn that our townsmen, Messrs. W. A. Hodges, Geo. A. Beard, E. W. H. Bass, John W. Hersey and John H. Veazie leave on Monday, for a trip "to the Centennial." They go with the New Bedford Commandery of Knight Templars.

Pause, Stranger!

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. KING GEORGE sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "OLD CRADLE," in FANEUIL HALL, by her mother, living in the "OLD CORNER" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to UNION, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. The Sons of Liberty now flock in crowds to the same "OLD CORNER" HOUSE, where is found in endless variety

Democratic Convention.

The delegates to the Second Congressional District Democratic Convention assembled at the Town Hall, in this town on Wednesday last, at 1 o'oclock, P. M., to elect two delegates to the National Convention at St. Louis, on the 26th of June. But two names were prominently brought forward, the Hon. Edward P. Reed of Abington, and the Hon. F. W. Bird of Walpole. Dr. William S. Pattee of this town, presided, and Mr. Charles G. Chick of Hyde Park, was Secretary. A committee on credentials reported the presence of 106 delegates, representing twenty towns. The committee on votes for an informal ballot reported as follows: Whole number 97; the Hon. Edward P. Reed of Abington had 75; the Hon. F. W. Bird of Walpole, 70; Wm. A. Hodges of Quincy, 18; Eli Phelps of Foxboro, 11. The vote was then made formal, and the two first named gentlemen were declared elected delegates to the National Convention and the two others, alternates. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That our delegates be instructed that the sense of this Convention is, that they take at the National Democratic Convention every proper means to advance the principles of reform in the administration of the Government of these United States, including a speedy return to specie payments, local self-government and a strict construction of the Constitution.

Resolved, That we believe that the best interests of the country demand the defeat of the present corrupt Administration and the party which support it, and that without desiring to depreciate the eminent character and services of other gentlemen spoken of in connection with the nomination for President by the Democratic party, our preference is for the Hon. Samuel J. Tilden of New York.

Mr. Bird spoke for some fifteen minutes very pointedly and forcibly, and was frequently interrupted by applause. The Hon. E. P. Reed also declared himself, a strong Tilden man.

REFORM CLUB. Our reporter having repeatedly heard in his travels about town, such expressions as "The Club have got to quarreling among themselves." "They are about played out," and other similar remarks, visited their Head-quarters on Saturday evening last, for the purpose of satisfying himself and our readers, of the truth of the stories. On his arrival he found the room well filled, and anything but a quarrelsome spirit existing. Indeed everything was so harmonious that the principal benefactor of the Club, H. H. Faxon, Esq., was forced during the evening to remark, that he "didn't like to see things go on too harmoniously, for it spoilt all the fun." At the conclusion of the services he left, feeling well paid for his time, and satisfied that those who cavil at the Quincy Reform Club, little know the embryo giant, the liquor interests of Quincy have yet to contend with. Among other business of the evening it was unanimously voted not to accept the resignations of the President and Secretary. Messrs. William B. Worster, Jas. E. Tirrell and E. W. Underwood were chosen a committee to procure an act of incorporation of the Club. It was voted, to accept the invitation of Post 88, G. A. R., to parade with them on Decoration day. It was also voted to accept a donation of books, tendered by Rev. John D. Wells; Mr. Jacob Flint was chosen a committee to procure the same.

HITCH YOUR HORSES PROPERLY. It does seem strange that persons do not use a little more forethought. Every little while we see a horse hitched to a tree or post, by the end of a rein, just as it is dropped from the driver's hand, thus making a pulley, the least movement of which will cause the horse to back, and almost invariably damage the carriage, or injure the horse. Every stable-keeper knows it by experience, particularly our excellent Deputy Sheriff who had a successful experiment of it tried on one of his best teams last Sunday afternoon, throwing the horse down and damaging a three hundred dollar buggy about sixty dollars worth.

A SWIFT RIDE TO SAN FRANCISCO.—Messrs. Jarret and Palmer will, on June 1, begin an attempt to travel from Jersey City to San Francisco in 84 hours by rail. The train, composed of the fastest on the Pennsylvania Railroad, No. 100, one express car and one Pullman palace hotel car, is to start at 1 o'clock in the morning and cross the Mississippi before midnight of the same day. The first continuous run is to be from New York to Pittsburg, 444 miles in 10 hours. The next stopping place is Chicago, and the New York journals are to be delivered in Chicago for once on the day of publication. After leaving Chicago the train is to stop only at Omaha and Ogden, reaching San Francisco on Sunday, the start having been on Thursday, in time for dinner. There can be only 20 passengers, each to have a ticket in the form of a book, 4 by 2 1-2 inches, with covers of silver, engraved and embossed. The fare is $500.

Liquor Law.

Interesting facts for liquor sellers and owners of buildings used for illegal purposes.

The recent law relating to the seizure, destruction, or sale of intoxicating liquors went into effect April 25, 1876. It authorizes the search for and seizure, of any spirituous or intoxicating liquor in any place, vehicle or steamboat, when there is probable belief that they are intended for sale. The warrant is issued on complaint of any two persons, and the building, structure and place to be searched must be particularly described. Any place where liquors are stored may be searched, providing the liquors are for sale. Any claimant of the liquors may appear in a court and contest the validity of the seizure. If he prevail, the liquor is given up; if he fails, he must pay the court's cost or he will be imprisoned thirty days; if the value of the liquor with the vessel containing it is less than fifty dollars, the Police court may take the same, subject to the right of appeal of the claimant to the criminal term of the Superior court. If over fifty dollars, the writ is made returnable to the Superior court. The law provides that where a person is found guilty of selling or keeping liquor contrary to law, a notice shall be sent to his landlord and such notice shall terminate his lease, and renders the owner liable to the fine under Section 9 of Chapter 87 of the General Statues.

It also provides that any Selectman, Sheriff, or Police Officer may, without a warrant, arrest a person found in the act of illegally selling or delivering intoxicating liquors, and detain them in some place of safe-keeping until warrants can be procured. All liquors, and the vessels containing them, kept or sold illegally, are declared common nuisances.

CENTENNIAL COLLECTION. We are informed that our well known and enterprising townsman, Joseph T. French, (determined not to be outdone by John H. Murray or Barnum,) has for many years been collecting, in a quiet and unostentatious way, a large and valuable collection of carriages, embracing one of nearly every pattern which has been in use during the past century. Mr. French thinks there is but one link missing, and he has dispatched an agent after it, and on his arrival this morning with the original "two-wheeled shay," the exhibition will be thrown open to the public free. It being a holiday afternoon, Mr. French trusts the boys will not injure the paint and varnish by a too close inspection of the vehicles. We are informed that this stock will soon be for sale, when the lovers of the rare and antique will have an opportunity to procure a relic of "ye olden times."

☞ Madam Rumor, (the good old dame,) tells us that some one is about starting a new bakery at South Quincy. ☞ The centennial postage envelopes are of the denomination of three cents, and are issued and sold only at the centennial branch post office in Philadelphia. They are not good after the 10th of November. The design is a green escutcheon with a mail carrier on horseback, representing 1776, and an express train representing 1876. These dates are on the stamp, together with the words, "Centennial, United States—three cents."

☞ A grand Centennial tree planting took place at Paxton on Saturday under the auspicies of the Grange. In the morning a number of townspeople with ox teams took their way to the woods to procure trees. On their return they repaired to the town hall where the ladies of the Grange had prepared an excellent old-fashioned dinner. After the dinner there was speaking, and music by the Grange quartette. These festivities over, the work of setting out the trees was attended to.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation, torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anemia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions. 4w

A stroll through his Extensive Establishment will convince the most sceptical of this fact. His Men's suits, called the Knickerbocker, for $12, is a marvel of beauty, durability and cheapness. Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.
"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

Centennial Egg.

The citizens of the south part of the town, have been somewhat entertained the past week, by the report, that they were soon to have a look at one of the curiosities of the age, in the shape of a mammoth egg, said to be the product of a hen, owned by Abel Nutting, Esq. It is said to be fourteen inches in circumference and eight inches long, and weighs nearly a pound. The hen is quite small, and of a new breed, raised only by Mr. Nutting, and is called the pepper hen. The egg has been sold for a fabulous sum, to a gentleman, who will leave it on exhibition for a few days at the store of Edward A. Adams, after which, he proposes to send it to the Great Exhibition at Philadelphia. * * *

Centennial Sentiments.

Pile up the stout old hickory,
  What if the chimneys smoke?
We'll have the blaze of other days
  No matter if we choke.
Let flues, and grates, and double plates,
  Be hence consigned—below;
The open hearth saw Freedom's birth,
  One hundred years ago!

Fill up your good old wassail bowl,
  And let your beakers brim,
While far and near, in notes of cheer,
  Resounds the nation's hymn.
From peak to peak the echoes speak,
  From shore to shore they flow—
The thunder tone that shook a throne,
  One hundred years ago!

A hundred years! My modest muse,
  Come swell the joyous strain,
For such a rhyme, and such a time
  You nee'r can sing again.
Though stubborn fact may stand intact,
  And fancy deathless grow;
Who'll ever say, "I saw this day
  One hundred years ago?"

A hundred years ago, my friends!
  Now blessed be the wight
Whose grand maternal grandfather
  Smelt powder in the fight;
And proud the dame, whose honored name,
  And stiff brocades can show,
Her mother's race wore silk and lace.
  One hundred years ago!

All honored be the rusty sword
  Whose weight alone would kill—
All honored be the blunderbuss
  That kicked at Bunker Hill!
The tools, 'tis true, were rude and few,
  The work was somewhat slow,
But flight or fight, 'twas done aright.
  One hundred years ago!

We move a little faster now
  Than in those days of yore;
We know a little thing or two
  That was not known before.
But at the most, our proudest boast
  Is something of a "blow—"
The work was done, the field was won,
  A hundred years ago!

Agricultural, &c.

How Deep to Plant.

The proper depth to plant seeds is a question of considerable importance, and one which, like many other similar questions relating to plants' growth, cannot receive a definite answer that would be of general or universal application. In dry, sandy soils, situated in dry climates, a deeper covering will be required than would be judicious where both soil and climate indicate the reverse of these conditions. For instance, it has been shown that peas continue longer in bearing condition on sandy soils, when sown at a depth of six inches, than they do when placed nearer the surface.

Save the Soapsuds.

However deplorable washing day may be to the household, (and the careful house mistress or tidy maid has it in her power to greatly modify its discomforts,) to the garden it is a very bountiful" day. Our hungry and thirsty grape vines and flowers are glad of every drop of wash water, and will repay every bit of fatigue it may cost us to give them this fertilizer. If the sun is shining hot when we go out to dispense our favor, it is best for us to dig a slight trench not far from the root of the plant, and pour the water into it, and cover again with the top soil. This makes the water go farther, and at the same time does not tempt the rootltes to the surface of the ground.—Dutchess Farmer.

Kerosene for Caterpillars.

A writer to the New England Farmer, says:—

"I notice in your issue of the 6th inst., a method of getting rid of caterpillars You suggest the use of the cone or spiral brush. I used last year kerosene oil, put on with a common painter's brush. I put the handle of the brush through a stick on an angle of 45 degrees. In this way I could hit all parts of the nest. It kills all the worms, and does not hurt the trees in the least.

☞ Grapes can be grown in the most limited space, and may be trained to a fence, the side of a building, or to a trellis made for the purpose. They may be set from eight to twelve feet apart, according to the space to be covered. Do not set old vines; those one or two years old are preferable.—Agriculturist.

☞ A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says:—

." Set a tomato plant into each hill of cucumbers or melons, and you will have no trouble from the striped bugs that are so destructive to these plants. The plants can be tied to stakes, and if well pruned when large, both subjects can proceed with their fruiting without detriment to one another."

Anecdotes.

A French gentleman who supposed he had mastered the English language was sadly puzzled one day when a friend looked at him and said:—" How do you do?"

" Do vat?"

" I mean how do you find yourself?"

" Saire, I never loses myself."

" But how do you feel?"

" Smooth; you just feel me."

" Yee's advertised for a girl, mum, I sees in the paper," said a red-haired girl to the lady of a house at which she applied for a place in the kitchen."

" Yes," returned the lady, " but you are too late. I have already engaged one."

" Oh, ye have," rejoined the girl.—' Well, mum, it doesn't matter, for I'm going to the Centennial anyway."

" Do they ever bark?" asked old Mrs. Dorkins, gazing at a pair of stuffed sea dogs in the museum.

" No, mum," said Elnathan, " not now. Their bark is on the sea.

Relationships are rather far fetched sometimes both in Ireland and Scotland.

" Do you know Tom Duffy, Pat?"

" Know him is it? Shure he's a relation of mine! He once wanted to marry my sister Kate."

HALES
HAIR
RENEWER.

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation; which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use, the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes."

JOHNSTON'S PATENT

Dry Sized Kalsomine

READY FOR USE.
MANUFACTURED AT
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale form the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as h retofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

Poetry.

Forty Years Ago.

How wondrous are the changes Jim,
Since forty years ago,
When gals wore woolen dresses Jim,
And boys wore pants of tow;
When shoes were made of calf skin,
And socks of homespun wool,
And children did a half day's work
Before the hour to school.

The girls took music lessons, Jim,
Upon the spinning-wheel,
And practiced late and early, Jim,
On spindle, swift and reel;
The boys would ride bare-back to mill,
A dozen miles or so,
And hurry off before 'twas day,
Some forty years ago.

The people rode to meeting, Jim,
In sleds instead of sleighs,
And wagons rode as easy Jim,
As buggies now-a-days;
And oxen answered well for teams,
Though now they'd be too slow,
For people lived not half so fast
Some forty years ago.

Oh, well do I remember, Jim,
That Wilson's patent stove,
That father bought and paid for, Jim,
In cloth our gals had wove!
And how the neighbors wondered, Jim,
When we got the thing to go;
They said 'twould bust and kill us all,
Some forty years ago!

COOKIES. One cup of butter two of sugar, two eggs, one-third of a cup of water, one small teaspoon of soda, a teaspoon of essence of lemon, or almond, and flour to roll out. Roll thin and sift over lightly with coarse granulated sugar to give them a sparkle.

TROY PUDDING. One cup of chopped suet, one teaspoon each of salt and soda, one scant cup of molasses, one and a half of milk, two teaspoons of cream tartar, two and a half cups of flour and one cup of chopped raisins. Add spices if you like, and boil three hours.

☞ Some people won't let well enough alone. Take for instance, the Jersey City man who having been sentenced to a fine of $5 and costs, applied for reconsideration of the case and got three months in the penitentiary.

"How like it's father!" said the nurse on the occasion of the christening of a baby whose father was more the seventy years of age, and had married a young wife. "Very like," said a satirical lady; "bald and not a tooth in its head."

☞ Life is like a roll of costly material passing swiftly through our hands, and we must embroider our pattern on it as it goes. We cannot wait to pick up a false stitch, or pause too long before we set another.

☞ Think alway only of the best, and the good will very soon appear.

☞ A Brighton lady, riding on the cars, the other day was amused by the question of a little girl, who hearing the conductor cry the stations, looked up into the mother's face and innocently asked, "Say, mamma, do we get out at the next holler?"

☞ Our notions of life are much the same as they are about travelling—there is a good deal of amusement on the road but after all, one wants to be at rest.

☞ An Illinois minister announced on his Sunday night bulletin: "The funeral of Judas Iscariot." To which an obliging fellow added, "Friends of the deceased are cordially invited."

☞ The man who sits down and expects kind Providence to furnish him with the necessaries of life will eventually find his toes out of his boots and his stomach as empty as a church contribution.

☞ Disappointment is the lot of mortality. This is an old saying, and to some extent it expresses the experience of every human being. There is no one in whose life some morning of sunshine and brightness has not proved the opening of a day overcast with clouds, and perhaps made gloomy and terrific with storms.

☞ Large minds, like large pictures, are seen best at a distance. This is the reason, to say nothing of envious motives why we generally undervalue our contemporaries, and overrate the ancients.

☞ Truth is always consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out; it is always near at hand, and sits upon our lips, and is ready to drop out before we are aware; whereas a lie is troublesome, sets a man's invention upon the rack; and one trick needs a great many more to make it good.

☞ Andrew Jackson was accused of bad spelling, but John Randolph defended him by declaring that "a man must be a fool who could not spell a word more ways than one."

☞ A western editor says of a neighbor with a quivering eyelid, "that he stutters in the left eye."

Judge thyself with the judgment of sincerity, and thou wilt judge others with the judgment of charity.—Mason.

☞ A peaceful disposition is not absolute protection against the turmoils of life. What's more peaceful than a clam? And yet, ten to one, it ends its life in a broil. And then, how peaceful an oyster is. And then how frequently it gets mixed up in a stew.

How She Caught the Burglar.

"The paper says that they've caught the fellow who has been breaking into so many houses in this part of the town lately," said cousin Jennie, one morning, as we sat at the breakfast-table. "It's a pity he didn't come here, so that you could have added another laurel to your crown, mother, by capturing him. Wouldn't it have been splendid if it had happened so. The family would have been famous. I should have been introduced in society as daughter of Mrs. Van Stratton, the celebrated burglar-catcher, and borne the honor with becoming meekness and satisfaction. Did mother ever tell you about catching that awful thief and probable murderer, Toby Darrell, years ago, before any of us appeared on the stage of action?"

"No, I never heard anything about it," I answered. "Please tell me about it, aunt Annie."

"I've told it so many times," answered aunt Annie, "that I've got rather tired of it, but I suppose you won't let me off."

Aunt Annie smiled across the table at me in a kind of self-satisfied way that assured me that she was quite as willing to tell me the story as I was to hear it. Like all the rest of us aunt Annie was probably a trifle proud of having done a heroic deed.

"It happened a year after your uncle George and I were married. We had just begun housekeeping here, when the neighborhood began to be troubled over the frequent depredations of some person or persons whom it was impossible to obtain any clue of. House after house was broken into, and money, jewelry and plate were taken. The police was called upon, and detectives were put upon the alert, but to no purpose. The officers decided that the thefts were the work of an old desperado, called Toby Darrell; one of the worst cases in the whole list of villians with whom they had to deal, and one of the most careful and expert. He had been suspected of murder, and dozens of other crimes had been traced to him, but so successful was he in eluding the officers of justice that they had succeeded but twice in arresting him, and on both of these occasions he had managed to escape. So frequent had his thefts become, and so daring, that at last a heavy reward was offered for his arrest.

"One day George had to go out of town, and I was left alone with grandfather Van Stratton, who had come to spend a few days with us. I didn't know where the two servants that we kept had gone to. I drew down the curtains, as the dusk settled in the streets, and put some fresh coals on the fire, and sat down in our little sitting-room with a new book, while grandfather busied himself over his newspaper. In this way, with occasional remarks, the evening passed off; when the clock struck nine grandfather declared that he was so sleepy that he was going to bed, after which declaration of intentions he took out his big silver snuff-box and took a pinch of that fiery Scotch snuff he used to be fond of, and, on closing it, instead of putting it back into his pocket, he set it down on the little table at my elbow, and proceeded to warm his feet before going off to bed. I noticed his putting the box on the table, and supposed he would think of it before going to bed. But, after he had said good-night and left me, I saw that he had left his snuff-box behind him. I took it up and opened it out of idle curiosity, and the faintest scent of its contents set me into a paroxysm of sneezing, and brought tears to my eyes.

"The room was warm and cozy, and my book was very interesting, and I concluded that I would read on for an hour longer before going to bed. I don't know how long I did read, but it couldn't have been long, for the clock striking eleven woke me. I woke as people occasionally do, quietly and completely, without stirring or seeming to wake. The first thing that I became conscious of was, that there were steps in the room, and they were stealthy, sinister ones. My face was turned from the fire as I lay back in my chair, and was in partial shadow. I remember of thinking, in a quick kind of logical reasoning, that didn't trouble itself about syllogisms, that I could open my eyes a trifle without betraying the fact that I wasn't asleep, and discover who and what my visitor was. I was frightened, but felt that it was the safest way for me to appear fast asleep. I opened my eyes softly, and saw a man standing about six feet from me, with the flickering fire shining full into his face, and it was the worst and most brutal face I ever looked into in all my life. It was with difficulty that I kept from screaming out, and I often dream of seeing that man now, and always as I saw him then, standing in the red firelight, whose fitful play lit up his face with the look of a demon, watching me with his cruel, tigerish eyes. He had a sack slung over his shoulder, and I understood at once that he had been through the house and plundered it of everything worth his while to take.

"You know that your uncle George and I began housekeeping in a modest way; we had to, for he was working on a salary in those days, and after paying for the house, we didn't have a great deal left to purchase other things with. You can readily understand, then, how angry it made me to see that great, brutal fellow standing there with his sack full of articles whose value represented months of hard work. I have often wondered at it since, but the feeling of indignation was so intense as to almost overcome my fear and prudence. But I knew from the devil in his eye that he would not hesitate at any crime, that he might be provoked to for his own safety, and I think I never stirred a muscle. But, oh! I wished I might cry out for help, and have the wretch given up to the punishment he so richly deserved!

"Suddenly his eyes caught sight of grandfather Van Stratton's silver snuff-box, standing on the table at my side, and he tiptoed toward it. I had not closed it when I put it down. The lid was open in such a way that the light reflected on it brightly, and that was what had caught his attention. My arm lay on the side of my chair, and my hand was resting on the table so near to the box that when he leaned over, and reached down to get it, his fingers touched mine. I could not help a shiver at the touch, but he did not detect it.

"He lifted the box from the table and held it up close to his face to examine its contents. I don't know how I came to do it, but I never stopped to think what the possible consequences might be—I flung up my hand, and the fiery snuff flew into his eyes in a yellow cloud, blinding him instantly. He gave a howl of agony and rage, and made a dash toward me, but I eluded him. The snuff got into his nose and mouth, and he began sneezing and coughing frightfully, and tears kept running down his cheeks. His exhibition of pain was intense. It seemed to make him crazy. He ran about the room like a mad animal.

"I slipped out of the room, locked the door, and ran up to call grandfather Van Stratton. But he had heard the racket going on below, and was coming down the stairs. I told him what I had done, and he ran out after help, and was back in almost no time with some of the neighbors.

"It was easy to secure the burglar in the condition he was in. They bound him securely, and took him off to the station house. It was frightful to hear him curse and rave as they led him away. In the morning I heard that I had been the means of capturing the very person the police had been in search of so long—Toby Darrell. They offered me a reward but I wouldn't take it; and so they made me a present of a beautiful set of silver. That spoon you have in your cup is one of them. I was half sick for a week after the affair took place, but I concluded there wasn't any use in being sick over what danger was passed and got over my fright bravely. And Toby Darrell got a dozen years in Sing Sing."

Make the Best of Yourself.

Are you making the best of yourself? Are you using to the best advantage the natural powers of the body and mind given you by the Creator? Or are you droning through life in half efforts, and steadily drifting behind men of less ability than your own—men who, with even fewer talents than you possess, are making the best of themselves? think of this. Put the question to yourself as we put it to you, and do it honestly. Look the matter right in the face. Are you making the best of yourselves? If not, begin a new life at once. Do the best in everything. Be a man of self-compulsion. Rise out of indolence and self-indulgence, and not only will the world be better for your having lived in it, but you will be better for having lived in the world.

What His Visits Were Like.

"Your visits remind me of the growth of a successful newspaper," said Uncle Jabez, leaning his chin on his cane and glancing at William Henry, who was sweet on Angelica.

"Why so?" inquired William Henry.

"Well, they commenced on a weekly, grew to be tri-weekly, and have now become daily, with a Sunday supplement."

"Yes," said William Henry, bracing up, "and after we are married we will issue an extra—"

"Sh—h," said Angelica, and then they went out for a stroll.

It Was "Porous."

While a clerk in a Detroit hardware store was yesterday morning setting things to right for the business of the day, a citizen with gray locks and self-satisfied look, dropped in and kindly asked:

"Have you any four-quart porous kettles?"

"Porous kettles?" mused the clerk.—"I never heard of them."

"What do you call these?" demanded the citizen, as he nosed around and held up a kettle.

"That's a porcelain kettle, sir," was the reply; "that's what you want, is it?"

"That's what I want if it's a porous kettle," said the citizen.

"We call 'em porcelain," replied the clerk.

"What right have you to call them so? Why don't you call a dog a cat?"

"But how can iron be porous?" humbly inquired the clerk.

"How can a young man be a fool!"—shouted the citizen. "It has come to a pretty pass when a boy of your age attempts to teach a man of my years anything! Don't you suppose I know the difference between porcelain and porous?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, then, here's your seventy-five cents for this porous kettle, and I'd like to have it sent around to the house right away."

The clerk had to submit. He says that a rich man can do anything, while a poor clerk is kept down.—Detroit Free Press.

Brown Paper Cigars.

It is stated that not a steamer leaves New York for Havana that does not take out from 2,000 to 5,000 reams, or in occasional instances as high as 3,000 reams of coarse brown wrapping paper. What this paper was used for was for a long time a mystery; but it has recently been revealed that it enters into the manufacture of "pure Havana cigars." It is said that when saturated in the juice of tobacco stems, the straw paper makes a "filling" almost equal, if not superior, to the genuine leaf. In fact, it is sometimes impossible to detect the delicate film of paper interlapped with leaves in the finished cigar, or neatly folding the exterior. For this purpose, we are told, it serves admirably, the paper, under combustion, leaving no residuum other than pure white ash. To such a refinement of art has this business been carried that by the use of machines rolled over the sheet of paper an almost perfect impression of the tobacco leaf is obtained, the peculiar "spots" being printed as on calico. Smokers of Havana cigars, no doubt, will consume their "weed" with an added zest after learning of what it is probably composed.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1876.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.
☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

Grand Success.

The Ladies' Christian Temperance Union of this town held a public meeting at the Town Hall, on Monday evening last, which proved a very successful affair. The hall was densely crowded with a congregation largely composed of ladies, all apparently deeply interested in the purposes of the occasion. The meeting was opened with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Chapin of North Weymouth, after which an address was delivered by Miss Oliver, a talented young lady from the Boston Theological School. Then followed a solo by the talented Miss Starbird of Boston, which was sung with her usual artistic and beautiful style and grace, and was greeted with deafening applause, which must have indicated to this lady that her rare talent is appreciated by an audience in Quincy.

Next in order was a reading by Miss Kate Davis, of Boston; the selection being the "Charcoal Man," which was performed in an elegant and artistic manner and did great credit to this promising young reader. We think we never listened to better reading in this hall, and we submit our opinion to the criticism of all present. From the applause which followed she must be aware that her talent and genius in this direction promise flattering results in the future.

Next came remarks from Mrs. Chapin, the acknowledged lady orator of North Weymouth, whose pleasing ways and graceful manners assisted to impress upon her hearers the force of her eloquent and effectual appeal in behalf of the cause in which she is engaged.

Congregational singing was next in order under the direction of Mr. S. E. Johnson of Quincy Point, and was followed by an address from the President of the Union, Mrs. Beiler, which was delivered in her characteristic, pleasing but forcible manner, and was received by the audience as a telling feature of the evening, and did great credit to this estimable lady. Then followed a song by Miss Davis, beautifully rendered; after which the meeting was dismissed with a benediction by the Rev. Mr. Norton. Altogether the meeting was one of the most successful of the season, and must be productive of much good to the noble cause in which these christian ladies are engaged.

BEAUTIFUL. The infant baptismal services at the Unitarian Church last Sabbath afternoon was excellent. The altar was beautifully trimmed with flowers, and three precious jewels were brought forward to be christened, viz:—Nathaniel Lord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Curtis; Harvey Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. A. Field; and Harry Eliot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Russell.

☞ The Granite Railway Company of this town, have completed the pedestal of the Webster statue to be erected in Central Park, New York, and presented to that city by Gordon W. Burnham. It is in nine pieces and its entire weight is about 100 tons. The weight of the first or bottom piece alone is 32 tons. It is now on its way to its place of destination, being transported by rail from Quincy to Boston, thence to New York by the sloop Wm. P. Hunt, Capt. Charles Blanchard of this town.

COLLECTOR'S SALE. On Thursday afternoon last, George H. Locke, Esq., sold at auction, at the Town House, several estates for unpaid taxes. Two lots taxed to Joseph H. Beals; three lots taxed to H. C. Cutter; one lot taxed to Joseph Richardson; two lots taxed to Francis Shirley; and five lots taxed to A. & F. Whitebone, all of which are on Wollaston Heights, were knocked off to Dr. W. L. Faxon. Three lots with buildings thereon, taxed to Horace A. Pinkham were sold to Capt. J. P. Jordan. Land and buildings, on Glover avenue, taxed to C. F. Billings, was also purchased by Dr. Faxon. One-half acre of land on Willard street, with buildings, taxed to Dennis Donaher was sold to Quincy Savings Bank. One-quarter acre of land on Willard street, taxed to Peter J. Donaher was bought by J. W. Robertson, Esq.

M., where they will be met by the Braintree Club, and escorted to the Town Hall.

Editorial Correspondence.

CENTENNIAL LETTER, NO. 2.

In the first letter, published May 20, we gave the readers of the Patriot, a short account of our trip from Quincy to Philadelphia. Those who go by the new line between New York and the Quaker city, as we did, have only to cross a street on leaving the cars, and enter the centennial grounds at the main entrance. Suppose we walk in. First, before attempting to pass the gate keeper, we had better see if a fifty cent piece, either scrip or silver, can be found in our wallets, as nothing else will be taken,—two quarters, or five ten-cent pieces will not do. Fortunately, we have found the desired change and are allowed to pass.

On entering, we behold on the right, the Main Exhibition Building, which covers upwards of twenty-one acres, and cost a million and a half dollars to erect. Its length 1860 feet; width, 464 feet. On the left is the Machinery Hall, covering fourteen acres, and cost $600,000. Length 1402 feet; width 360 feet. We will not now enter either of these buildings, but pass along a few rods to a narrow guage railway. Here we find a double track three miles long skirting the grounds, which comprise 236 acres, which are enclosed by a high fence. For five cents the visitor is allowed to step aboard the cars and ride around, or so far as may suit his taste or convenience,—as the cars stop at all the principal buildings about the grounds. Any of our readers who have seen the open horse cars in Boston, can well judge how the cars here appear, as they resemble those much, but are about twice as long. The locomotives are small; and often in going around sharp curves, up grades, will get stuck with only three or four cars attached. It is a delightful ride, and every visitor should take at least one trip around the grounds for the pleasure it gives.

The next building in size which we passed, is the Agricultural Hall. It covers over ten acres of land, and cost $250,000. The next is the United States Exhibition Building. It cost $60,000, and covers two acres. The Horticultural Hall is next in size. It cost $353,000, and covers one and one-half acres.

The Art Gallery, or Memorial Hall, is a very fine building, built of stone and iron, and is said to be the only permanent building on the grounds. It was built by the State of Pennsylvania at a cost $1,500,000, and after the exhibition, is to be the receptacle of an Industrial Art Museum. It covers one and one-half acres.

We have now given our readers the principal buildings with their cost and size.

There are many others, quite large; such as the Woman's Pavilion. Carriage and Wagon building, Shoe and Leather House, &c., besides nineteen buildings built by the various States, to accommodate their respective citizens. Then there are eleven foreign houses, besides a large number of restaurants and other minor edifices. Among the smaller, and almost insignificant, is the old New England Log House, erected so as to imitate the rural houses one hundred years ago.

There is nothing about the building particularly attractive outwardly. A low fence encloses the front yard. The door is in the centre, and quite low, barely sufficient for a short man like the writer to pass without hitting his beaver. On either side are small windows, with the lower sash partly covered with a sliding calico curtain. Nothing would attract your attention, if it were not for the sign over the door, or the eager crowd in the yard waiting their turn to go in.

This is the only building, we believe, on the grounds, but what the visitor can enter when he pleases, and as many times as he chooses, from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. But here an officer is stationed at the door to keep back the crowd, so as to give those who go in a chance to examine the ancient relics on exhibition. Some twenty or more are allowed to pass in at a time, and after they have examined the old mortars, cradles, bonnets, books, &c., used by our great-grandfathers and grandmothers, they are allowed to pass out by a rear door, and others are admitted by the front entrance.

Among the quaint articles we noticed, was an old cradle that came over in the Mayflower in 1620. The first pair of shoes made in Lynn. An old clumsy mortar, 360 years old; and an ancient platter which bore the following inscription:—

"This pewter platter was made in London, and is more than 100 years old. It was in the possession of a family by the name of Spear, in the town of Quincy, Mass, before the Revolution. In 1784, or thereabouts, a member of the Spear family was married to one Francis Miller, and they removed from Quincy to Waldoborough, Maine, and commenced housekeeping in a log cabin. This platter formed a prominent feature amongst the household utensils of these early settlers; and from it was served the 'Samp' of those days. It has been handed down from generation to generation in the Miller family; and in 1874 found its way back to Mass., and is now the property of Josephine Miller Jameson, of Waltham, Mass."

There were many other things that looked quite odd to us, that would appear very familiar to our mothers and grandmothers, but time and room will not permit us to mention them here.

BASE BALL. The Quincy School nine of Atlantic, met the Wollaston nine, in a match game at Atlantic, Saturday, May 20th, when the Quincy School was victorious by the following score:—

☞ Our readers have all heard of Richards, the Clothier, 24 and 25 Dock Square, but do they all know what wondrous bargains he is now offering, in the way of Men's and Boys' Clothing, not only for the rich, but for the poor, the Farmer, the Mechanic, the Laborer and the Merchant, can there find just what they want, at prices below the Gold standard—Suppose, reader, you just drop in on him; he says he likes to show his goods.

BE IN TIME! — Old people whose blood is sour and thin, or Young Folks (with adolescent Humor in their Veins) should cleanse their System by using WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL, whenever they have any ulceration in the Throat or Lungs.

The Regatta.

The first of the regattas for the present season as arranged by the Quincy Yacht Club, occurred on Saturday last. There was a very strong breeze from the southwest; and the boats had all the wind they desired, and some a little more.—The following were the boats entered:—

First Class,—Vision, Capt. E. P. Worster; Fiona, H. F. Barker; Lena, H. M. Federhen, and the Secret, J. Binney.

Second Class,—Maisie, Capt. J. H. Slade; Wildfire, H. A. Keith; Flora, W. F. Maybury; Aurora, J. C. Sharp, Jr.

Third Class,—Rocket, Capt. B. F. Bass; Red Lion, G. W. Morton; Lily, E. W. Marsh; Kate, George Saville, Jr.; Rescue, W. T. Ford; and the Jennie, P. Chubbuck, Jr. Fourteen in all.

Long before the time appointed for the start, (1.30 P. M.) a large number of our citizens had assembled to witness the sport. The judges, Messrs. J. T. Penniman, Wm. B. Worster and H. M. Federhen, with many friends of the club occupied the yacht M. Y. O. B. The signal for the first class to prepare for the race was fired a few minutes after the time appointed, and the various boats of all classes came into position.—The first class, which comprised four yachts, started on the firing of the signal gun at 1.48, and all got away well together, most of them carrying nothing but reefed mainsails. One or two started with a jib, but the force of the wind was such that they had to take them in. The second class got away at 2.08, and were followed by the third class eight and one-half minutes later.

The courses were as follows:—For first and second classes—From the judges' yacht, off Pine Point House, passing between Sheep and Grape islands to red buoy off Downer's Landing, leaving it on the port; thence leaving Bunkin Island on the starboard to red buoy off Hull, leaving it on the port; thence leaving Sheep Island on the port, to the judges' yacht passing between it and a flag boat. Distance, 8 7-8 miles.—For third class,—From the judges' yacht, leaving Raccoon Island on the port, and Pig Rocks Beacon on the starboard, to Wreck buoy, leaving it on the port; thence, leaving Pig Rocks Beacon on the port, and Raccoon Island on the starboard, to the judges' yacht, passing between it and a flag boat. Distance, 6 miles.

The race was exciting, and a good one notwithstanding the rough water, and the unusual number of accidents. The yacht Jennie, containing Capt. Perez Chubbuck, Jr., and wife, and the Rupie, occupied by Capt. Arnold and John S. Eldridge, Esq., were upset leaving their occupants at the mercy of the waves, until they were rescued by neighboring yachts. The Red Lion, Maisie and Rescue each had their masts carried away, thus disabling them from continuing in the race.

The following is the actual and corrected time as given by the Judges, of the yachts whose time were taken:—

DRAMATIC. The event of the season at Wollaston, was Thursday Evenings' entertainment, by the Wollaston Dramatic Art Club, in the Hall of the Beal street School House, it being the last of a number of very enjoyable entertainments, given by that club the past winter.

The plays presented were,—My Brothers Keeper and the Two Buzzards,—considering the infancy of the Club, the entertainment was a splendid success.

Much praise is due Miss Taylor and Miss Brown for the perfect manner in which they acted the parts of Grace and Rachel.

The Club is to be congratulated upon its rapid advancement since the beginning, and we predict new honors for it the next season.

LIQUOR SEIZURE. Constable Garey, of Weymouth, is still on the war-path, following the trail of the venders of the ardent. On Wednesday last, he found an extensive assortment at the Pine Point house, near the Point bridge, which he captured and in due time will bring before his Honor, Judge Bumpus for disposal.

☞ Firemen, don't forget your regular Company meeting on Monday evening next.

Loss of Appetite.

In persons of sedentary and literary pursuits, if the brain is overworked and the muscles underworked, the appetite is very apt to fail, from a general atony of the system. The PERUVIAN SYRUP restores the tone of the digestive system, and consequently the appetite, by supplying a pure blood to organs too weak to make it without assistance. Sold by all druggists.

Marriages.

In East Milton, May 28th, by Rev. S. Kelley of this town, Dr. Alonzo G. Bush of Fairfax, Vt., to Miss Flora D. Paris of Milton.

In Portland, June 1st, by Rev. E. Y. Hincks, Mr. John C. Randall of Quincy to Miss Henrietta L. Pickering of Portland. [No cards.]

Deaths.

In this town, May 29th, Rachel V., daughter of Mr. Peter B. and Mrs. Mary B. Mead, aged 6 years, 5 months and 17 days.

May 30th, Annie E., daughter of the late Annie E. Whitcomb, aged 8 months and 5 days.

In Plainfield, N. J., May 24th, Mr. Charles W. Newman, aged 55 years.

In So. Braintree, May 30th, Mr. James P. Bishop, aged 83 years.

The Evil Fruits of Weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopoeia or out of it. A wineglassful of the Bitters should be taken before each meal. J3.4w

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Referring to a letter in your issue of May 27th, in answer to a communication by "J. B. S.," in which he is charged with giving falsehood his official signature, I wish to say that the writer of that letter is evidently not acquainted with the facts of the case. "J. B. S." gave his signature to a statement which he considered true, all information having been obtained by him and by me from parties in Quincy and Boston directly concerned in the case. It will be easy to prove the truth of the statement referred to.

The above charge must be substantiated and proven, before it can have any weight whatever with the people of Quincy. I am ready to have this matter sifted to the bottom and brought before the public, if any one desires it.

Being well satisfied with the turn things have taken, I shall be equally pleased to let the matter drop, leaving the public to draw its own conclusions.

Yours truly,
J. F. RUDOLPHSEN.

Memorial Day.

HOW OBSERVED IN QUINCY.

The sun rose on Tuesday morning last on one of the most fitting days for the occasion that could be desired, the shower of the previous evening had lain the dust and cooled the atmosphere, which added much to the pleasure of those engaged in paying their annual floral tribute to the memory of our fallen heroes. As usual, the programme arranged by the comrades of Post 88, G. A. R., was appropriate, and successfully carried out. At 7 o'clock. A. M., detachments from the Post left the Town Hall and proceeded to decorate the graves in the Mt. Wollaston and Hancock street Cemeteries, and the burial ground of the National Sailors' Home. Shortly after their return to the hall, a procession was formed, comprising the Belknap Band, Dorchester Rifles (Co. I, 1st Regt. M. V. M.) and Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., which took up its line of march at 9.30 A. M., for the Episcopal, Catholic, and Hall Cemeteries.

The services at the Catholic Cemetery were performed by Rev. F. Friguglietti. At the Hall Cemetery a prayer was offered by Rev. Samuel Kelley, and the following address delivered by Past Commander J. P. Jordan:

FRIENDS AND COMRADES. This beautiful spring morning we have assembled to renew our fraternity to our fallen comrades, and to perpetuate their memories with floral tributes brought by tender loving hands. They sleep in death that the principles of unity and equal rights, founded at so much heroic devotion and sacrifice, by our forefathers one hundred years ago, and bequeathed to us, might be maintained in all their purity; this inheritance they nobly guarded by the sacrifice of their lives, and on this proud year of our nation's greatness, over America's vast domain floats one flag, the Stars and Stripes, looking down on a united, free and happy people.

With love and veneration we have strewn their earthly resting places with fair flowers—they nobly performed life's duties—an honored death, a nation's gratitude, the loving remembrance of their dear ones, their friends and their comrades, and a home in paradise is their reward.

The comrades of the Grand Army who have escaped the dangers and perils of the late war have no more shot and shell to face, no more weary marches, no more privations on ship board, no more flags to carry through the smoke and fire of battle, or of sickness and suffering in Southern hospitals, far away from home and friends; but they now have to fight the battles of life, not with the sword and gun but with the ploughshare and the sickle.

Heroism can be displayed in their daily life and avocations as well as in the field; more is expected of those who have periled their lives in the preservation of the union. There is a halo and reverence accorded to the soldier, which will continue through eternity if every one should realize the dignity and manhood he had attained in the noble position of a defender of his country, and will carry to the work-bench, to the counting-room, or in tilling the soil such noble resolutions and energy as he displayed in the service of the nation.

I assisted this morning to decorate with nature's tokens a new made grave yonder. We all know that Comrade Ripley proved as true a citizen as he proved a true soldier. So let us all remember that the war is over; the memories alone remain; remember that to bequeath to our posterity our now good and glorious name of a soldier, we cannot rest on that record alone but we fight on in the battles of life and leave an honorable record so that when the bugle sounds the call to that grand encampment above, we shall be as well prepared as was our comrade who lies yonder.

Comrades, it is a half score and more years since the last gun was fired, and since the last comrade yielded up his life on Southern soil; gradually the heroic memories of those dark days of the republic have been gathered; year by year the living comrades clustered the recollections of their fallen comrades and thus has developed and bloomed into existence the grand Memorial Day of the Grand Army of the Republic; and on this day, not only New England, but from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in nearly every town and hamlet, comrades of our order with reverent hands are strewing floral tributes, and in sections remote from our order groups of those who lost dear ones in the cause may be seen occupied in the same beautiful and glorious work. The merchant, the manufacturer, and those whose only existence seems to be to acquire money, have by common consent cheerfully laid aside the cares of life to unite with us in the tender memories of the day.

Our own citizens have been most kind and generous to us, and our hearts are full of gratitude to those who so kindly assisted us and wished us God speed.

Comrades, before we leave this sacred spot let us clasp hands in spirit across the graves of our comrades and to renew the principles of our order; Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty. Fraternity to one another and to the deserving soldiers; to pledge ourselves anew to that Charity to the needy, which is given without vain glory or commendation, to that Loyalty which should ever be as fresh in our hearts as these flowers; and finally to realize that to us, more than to any living men, we must keep sacred and inviolate the watchword of our order, and solemnly bequeath the same to our children as the watchword of the Republic, "Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty."

After completing the decoration services the column returned to the Town Hall, and partook of a collation, which had been prepared by the numerous friends of the Post.

At 1.30 P. M., a procession was formed in the following order:

Platoon of Police, under command of
Chief of Police, W. M. French.
Officer of Day,
Aid. S. B. TURNER. Aid.
Belknap Brass Band.
Dorchester Rifles, (Co. I., 1st Reg't.)
Lt. A. L. Jackson, commanding.
Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., William
Emerson commander.
Carriages containing Invited Guests.
West District Cadets, Capt. John Phelan.
Coddington School Children,
Capt. Harry Sheen.
Washington School Children.
Capt. Hanson.

The procession proceeded through Washington and Sea streets to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where the following exercises were observed:

Prayer by Rev. Samuel Kelley.

Decoration of Soldiers' Monument, with appropriate remarks by the officers of the Post, in the following order.

Commander Emerson's remarks:

FRIENDS AND COMRADES,—The anniversary of the beautiful custom of decorating with fair flowers the resting places of our fallen comrades has arrived, and the duty devolved on us.

The day's memory is full of the gentle sympathy and kindness of those who unite or assist us in perpetuating the love and reverence to our honored dead.

As comrades of the Grand Army, we have no vain glory in the day or custom; only a deep-seated love and respect that one acquires for those who make the loftiest and noblest sacrifices the human soul can make; all for the love of their country.

We, therefore, on the Centennial year of the Nation which our forefathers founded with so much heroic devotion, have placed flowery emblems on the graves of those who died that our ancestors' principles might be perpetuated; that this Nation would ever be one and undivided, and forever the home of the free.

On this shaft I place this wreath as emblematic of our order—

Fraternity and brotherly love, so necessary to us all.

Charity to those needy dear ones of the fallen, and who are now unprotected; and to the disabled of our own order.

And with a prayer that our hearts may ever be as full of Loyalty to our nation as these flowers are full of fragrance and beauty; we all unite in remembering these departed heroes with love, honor, and reverence.

Sen. Vice Commander C. A. Follett's remarks:

COMRADES:—With this red wreath I decorate this Monument in the name of Fraternity,—the pillar that supports in part the edifice of the G. A. R.,—emblematic of that fraternal feeling which binds us together as comrades; which makes us unite to-day in honor to the memory of those who fell in battle or died of wounds in the noble cause of our country. Let us unite to-day as one grand Brotherhood of Soldiers, ever true and fraternal to the living and dead comrades.

Junior Vice Commander A. A. Holt's remarks:

COMRADES, With this white wreath I decorate this monument in the name of Charity. What more noble virtue than that which breathes the true christian spirit of love for men, with Charity towards all. With the spirit of love warmed by Charity,—cheered by Charity. As I deposit this wreath, Comrades, bear this lesson well in your minds:—Charity suffereth long and is kind; beareth all things; hopeth all things. A noble gift and a priceless legacy of our Charity to the true men who died for our country's cause.

Officer of the Day S. B. Turner's remarks:

In assembling here to-day to pay tribute to the memory of our fallen comrades, we must not forget the lofty patriotism and unflinching loyalty that animated the heads of the fallen. Loyalty that required a man to leave home, friends, and all that is dear and sacred, to not only peril his life, but to endure the fatigues and privations of a soldier's life. So in the beautiful spring-time as we place these flowers on this shaft, let us remember that although for loyalty our Comrades lost their lives in the first century of our Nation's existence, yet their memory in our Nation's history will remain as beautiful and fresh as these flowers, until eternity.

The school children then laid their floral tributes around the monument;—after which the column re-formed and proceeded to the Town Hall, where a prayer was made by Rev. S. Kelley, and an oration delivered by Rev. G. W. Whitney, followed by selections by the Band.

At the conclusion of the services in the Hall, the military escort and Post 88, participated in a very creditable dress parade in the Square, in front of the Town House.

REV. MR. WHITNEY'S ORATION.

Members of the Paul Revere Post, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

We celebrate this day the memory of our martyr heroes of the late rebellion, a tribute they richly deserve. In honoring them we doubly honor ourselves, for it is rare privilege to offer at the altar of patriotism our heart jewels of love and gratitude. If there are any among us who have no interest in the occasion, they but dishonor themselves, for our Comrades of the bivouac Beyond are as little affected by such contempt, as by the dust of earth are the starry heavens.

In his lower stages of development, man is like a bud just pricking through the earth, a dim prophecy, with but a meagre measure of life. And so we find that many of the wars of ancient times were but little better than butcheries. But as man advances, his feelings are refined, he places a higher value upon his life, and more and more ceases to toy with it in reckless venture. And even the caution and greed certain phases of civilization unduly develop, often stand side by side with righteousness here, and make men shrink back from war as something too terrible to be engaged in save where it bids fair to ward off dangers, or secure blessings, greater than the evils it is sure to precipitate. Thus in civilization do individuals relate to the welfare of the nation, and tend to make even its battle tides throb with the life of great convictions. These statements find ample illustration in the history of our late struggle. How did the masses North draw back from the impending conflict, and both labor and pray for peace. Yet, when the long threatening war-cloud broke on Sumpter, and we saw that the contest could no longer be averted, with what alacrity did thousands and tens of thousands spring to the rescue of our starry emblem, and for the Union endure hardship and face death. Then others were called for, and at various times, until there was not perhaps a hamlet throughout the entire North without its citizen in the service.

These were good men and true, and therefore, wrought with valor and a mighty patience, sometimes feeling, as at Gettysburg, that God and the very hosts above were with them, and that they must not, could not fail. Of course the lives of some of them were marred by evil habits, yet like Thaddeus Stevens, they were noble in spite of their sins and foibles, because possessed and inflamed by one of the grandest of convictions.

The South ostensibly contended for State rights, claiming that we of the North were champions of the opposite doctrine. But such was not the exact situation. However much, a few in the South may have believed in State rights, it was not the conviction of any considerable number there.

Why do we make this assertion?—First, because the masses of that section were too low down in the scale of intelligence to see the principles involved in State rights, versus national; and also, because our Southern brethren were thoroughly wedded to the idea that might makes right, whereas no one can understandingly advocate State rights, without believing in right as both king and queen of might.

Their entire course as a people for many years preceding the Rebellion, confirms our position. It was at the South that education was not general, even among the whites, and there cruelty and injustice were unblushingly practiced upon humanity in black.

There the poor were very poor, and the whole current of society was against them; and there too was the place where African Slavery was not debatable. And from whence came Senators whose brutal utterances were a reproach to the Nation. And do you remember how, when the slavery agitation North became violent, the South called cotton, King, and shook at us his sceptre? Are people fully imbued with republican principles, wont to call their chief staple, king? Ah! sometimes a single word blazoned into proverb, more than whole volumes from its politicians and orators, expresses the real bent and spirit of a people. And all the while the South was threatening secession, she had unfair advantage in all national affairs, because in making up her basis for representation at the Capitol, she was allowed three votes for every five negroes. Thus she was enabled, much of the time, not only to govern herself, but the North. Even when secession was resolved upon by the leaders there, we trace the same blind worship of power, and disregard of State rights; for was not the so-called Confederacy an arch tyranny, and have we not reason to suppose the unionists were a majority in several of the seceding States?

What cared the leaders South for our convictions, or for our Personal Liberty laws? Let the Fugitive Slave Law, buttressed by the Dred Scott decision, and the early history of Kansas, attest. Such was their regard for us, and for State and Territorial rights. How then can we avoid the conclusion that the South seceded, because its leaders saw the control of the national government slipping out of their hands?

Now what was our attitude at the North, when the great struggle came? Were we thoroughly alive to the issues it presented, and loyal to the right of God? A small tax on tea roused our forefathers to active resistance, but we required many sharp thrusts from the South ere we growled, and even then our attitude was one of resistance to wrong rather than supreme fealty to the right. In the early stages of the conflict, we neither interfered, nor purposed to, with the "peculiar institution," though the negroes were made to both work and fight against us; and it was not until many of our brave boys had fallen martyrs to our stupidity, or worse, that the lamented Lincoln dared issue the Emancipation Proclamation.

Great God, are we not then called upon, by every consideration of humanity, to participate heartily in the services of this day?

Yet the masses of our people did from the first have some glimmering sense of God's presence with the nation, as with Israel of old, and they regarded secession as not only hostile to the interests of the majority, but also as a political suicide. And we were determined our Southern brethren should not die. Thus we began, but we soon learned new lessons, and God sealed them to our lasting good. Then the conflict became great and grand, as any in all history. The eyes of the world were upon us. Our victories caused tyrants to tremble, but made the world's great heart, its poor and freedom loving, throb with joy. In this conspicuous struggle our fallen heroes were transfigured in the sight of the nations. New triumphs continually flashed upon us from sea and land, until at last the battle clouds rifted, ushering in the great day of peace,—calm, clear and unspeakably radiant. Oh, the flush of joy that was with us on that opening day! No longer might Europeans taunt us about American Slavery, and no more might ill omened prophets disturb us by predicting the success of Jefferson Davis and his missions. The slaves had been freed, the Rebellion was at an end, and our surviving warrior heroes were fast returning. The Republic was vindicated. Firm and calm she stood, like mountains which lift themselves above the clouds. We felt that the Lord of hosts had been with us, strength of our right arm, and wisdom of our patriotism. Sorrow there was for the dead, and sometimes our rejoicings were broken in upon by bitter wails, but for the most part the feeling was one of resignation, and God's angels straightway ministered to that sorrow. And then we rejoiced that many of our Southern brethren who had been dead through treason, were alive again through fealty, to the stars and stripes.

Under such auspicies was the observance of this day ushered in, and shall we not allow that its services very fitly expressed the love and gratitude of the people.

Happily, it was also educative, and in a much needed direction, for gratitude is one of the foundation stones of enduring greatness. But, how is it with us, friends, to-day? Do we still honor the memory of those who fell in our late struggle, or has the gold of our first affection become dim? It is exceedingly difficult to give a satisfactory answer here, not only on account of the field that must first be surveyed, but also because, in time of peace, loyalty has no adequate expression.

We cannot believe, however, that our people are lacking in amor patriae. No true member of the Republic can contemplate without a just pride, its great lakes and rivers, its extended coast lines, and its vast mineral and agricultural resources. And when we consider that genius for invention, so pre-eminently American; that spirit of enterprise and industry which has peopled our water courses with mills and workshops, and opened almost a continent to civilization, the prospect becomes still more alluring. Nor is this all, for Nature here conspires with Liberty to produce men and women of the noblest type while our sublime prerogatives as a nation are peculiarly calculated to perfect us in all excellence. Yet there are some who rejoice not to-day, because to them so dark are the Country's prospects. They tell us some of the main branches of our national tree are physically degenerate; that luxury, waste and greed, have wrought sad havoc along the line of our material interests, and in the fibre of our manhood; that haste, with all its superficiality and fickleness, characterizes the masses; that rings and corruption are the special product of our politics, and that even if we look to our religious societies, it is but to find some of them convulsed with the assaults of doubt, and others in almost open antagonism with the principles of our Government. Even if our Present is thus black and threatening, these despondent ones should to-day rejoice, not only on account of the tonic influence they will thus receive, but more particularly, because these services do not pertain so much to the Nation's present prospects, as to glorious annals of its past. Not all our revolutionary soldiers were mercenary, nor all our defenders in the late struggle bounty jumpers. Along with the star-like names of Washington, Adams and Jefferson, glow in upper splendor, the names of Lincoln and his compatriots in martyrdom.

If the warp of our national life is dark and sordid, let us to-day look at the golden threads of noblest impulse and conviction that ever and anon linger in its woof. Let us at least honor the stars and stripes for what they have symbolized, and revere the noble spirit of their dead defenders. The man who fruitlessly attempts to save your child from drowning, yet merits honor and love for his bravery.

But are our Country's prospects so dubious as they have just been painted? Undoubtedly there are many confronting dangers and other sad features in the case, yet perhaps these are not greater than pertain to every principal government of the world. Compared with ideal standards, our national status looks sombre enough, but we lose nothing when it is contrasted with the leading governments of Europe. As a people we are not like any one of them, yet we stand on as high a level of integrity and prospect. The old headlands inevitably fade away as the race passes farther out upon the deep of time, but while Doubt there whispers of danger and ruin, does not Faith a messenger direct from Heaven speak of a haven of rest and blessedness. God schools the nations, not alone by continuous development, but also by crisis and change. These latter are his earthquake voice, and mankind have always, sooner or later, caught its words. Often those things which most alarm the superficial, are rife with hope to those who stand on real prophet ground. Why should we as a people be discouraged? The late tide of selfish greed and cunning is slowly receeding, the debris of inevitable evil from our late war is annually diminishing, while, most hopeful symptom, the eruption of our national uncleanness is largely at the surface. Many minor evils remedy themselves. Some of the gravest political dangers of the Nation have resulted from our too freely bestowing the right of franchise upon ignorant men.

In this way quantity has been favored at the expense of quality. It may be difficult to inaugurate any great change here, yet many feel the need of such a change. Have not ignorant majorities been the very fuel which has fed the flame of our political corruption? They have, and so some of our best public men have sought:—

First, By an educational test, to cut off the more ignorant from those responsibilities as citizens for which they are unfit, and,

Second, By Civil Service reform, to lessen the power of the demagogue.

And will not these efforts be crowned at last with success? Should there not also be some moral test for all who aspire to take part in electing the officers of the land? Should those who wilfully break important laws, be lawmakers? Is not that legislation which seeks to give intelligence and morality due weight in the Government, a more palpable recognition of the Mind of God, than putting his name into the Constitution? Are not intelligence and morality, together with the Christlike spirit, the only sure bulwarks of our Nation? And just here our late great struggle assumes peculiar significance. More and more, as the contest advanced, did we seem to hear, "Right commands might,"—God's voice speaking through the clash of contending armies. But we may here be reminded that our position impliedly favors a union of Church and State,—a thing abhorrent to the thought of our people. The objection can be parried by denying the implication, or among others ways, by contending that, even if Church and State ever are to be one in this Country, the time is far distant. No one denies but the boy and girl are made for each other, yet it is the part of wisdom to keep then largely separate during their childhood. Now the statesmanship of the world, and even the very Church of that God with whom "a thousand years are as one day," are very young yet, and therefore not fitted for an engagement, much less, a marriage. When the Church universal shall have answered all the vital objections of its opposers; shall have perfected its own philosophy; satisfied all the best longings of humanity; reached the unity of the Spirit, and made itself the unceasing abode of purest, holiest love,—and we believe, God helping, it will yet do all these things; then it may successfully aspire to almost any position,—but it certainly will not aspire after the fashion of to-day. At present, what church or sect is good enough, or wise enough, to take our national interests under its charge? we know not one.

Recurring, let us endeavor to give due weight in the government to quality. Let the message which so lately came to us from the smoke and roar of battle, become more and more the strength of the Nation, and we shall indeed be strong. Great dangers may await us as a people, but who has failed to note that all the grand upheavals of humanity inure to its good? Will the doubter augur that this Freedom-land shall be the exception? May we not well hope that He whose Providence guided the Colonies through the billowy deeps of war to the secure anchorage of freedom, and whose Spirit seemed conspicuous in shaping the issues of our late struggle, is still with us? As a people we seem to be directly in the line of human progress. Not a government working as a whole in favor of tyranny, but totters towards ruin. The masses everywhere are bursting their shackles, and the rising tide of republican sentiment is felt throughout the world. As Goethe, through his studies became a cosmopolitan litterateur, so we trust it will be with the nations in the development of their patriotism, for love of country is but a single branch of that tree whose fulness is love of all mankind. Then to, we believe the day is fast approaching, when armies can no longer be mustered into the service of wrong, so that however weak the nations may be on the side of positive right and holiness, weaker still shall be the tyrant's arm. Even were the speaker but a scientist, he would think hopefully of the nation, and the race. All the crises and changes of the natural world, even the Glacial period, that Dark Ages of the earlier time, have worked for final good.

And if the Spirit of blessing has ever thus wrought in the world of Nature, and with the nations, need we fear for the great Church of Christ; that Church to which himself said, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world?" Whatever changes may ensue among the nations, as nations the springs of holiness will never fail among men, for they are constant, perennially replenished with that "river of water of life" which proceedeth out of the "throne of God and of the Lamb."

All the facts in the case seem then to warrant us, friends, in taking a hopeful view of our country. But even should God in his mysterious wisdom somewhat change the form of our government, will he not yet preserve the substance of its good? This year completes the circle of our first century as a Republic, and brings into one vast phalanx of glory, the heroes of the Revolution, and our defenders, be they living or dead, during the late conflict.

Reverently, solemnly and gratefully, let us celebrate the annals of their valor, and as becomes us on an occasion memorable as this, reach wide the arms of our patriotism and also remember, though perhaps with no outward rite, those women of the earlier and the later time who, with tears and inward agony gave up their best loved to the service of our suffering country. Ourselves vitally interested in the welfare of the Republic, we shall revere the memory of all who have sacrificed therefor while these generous emotions will not be our transient guests, but constant companions, making us worthy residents of that town which gave to the Revolution a Hancock and an Adams.

Poetry.

The World is What we Make It.

I've seem some people in this life
Who always are repining,
Who never, never yet could see
The storm-cloud's silver lining.
There always something is amiss,
From sunrise to its setting;
That God's hand made their map of life
They seem the while forgetting.

And I have seen a blessed sight
To sin-beclouded vision;
Some people who, where'er they be,
Make earth seem an Elysian.
They always see the brightest side—
The direful shadows never—
And keep the flower of hope in bloom
Within their hearts forever.

The one can make the sunniest day
Seem wondrous sad and dreary;
The other smiles the clouds away,
And makes a dark day cheery.
This life of ours is after all
About as we shall make it,
If we can banish grief and care,
Let's haste to undertake it.

Agricultural, &c.

Remarks on Gardening.

Now that the weather is settled once more—now is the time for persons who are fond of gardening to indulge themselves to the top of their bent, or to the top of some one else's bent, if that comes handier.

Landscape gardening is the best form of this ennobling pursuit; but landscaping requires space, and can not be carried out with effect in a box on the window-ledge of a second floor back. Those who have space, however, should at once begin planting genealogical trees; if you have not one of your own, you can easily borrow one of somebody else. A brewer's plant, too, is a thing which looks well in a garden, and is sure to pay the grower.

Most kinds of palms do well if the situation is favorable, but the "itching palm" is a variety of this tribe which generally turns out unsatisfactory.

Budding geniuses should be carefully cultivated, and rooted aversions grubbed up.

Widows' weeds are undesirable things in a garden, but there is a kind of weed which comes from Havana, and is not half so bad.

It is best not to go in for any kind of rum shrub, and grog blossoms are objectionable.

Follow out these directions carefully, and you will soon be all a-growing and a-blowing.

Seedling Strawberries.

The way to obtain seedling strawberries is as follows: When the berries are fully ripe take the variety you wish to experiment on (and the poorest may produce as good seedlings as the best, as "like does not produce like" in this case) and mash the fruit in just enough dry fine sand to separate the seed, so that they can be sown sand and all.—Prepare a bed made rich with well rotted manure, and thoroughly mixed with the soil; and if not in a shady place it must be protected from the rays of the sun in some way. Sow your seed in a broadcast way, and cover with finely pulverized soil about an eighth of an inch deep, packing down the earth with the back of a spade. For a quart of berries mashed in sand a bed three feet square would be large enough. In about two weeks the plants will come up, and the bed must be kept constantly moist and shaded. In the fall the plants will require careful protection for winter; and the next spring they should be set in beds where they will bear fruit the third year. Every plant will be a distinct variety; and you may, perhaps, get one or two very superior kinds in several hundred plants.

☞ In Santa Barbara County, California, there is an immense farm of 2000 acres, owned by Mr. Elwood Cooper. He has in prospect a small fortune from his nut-bearing and fruit trees. He has 12,500 almond-trees three years old, also 3500 walnut-trees from one to three years old; these will begin to bear in about five years. Of the olive he has 4000 trees, and will plant out 1000 cuttings this season. Of the domestic fruits he has a large orchard. He has a warm, sheltered nook in a canon in the foothills, just large enough for 1000 lemon trees, which will be planted the coming season. Mr. Cooper will go to Sicily and procure the pure and unadulterated Sicily lemons, the best known to commerce.

☞ Col. Buckner has planted 100 acres to apple trees, four miles from Milledgeville, Georgia. It took 12,000 trees.

Anecdotes.

Elderly agriculturist to a season ticket holder on the train:—"You don't have no ticket?"

"No, I travel on my good looks."

"Then," after looking him over, "probably you ain't going very far." General smile.

A smart answer—A minister in one of his parochial visits met a cowherd, and asked him what o'clock it was.

"About twelve, sir," was the reply.

"Well," quoth the minister, "I thought it had been more."

"It's never any more here," said the boy: "It just begins at one again."

Two young ladies were conversing the other day, and one said that her heart was really broken. Charles had proved fickle.

"Was he rich?" asked the other.

"No," was the reply; "but he was so nice."

"Well, my dear," was the consolatory response, "marry old Jones, who is after you, and mend your heart with diamond cement."

"Ma! does pa kiss the cat?"

"Why, no! my son, what in the name of goodness put that in your head?"

"Cos, when pa came down stairs this morning he kissed Sarah in the hallway and said: 'That's better than kissing that old cat up-stairs, ain't it, Sarah?'"

Letter from California.

NUMBER TWO.

SANTA BARBARA, April, 25, 1876.

Have you ever seen the comfort and company which can be drawn from a stolid looking log? It is like a dull caller on a rainy morning. But light it, and see the flashes chase away the shadows, and the merry crackling disperse the sounds around you. It is like the visit of a welcome friend, with news from home.—Unless you've seen it, you cannot imagine the delights of a camp-fire; no wonder it was called the soldier's luxury, for which pine would be carried for miles.

At 8.30 P. M., Greenwell's Camping Ground looked gloomy, and the trees dark and threatening, and even the bravest betrayed no disposition to wander far into the shade. But soon a bright fire was kindled and the circle of its light was home to us. A steaming cup of coffee gladdened us, and never did supper taste as that beneath the dark branches of the oaks. Great logs of sycamore were rolled upon the fire, which soon sent its ruddy light far around us; blankets were spread beside it, and merry laugh and song woke the slumbering echoes. At length the tent was pitched, and by midnight the last voice was still. The fire flashed brighter, then died away, the pale rays of moonlight came boldly in at the open door, and the low song of the brook made me restless; and more than this, the sticks and stones beneath my blanket were none of the softest. You people in town, sleeping on springs, and rising to a Chinese-cooked breakfast,

"Why, you have but fed on the roses
And lain in the lillies of life."

But at each restless glance outside, the apparently sleeping form of Mr. B. reassured me, and I again sought "tired Nature's sweet restorer." And so the night wore away, and morning dawned, when the girls were suddenly roused by peals of laughter.

Mr. B. was sleeping the sleep of the just, rods away, while the form in which I had reposed such implicit trust was only a huge sycamore log. Any way, it had satisfied my own mind, if no robbers were alarmed, much on the principle of the boots beneath the ancient maiden's bed.

Our fears were phantoms, which took swiftest flight at earliest breaking of glad morning's light. We were fairly awake, and any attempt at further sleep was effectually overcome by the energetic comparison going on between Jo. and Kate, as to the lumps and the places where lumps were wanting, in the irrespective sleeping places.

Aunt C.'s cheerful voice soon called the laggards to breakfast, and then we first saw the place where we were. In the mouth of a canon, the mountains apparently came close together just back of us, and a little stream ran singing past on one side. Huge live-oaks lifted their green branches, and ever and anon a gnarly sycamore reared its white trunk and brawny arms in 'mid air, carrying in each fingers-tip the furzy leaves of delicate brown. The Westeners call these cotton-wood trees, but they are more like wild squaws of the forest, impossible to bring into civilization, an on reservations growing rather scrawney, but in their native woods, picturesque in their wooly blankets, and decked with beads strung on tiny threads of green.—On all sides of us were the hills, and through an opening at our feet, we caught a glimpse of the sea and the islands beyond.

Before breakfast was over, the fog came rolling in, heavy and dense, almost an "Oregon mist,"—it falls in large drops in the "web-footed State,"—and we prophesied a day in the tent, "a horrid thing to tell," Ray said, but we consoled ourselves with the thought that it was Sunday, and that we could not go to church, any way; but old Sol at length relented, and showed his face from behind a grey tissue of cloud.

The surf beat and thundered an invitation which we could not resist, and with books and shades, a part of us spent Sunday afternoon on the beach. We found a chair which old Ocean had made, which we cushioned with shawls, and half-reclining, we talked and dreamed the hours away, until our appetites proved as powerful as a Keeler motor, and no humbug. That night we grouped ourselves luxuriously on blankets and cushions, and those who could not sing, listened to those who could, as the fresh, bird-like voice of Jo. mingled with Kate's sweet alto, and "heaven songs" stole through the silent canon.

Monday clothed itself in clouds, but like the day before, repented ere long.—Before sunrise, Jo. was away on the mountain after quails, who were tantalizing us with calls, near and far. A shout would send flocks of them whirring through the top branches of the dense trees, but it was almost impossible to get near them, and Jo. decided in exasperation that they were humbugs; but the forenoon's work restored her to good humor. A fortunate shot brought down a snowy sea-gull, and brought up her ambition again. We learned to skin the pretty creature, and soon a rich harvest of wings and skins attested her powess and our skill. We gathered the little limpets from the rocks and admired their lively tints. We dug fossils from the cliffs, discovered hidden caves, and timidly explored them; found bonanzas of precious crystals, and idly lay upon the sands and wished the hours would stay their flight. We wet our feet, then took off shoes and stockings and wrapped ourselves in shawls for fear of taking cold, until the gleaming sands enticed us, and we childishly played catch with the dancing waves.

In the afternoon a party went up the canon, exploring, and brought back wonderful stories of its charms. The little streamlet plays at hide and seek among the giant mountains, and at each new turn a new beauty is exposed.

The rest of us stayed nearer home, and by night, Aunt Charity's cup of happiness was full as it could hold, for she had all the ferns and flowers she could press. Imagine her, like Cinderella, with her feet in the ashes and her not diminutive form dotted here and there with heaps of flowers. A vine of chillicothe trailed its starry bloom and deep-cut leaves over her shoulders, while its tendrils seemed striving to catch her wind-blown hair. The brilliant blossoms of the Spanish flower and wild gooseberry, the delicate lavender of the mountain lilac, and the ever changing buff or salmon of the monkey-plant, were heaped in rich profusion, while here and there a modest bloom of wild mignonette or larkspur appeared among the green ferns. Her huge hat, wreathed with morning glories, was turned up, and beneath it her round face beamed upon us most benignantly as she held up something new or strange, or she seemed vexed with a vague unrest, as she stretched out entreating hands to check the unwary footsteps, approaching too near her treasures.

But a sudden call from Mr. B. started us all to our feet, and with dismay we learned a thief had been in camp. Unmistakable traces were seen, and confusion among our household goods told of a general rummaging. A diligent search in satchel and box was instituted, resulting in the discovery that we had been robbed of half a loaf of cake.

Ray exclaimed exultantly, "it would be something to tell."

Mr. B. informed us that it was a custom among the Spanish to leave unlocked doors, and eatables were free to each other so long as the larder was furnished. Determined not to be outdone in generosity, we only wished our other half loaf had been taken also. A. I. H.

Pause, Stranger!

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. KING GEORGE sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "OLD CRADLE," in FANEUIL HALL, by her mother, living in the "OLD CORNER" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to UNION, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. The Sons of Liberty now flock in crowds to the same "OLD CORNER" HOUSE, where is found in endless variety

Ayer's
Sarsaparilla

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhœa, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1876.

Miss Maloney on the Chinese Question.

Och! don't be talkin'. Is it howld on, ye say? An' didn't I howld on till the heart of me was clane broke entirely, and me wastin' that thin that you could clutch me wid your two hands? To think o' me toilin' like a nager for the six years I've been in Ameriky—bad luck to the day I iver left the owld counthry! to be bate by the likes o' them! (faix an' I'll sit down when I'm ready, so I will, Ann Ryan, an' ye'd better be listnin' than drawin' your remarks,) an' is it mysel' with five good characters from respectable places, would be herdin' wid the haythens? The saints forgive me but I'd be buried alive sooner'n put up wid it a day longer. Sure an' I was the granehorn not to be lavin' at onct when the missus kim into the kitchen wid her perlaver about the new waiter man which was brought out from Californy. "He'll be here the night," says she, "and Kitty, it's meself looks to you to be kind and patient wid him, for he's a furriner," says she, a kind o' lookin' off. "Sure an' it's little I'll hinder or interfare wid him nor any other mum," says I, a kind o' stiff, for I minded me how these French waiters, wid their paper collars and brass rings on their fingers, isn't company for no gurril brought up dacint and honest. Och! sorra a bit I knew what was comin' till the missus walked into me kitchen smilin', and says kind o' sheared: "Here's Fing Wing, Kitty, an' you'll have too much sinse to mind his bein' a little strange." Wid that she shoots the doore, and I misthrusting if I was tidied up sufficient for me fine buy wid his paper collar, looks up and—Howly Fathers! may I niver brathe another breath, but there stud a rale haythen Chineser a-grinnin' like he'd just come out of a tay-box. If you'll belave me, the crayture was that yellar it 'ud sicken you to see him; and sorra a stich was on him but a black night-gown over his trowsers and the front of his head shaved claner nor a copper biler, and a black tail a-hanging down from it behind, wid his two feet stook into the heathenestest shoes you ever set eyes on. Och! but I was up stairs afore you could turn about, a givin' the missus warnin'', an' only stopt wid her raisin' me wages two dollars, and playdin' wid me how it was a Christian's duty to bear wid haythins and taitch 'em all in our power—the saints save us! Well, the ways and trials I had wid that Chineser, Ann Ryan, I couldn't be tellin.' Not a blissid thing cud I do but he'd be lookin' on wid his eyes cocked up'ard like two poomp-handles, and he widdout a speck or smitch o' whiskers on him, an' his finger nails full a yard long. But it's dyin' you'd be to see the missus a'larnin' him, an' he grinnin' an' waggin' his pig-tail (which was pieced out long wid some black stoof, the haythin chate!) and gettin' into her ways wonderful quick, I don't deny, imitating that sharp, you'd be surprised, and ketchin' and copyin' things the best of us will do a-hurried wid work, yet don't want comin' to the knowledge of the family—bad luck to him!

Is it ate wid him? Arrah, an' would I be sittin' wid a haythen an' he a-atin' wid drumsticks—yes, an' atin' dogs and cats unknownst to me, I warrant you, which is the custom of them Chinesers, till the thought made me that sick I could die. An' didn't the crayture proffer to help me a wake ago come Toosday, an' me a foldin' down me clane clothes for the ironin'', and fill his haythin mouth wid water, an' afore I could hinder, squirrit it through his teeth stret over the best linen table-cloth, and fold it up tight as innercent now as a baby, the dirrity baste! But the worrest of all was the copyin' he'd be doin' till ye'd be disthracted. It's yersel' knows the tinder feet that's on me since ever I've bin in this counthry. Well, owin' to that, I fell into a way o' slippin' me shoes off when I'd be sitting down to pale the praties or the likes o' that, and, do you mind! that haythin would do the same thing after me whinivir the missus set on parin' apples or tomaterses. The saints in heaven couldn't have made him belave he cud kape the shoes on him when he'd be palin' anythin'.

Did I lave fur that? Faix an' I didn't. Didn't he get me into throuble wid my missus, the haythin? You're aware yersel' how the boondles comin' in from the grocery often contain more'n'll go into anything dacently. So for that matter, I'd now and then take ont a sup o' sugar, or flour, or tay, an' wrap it in paper and put it in me bit of a box tucked under the ironin' blanket, and how it cuddent be bodderin' any one. Well, what shud it be, but this blessed Sathurday morn the missus was a spakin' pleasant and respec'ful wid me in me kitchen, when the grocer boy comes in an' stands fornenst her wid his boondles, an' she motions like to Fing Wing, (which I never would call him by that name ner any other, but just haythin,) she motions to him, she does, for to take the boondles and empty out the sugar an' what not where they belongs. If you'll belave me, Ann Ryan, what did the blatherin' Chineser do but to take out a sup o' sugar, and a handful o' tay, an' a bit o' chase right afore the missus, wrap them into bits o' paper, and I spachless wid shurprise, an' he the next minute up wid the ironin' blanket and pullin' out me box wid a show o' bein' sly to put them in. Och, the Lord forgive me, but I clutched it, and the missus sayin,' "O Kitty!" in a way that 'ud curddle your blood. "He's a haythin nager," says I. "I've found you out," says she. "I'll arrist him," says I. "It's you ought to be arristed," says she. "You won't," says I. "I will," says she—and so it went till she gave me such sass as I cuddent take from no lady—an' I give her warnin' an' left that instant, an' she a-pointin' to the door.

An Expensive Blunder.

Not many months ago, in India, a gentleman and wife, having taken passage for England, went on board with their baggage. Presently the husband discovered that there was time for him to go ashore and see a man. He went, he saw, he was conquered; and when it occurred to him that it was time to go aboard again, he hailed a boatman, and ere long found himself on board a large passenger ship. It was night. A sleepy steward inquired the number of his cabin, which he chanced to remember, as that also it was the upper berth; so he contrived to clamber into it without disturbing his wife, as he supposed, who slept beneath. But when dawn broke, and the ship was well on her way, a feminine voice was heard shrieking in a tone of terror, "Steward, steward! there's a man in my cabin!" The wretched man was aroused, and the situation explained to him. He had mistaken the ship. They were under weigh for Australia, and his unhappy wife was steaming away to England, under the firm conviction that he had been robbed and murdered by ruffians who frequent the quays. When he at length arrived in Australia, he could not even there relieve his mind, as the cable connecting that country with Europe was not completed—it having, in fact, only now been working a little more than a year—so that about four months passed before she heard anything of him.

They Tried it On.

A Detroit lady purchased a jacket at a Woodward avenue store the other day, and the clerk said he would send it right home inside of half an hour. In about four hours a package boy appeared with the jacket, and the impatient lady exclaimed:

"You boys are the greatest nuisance in town. I suppose you stopped to play marbles or hunt up a lost dog?"

"Indeed, I did't," he replied. "I went up home to change hats, and ma she had to try on the jacket and parade before the glass. Then Katy she put it on to make a call, and when she got back, ma was determined to walk over on Woodward avenue to show it off, and I got here as quick as ever I could."

Home Treasures.

Let us count up our treasures of kindred; they are our best. Is there any tie which absence has loosened, or which the wear and tear of every day intercourse, little uncongenialities, unconfessed misunderstandings, have fretted into the heart, until it bears something of the nature of a fetter? Any relationship we have not fully realized for want of dwelling on it? Any cup at our home table whose sweetness we have not fully tasted, though it might yet make of our daily bread a continual feast.

Let us reckon up these treasures while they are still ours, in thankfulness to God. Tightly, tenderly, let us bind these blessed ties around our hearts.—Let not their strength be first when broken. Now, now let us learn the full worth of our human relationships, counting over, as the veriest misers, the full amount of this, our best wealth, thatl we may use it and enjoy it richly as God would have us.

Peach Trees.

It has been found that banking up peach trees with earth, about a foot high around the trunk, causes them, in many places, to produce good crops of fruit, as the earth keeps out the borers that infest the trees at the surface of the ground, or a little below it. Before insect life begins to depredate, the trees should be examined, the borers cut out with a knife, scraping out every indication of them; and then throw up the earth around the trees, and beat it down with a spade or shovel, so as to remain in its place, and in most cases the trees will be healthy and bear large crops of fruit, if the climate is suitable for peach growing.

Daniel Webster's Plow.

A plough made on Daniel Webster's farm is among the articles that was sentto the Centennial by the New Hampshire Board of Agriculture. The plough was made under Mr. Webster's supervision, and it is said a part of it by himself. It was made to plough scrub oak land, and Peter Harvey, of Boston, says he has seen Mr. Webster and a half-dozen farmers holding the plough, drawn by six pairs of oxen. The plough was a success, and the largest one in the country.

☞ A writer in the London Daily News says—"It is not, unfortunately, generally known that in case of a fire in buildings, containing horses, if the harness be merely put on (however roughly) the horses will quit their stables without difficulty. A knowledge of this fact may be the means of saving many a valuable animal from a horrible death."

NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Quincy:

The Assessors of the Town of Quincy, hereby give notice to the Inhabitants of said Town, and all other Persons liable to pay Taxes therein, that they will be at the Office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May from 1 1-2 to 5 o'clock, P. M., and from May 29th, until June 3d, every day, from 8 to 10 o'clock, A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said Town, are hereby required to bring in at said Office a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the Assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors be assessed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their Office, on or before the 3d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated; notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the Assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or a schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1876.

Difficulties.

How much we should all accomplish if there were no difficulties in the way! High purposes and high aspirations are universal, but difficulties obtrude and leave only meagre accomplishment. Yet difficulties are clearly God's own interventions, to try our tempers and prove the metal that is in us. Without them life would be neither a struggle nor a trial, and man would run his race, leaving no marks to distinguish his course from that of other men. Difficulties, which are the plea of the timid and the laggard, the excuse of the idle, and the shoal on which the multitude wreck their rich argosies, are the sport of the bold and the spur of the persevering. They but prick the ambition and kindle the enthusiasm of the courageous. The earnest, manly spirit looks upon the difficulties that hinder the coward and sluggard as opportunities for distinction.

THE PEERLESS CASTER. There is no article of furniture that requires a good caster, so much as a sewing machine.—All ladies who use a machine, know that when they have occasion to move it to sweep or to secure a better light when running it, find it very difficult to change its position, as they are so heavy. An improved caster, called the "Peerless" enables one to move a machine with the utmost ease and facility, simply by placing the foot on a lever which throws it on the casters, four in number, when it can be rolled along with perfect ease.—Mr. N. B. Furnald of this town is agent for them, and he will be pleased to attend to any orders. Ladies having this arrangement placed on their sewing machines, will not regret the trifle that it costs, as it saves much hard labor besides the wear of the carpets.

☞ As an illustration of the limitless number of combinations which the three primary colors are capable of, it may be interesting to know that in the Gebelin tapestry manufactury 28,000 distinct shadings of yarn are employed, each one distinguishable by the practised eye.

☞ The Chinese are evidently pagans. They celebrate all their holidays by paying their debts, forgiving their enemies and shaking hands all round. The civilized people who have gone to China have not yet induced them to relinquish these old and barbarous habits.

☞ In the Lynchburg (Va.) News, there is an obituary notice, of Mr. Charles Henry Lynch, who, it is stated was the grandson of Charles Lynch, the originator of the famous "Lynch law." The old tree is still standing in the yard of the family homestead from which Judge Lynch's victims were suspended. This statement is confirmed by the authority of Webster, who says, "the term is derived from a Virginia farmer, named Lynch, who thus took the law into his own hands."

☞ The modern Damon and Pythias are living at South Abington, Mass. They are the two oldest living graduates of [illegible] University, it is said, and are both over ninety years old. They were born in the town, are members of the same church, were partners practicing law, served together as Representatives in the Legislature, and are connected by family ties. They both are in good health.

☞ Beat an egg until very light, add seasoning to taste, then steam until thoroughly warmed through, but not hardened; this will take about two minutes. An egg prepared in this way will not distress very sensitive stomachs.

☞ Bank catechism:—"Papa, what's a safe?" "A safe, my child, is a charitable institution, in which benevolent old people and orphans lay up their money for the use of sickly burglars in paying hotel bills at Saratoga!"—"What's a cashier?" "A cashier, my child, is a sign-board established by amiable bank directors to point out the way into the safe!" "What's a detective?" "He's a burglar's brother-in-law, and always boards with his rich relatives."

☞ Appleton (Mo.) claims the belt for the "biggest snake story of the season." The Democrat tells of two men who fished out of a small gulch no less than 430 black snakes in two days, many of which measured from 9 to 12 feet in length and "were as large round as a man's leg." Now for the next.

Hair as an Index of Character.

Coarse, black hair and dark skin signify great power of character, with a tendancy to sensuality. Fine black hair and dark skin indicate strength of character, along with purity and goodness. Stiff, straight, black hair and beard indicate a course, strong, rigid, straight-forward character. Fine, dark-brown hair signifies the combination of exquisite sensibilities with great strength of character. Flat, clinging, straight hair a melancholy but extremely constant character. Harsh, upright hair is the sign of a reticent and sour spirit—a stubborn and harsh character. Coarse, red hair indicates powerful animal passions, together with a corresponding strength of character. Auburn hair with florid countenance denotes the highest order of sentiment and intensity of feeling, purity of character, with the highest capacity for enjoyment or suffering. Straight, even, smooth and glossy hair denotes strength, harmony and evenness of character, hearty affections, a clear head and superior talents. Fine, silky, supple hair is the mark of a delicate and sensitive temperament, and speaks in favor of the mind and character of the owner. Crisp, curly hair indicates a hasty, somewhat impetuous and rash character. White hair denotes a lymphatic and indolent constitution. The Hair Market of Europe.

The Devoted Wife.

The most devoted and resolute of wives was Sarah McCalla, of South Carolina. Her husband had been in every engagement with the enemy in that bloody year of 1780, until on the evening of August 17th, he left the camp for a visit to his family. On the way he was captured and taken to Camden, where Lord Rawdon doomed him to the gallows. Day after day the young wife waited in dreadful suspense for the coming of his feet. At last she set out alone to search for her missing lord. She went to the scenes of Sumter's and Steel's surprise, and inquired of all whom she met on the road, which was thronged with fugitives seeking safety in the upper country. No trace of the loved one could she discover. At last she determined to go to Camden, hoping to hear of him through the prisoners in the British pens. She mounted a fleet horse, and, leaving home soon after midnight, reached Camden in twelve hours. Woman's courage, once aroused, stops at nothing. She demanded to see Lord Rawdon. The commander's aide, Major Doyle, a kind hearted officer, led her to the earl's presence. She scanned his face with keen, anxious eyes, for so much depended on the character of this young man. He was fair and pleasant looking, and the sorrowing wife at once poured out her heart tumultuously, telling all her fears, her deep grief, the sad condition of her little ones at home—all laid before him with the eloquence of a distressed wife and mother. Then she fixed on the officer her eyes filled with the pleading of tears.

Lord Rawdon's answer was quick: "I would rather hang such rebels than eat my breakfast!" Her fiery heart sprang to her lips, and her eyes, no longer dim with grief, grew bright with scorn. "Would you?" she cried; but love quickly taught her to bear, as well as to do, and she humbly pleaded: "I beg of you to let me see my husband."

"You should consider, madam, in whose presence you stand. Your husband is a rebel!"

A glance from Major Doyle checked the bitter reply that was struggling for utterance. The aide led the earl aside, and soon returned with permission for the wife to see her husband, in his presence, for only ten minutes. How short a time, and yet how much it meant to this loving woman! On the way to the prison the major reproved Mrs. McCalla for her exhibition of resentment, saying that it was only by hard pleading that he got even this slight boon for her.

They reached the prison; it was a pen!—Without shelter from the sun and rain, the poor men were lying about on the bare earth, many of them in the last stages of the small-pox. Thomas McCalla was soon found, and the ten minutes were quickly gone. With one last clasp, she promised to return as speedily as possible, and bring clothes and provisions for his use.

"Have no fear!" she shouted to the prisoners, as she reached the gate, "the women are doing their part of the service."

With a ligther heart she took the saddle again, and was once more with her children before midnight—a wonderful ride of one hundred miles in less than twenty-four hours. The brave woman at once set to work, and in a few days she started for another visit, accompanied now by a young woman whose brother was among the prisoners.

Every month, now, the devoted wife made this journey of a hundred miles, cheering her husband's heart and relieving his necessities. On the third trip she had another encounter with the brutal earl. As she left her home she received news of the glorious victory at King's mountain. Unconscious that this could work to her disadvantage, she sped on with exulting heart, thinking only of the joy to the prisoners when she should announce the event. On reaching Camden the guard would not let her pass.

The order was from Lord Rawdon, and she could only submit. She had led all the way, by the bridle, a heavily-laden packhorse. She now took the bags from both beasts, and sat down under a tree, holding the bridle in her hand. Here she determined to remain all the night, but toward evening a villager took pity on her, and brought her into his house. In the morning she pushed her way to Lord Rawdon's presence. He told her at once:—"I ought to have hanged your rebel husband at first, then I should have had no trouble with you."

"That's a game, sir, two can play at," she flashed upon him. The enraged earl drove her from the room, but the major came again to her relief and she was grudgingly allowed admission to the prison. The battle of King's mountain had different effects on the British lord and the patriot wife.

Thomas McCalla soon sickened in the filthy pen, and it was evident that his wife must secure his release if she would not wear the widow's weeds. Late in December she resolved to see Cornwallis, and plead for the prisoner's rescue. Reaching Winnsborough on New Year's morning, she gained entrance to the earl, and it was agreed that her husband should be exchanged for any captive in Sumter's hands; or, provided the latter would be responsible for McCalla's parole, he might be liberated till a regular exchange should occur. Home again rode the dauntless woman, and mounted a fresh horse for Charlotte. Here Sumter gave her the coveted pledge, and she returned, with her heart full of bright prospects. Meanwhile, the British army had left Winnsborough, and encamped near her own plantation. She hastened to Cornwallis, and was referred to Lord Rawdon! What could she hope from him? But discouragement weighed nothing in the scale against love. Sarah McCalla started immediately for Camden. On reaching the ferry, she found the guards were doubled.

Major Doyle saw her, and, coming up to her horse, he told her of the battle at the Cowpens.

"I fear, madam," he said, "that his lordship will not treat you well."

"I have no hope," she replied, "that he will let my husband go, but I must make every effort to save him." Into Lord Rawdon's presence she went.

"What! you here again? You want your husband, I suppose? Do you know what the rebels have been doing?"—for the prisoners had attempted an escape. "If we had hanged them," roared the earl, "we should have saved all this! I order you positively never to come into my presence again! You go from one army to another, and Heaven only knows what mischief you do! Begone!"

"My countrymen must right me!" exclaimed the aroused wife, as she left the apartment.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, the noble woman applied again to the American camp. She received a letter of remonstrance, and once more found her way to Camden, accompanied now by Mary Nixon, who was to bear the missive to the earl's quarters. The British commander changed color on reading the letter, and immediately ordered the prisoner's release. The tireless determination, the dauntless courage of this heroic woman had gained the victory at last. Love had worked its perfect work—the wife had won her husband anew.

Taylor—Slightest rudiments.
Fillmore—Not liberally educated.

Presence of Mind.

Professor Wilder gives these short rules for action in case of accident; for dust in the eyes, avoid rubbing, dash water into them; remove cinders, etc., with the round point of a lead pencil. Remove insects from the ear by tepid water; never put a hard instrument into the ear. If an artery is cut, compress above the wound; if a vein is cut, compress below. If choked, get upon all fours and cough. For light burns, dip the part in cold water; if the skin is destroyed, cover with varnish. Smother a fire with carpets, etc., water will often spread burning oil and increase the danger. Before passing through smoke, take a full breath, and then stoop low, but if carbon is suspected walk erect. Suck poison wounds, unless your mouth is sore. Enlarge the wound, or better, cut out the part without delay. Hold the wounded part as long as can be borne to a hot coal, or end of a cigar. In case of poisoning, excite vomiting by tickling the throat or by water or mustard. For acid poisons, give acids; in case of opium poisoning, give strong coffee and keep moving. If in water, float on the back, with nose and mouth projecting. For apoplexy raise the head and body; for fainting, lay the person flat.

☞ A wet Sunday night affects the two classes of lovers in opposite ways. To him who is engaged it is a godsend, as it enables him to snug up to her in the parlor and have the whole evening to himself; but to the other lover, the one who is not engaged, a rainy Sunday night is a most painful episode. His footing at the house isn't sure enough to warrant his going there through the storm, and all he can do is to attend the church; and stand in the vestibule, and pull up his shirt collar, in the despairing hope that she may appear. She don't, of course, and he goes back to his dreary home wretched and miserable beyond description. Oh, those days of ecstatic idiocy! how their memory overcomes us.

☞ The Taunton Gazette makes this record:—"It was a good and prayerful old lady of this city who said she had stopped praying for her husband because "I have prayed for that man so long without effect that I think the Lord has jest as poor opinion o' that man as I have."

☞ Dr. Hall says that the best and safest tooth powder is warm water applied with a brush on rising, and soon after the last meal of the day.

"Mount Wollaston."

To the Editor of the Patriot:

I enclose a copy of some verses which, it is probable, have never been reprinted since they were contributed to the Columbian Centinel for June 29, 1791.—The poem was published the year before the part of Braintree universally known as Mount Wollaston, was incorporated into a distinct town under its present name. Mr. Benjamin Russell, the editor of the journal in which it appeared, prefaces it with the declaration that "the tribute of respect paid to certain memorable characters and their natal soil claims a distinguished place in the original poetry of the Centinel." Let us lift into the light of the present century the work of this minstrel whose lyre has so long ceased to vibrate. Is not his production about as good a Centennial Poem as we are likely to get? The writer must have been a native of this place, or, at all events, very much at home here. He not only does full justice to the worthies of our ancient settlement, but treats their surroundings in the most handsome manner. The birth-place of Vice President John Adams, at the foot of Penn's Hill is a "fair mansion," (what would the poet have said to the residences of his descendants!) while the little town of Boston at the end of the bay swells into a "famed metropolis," whose "towering spires" display the beautiful and the sublime in happy combination. It were good to have lived in the days when patriots "with jurisprudence fraught," were to be met in the streets, and when our clergy not only "practised what they preached," (in itself no mean undertaking,) but did their thinking "with Scripture-orthodoxy,"—a feat for which they would have deserved more credit had they fallen upon the evil times when the writings or Darwin, Mill and Tyndall are circulated by the Town Library.

Let us hope that the encouraging prophecy with which the poem concludes awaits its fulfilment in this Centennial year! May a distinguished "post of State, adjudged by freemen," look to our community for its occupant! May those objectionable heathen deities, whom the poet declares shall have no devotees among us, be dealt with in the most summary manner! Already Mr. Faxon and the Reform Club are making short work with "Bacchus," while the altars of Aphrodite have long been in ruin from lack of votaries. As part of the posterity he was thinking of, let us heartily thank the poet for his good wishes and excellent advice. And when he looks down upon us from Vinya Villa, or wherever else he may be living at the present time, may he discover that we are not altogether wanting in the piety, honesty, and industry, with which he was so obliging as to credit us.

CITIZEN.

Mount Wollaston.

> Hic manus ob patriam—passi
> Quique sacerdotes casti dum vita MANEBAT.
> Virg. Æneid, VI., 660.

When only BIGOTS wore the PRELATE's gown,
And the first James possessed the British crown;
When human laws gave place to regal right,
And the slav'd mind was kept from sacred light:
When PRINCE and PRIMATE in corruption vied,
In fraud, extortion, violence, and pride:
O'er a few heads not so much error reign'd,
Still a few hearts such rileness had not stain'd;
These owned no power supreme in Church or State,
And from such power desirous of retreat,
With joy from ALBION's shores they here repair'd,
Here in sweet union, peace and freedom shar'd.

In this fair spot the bold adventurer gain'd
Of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY the first main land,
Here fixed their station, here their cattle grazed
Before that fam'd METROPOLIS was rais'd,
Whose towering spires impress the distant eye,
With equal beauty and sublimity.
For GOD and RIGHT they left their native Isle;
Propitious Heaven approv'd and bless'd the toil—
Decreed that HENCE the PULPIT and the BAR
Their most consummate ornaments should draw,
To sound RELIGION on the noblest plan
And manfully assert the RIGHTS OF MAN.

First o'er the infant flock a FLINT was placed,
Who long divinely cheer'd the savage waste;
His state and talents next did THOMPSON bear,
And dying left to MARSH the Church's care;
HANCOCK succeeding well his place supplied;
A fair example when he lived and died.

All these with Scripture-orthodoxy THOUGHT,
PREACHED what they felt and PRACTIS'D what they taught;
They too for TRUTH, in controversive page
By suasive argument inform'd the age,
With pious fervor from the sacred code
Maintain'd the attributes and will of God—
To Britain spread the swift progressive light
That help'd dispel cotemporary night.

Here CIVIL Freedom's choicest fav'rites grew,
Alike each youthful aim, each manly view—
Those ruins index where OUR HANCOCK rose,
And yon fair manson Adams' birth-place shows;
Thus near allied, they soon together came
And soon congenial shew'd their hearts the same,
In childish sports reciprocally join'd
Ere first the germ of Knowledge fired their mind;
United still in classick science try'd,
His studies each with rival efforts plied,
Through Language, Nature, Ethics, Hist'ry sped
Till Harvard's well earn'd laurels graced their head.
The Patriots then, with jurisprudence fraught,
Had gen'rous sentiments and virtues caught,
Safety the end of social compacts saw,
The subject's welfare all the ruler's law;
That when his views from other motives spring,
The Monarch's grown a Tyrant from a King;
His trust betray'd, then obligations cease,
And they from thraldom justly seek release.

Now the third GEORGE commenc'd his lawless claim,
Acts unequivocal disclose his aim.
Our charter'd rights for multitudes are held,
Edicts severe to more injurious yield;
Customs imposed, unjuster burdens laid,
Our lives endangered, and engrossed our trade:
The Statesmen rose, each patriot measure led,
Nor felt their peril while their country bled.

Thou Quincy too, shall decorate my lay,
Snatch'd from Columbia e'er the zenith ray—
In these bright parts with liberal culture join'd
Adorn'd the friend of justice and mankind.
Not here alone thy parents' joy and hope;
A sinking people eyed thee as a prop,
And on their good was fixed thine inmost soul,
True as the magnet to the Northern Pole.
Vouchsafe, Columbians, then the richest meed;
(The praise of merit) to the virtuous dead;
And since renown'd civilians yet survive
Nor for themselves but for their country live,
Who through the storm our wav'ring helm did guide,
Who o'er our NATION, o'er our STATE preside;
With grateful bosoms bless their ceaseless zeal,
That still pursues and still promotes your weal,
And with unfading wreaths entwine their brow,
To whom you freedom, wealth and honor owe.

Henceforth MOUNT WOLLASTON, tho' changed thy name,
Be still thy spirit and thy sons the same:—
Remember well the jewel and the GOD,
For which thy planters left their first abode.
Their steps pursued to the remotest day
Their progeny shall be as blest as they:
Thy future race shall posts of State adorn
Adjudged by Freeman, and with honour born,
And in thy beautious sacred House be seen
Pastors as wise as thine have ever been,
Enlightened, pious, true to freedom's fires,
Industrious, plain, and honest like your sires,
To BACCHUS here shall none devoted be,
Nor Cyprian Goddess find a debauchee;
But CERES still invok'd, propitious reign,
And waving verdure cover every plain:
Till all the just in realms of love shall meet,
And Heaven with joy the happy coetus greet.

Letter from California.

NUMBER THREE.

Santa Barbara, May 9th, 1876.

Something special must be planned for Tuesday, which was Ray's birthday, and it would never do, that "something to tell," should not happen "on that occasion." So we decided to go to Gaviota. To be sure, we had started with the full intention of doing that thing, but who has the right to change it, if not woman, and we had fondly dreamed nothing could be much more beautiful than the spot where we were. Kate and I were inexperienced travelers, but the other three had talked largely of their independent trip by themselves to San Diego, and we expected they would know exactly when and where we should go; but at last we found each one was seeking in a different way to reach the same place, and as there was but one road for us to go, we easily decided, and at 10.30 A. M. were en route for the Pass. From the beach where we started, the wharf seemed but a little distance, and we had a strong idea of walking, but canons and streams were passed, and at each turn it looked as distant as before, until it suggested to Ray the story of two travelers in Colorado. They stopped at a hotel so near the mountains, that one said he could walk out to them and back before breakfast. The other waited until the middle of the forenoon, and then started with a buggy after the first one, whom he discovered sitting beside a little brook, taking off his boots. "What under the sun are you doing?" inquired the newcomer in surprise. "Just getting ready to jump," replied the disgusted walker; "who knows but the plaguey thing may be a quarter of a mile wide; one never knows how far anything is, in this country!"

Poor Ray! Few can tell a story better than she, and many a hearty laugh did her stories give us; but human nature could not resist the inclination to tease. Imagine one's feelings at the opening, "That suggests to me," of a particularly good anecdote, to see, here and there, one or two upraised fingers, showing how many times already it had been told. But if she was teased on that occasion, another's turn came, when a flock of seagulls in the distance, to which attention was called, dissolved itself into a group of placid-looking cattle. Somehow, I feel a disinclination to speak further of that mistake. At length, a sudden turn on the brow of the hills, and just when we were not looking for it, the Pass lay before us. The mountains came close to old Ocean's borders, and the soft waves kissed the edge of green. The wharf ran out, as if man tried strength with the power of the sea, and very pigmy looked his work. But one building, store, telegraph office and dwelling, in one,—a barn and store-house, constituted the village. How happy the master of the house must be, that his wife could not run into the neighbor's; or the mistress, that her husband could not go out to the store evenings! Very cosy and quiet looked the little hamlet, and we talked to the bright-eyed baby on the porch, to our heart's content. She, strangely enough, knew baby-talk, and laughed and cooed like New England babies, as if "little one," were as familiar to her Spanish ears, as the more musical "muchachita." Up among the mountains, we heard the sharp click, click, click of the telegraph. Aunt Charity, indulged Ray with a cake of Baker's chocolate, (bringing sweet memories of home,) which she shared, and we started on. The scenery grew suddenly different, and much wilder. Hitherto, we had only seen the mountains melting into the foot-hills on our right, while the beating of the surf was heard on our left; but here we turned our backs to the sea, enticed by a new friend, and left it sobbing on the sands. The road turned and twisted hither and thither, seeking to pass the huge boulders, which the mountain streams had torn from their beds, but at last it became discouraged at the vain attempt, and went straight on over large rocks and little ones, only turning aside when the stern, bare face of the mountain frowned upon it. There was only room in the Pass for the road and the stream, and they disputed the right of way, sometimes. In a cleft of the rock, the only place where teams could pass, we left Mr. B. to guard Jenny and Fanny, while we climbed the steep mountain sides for ferns and flowers, or hammered manfully among the rocks for fossils. Goldenbacks, in all stages of growth, smiled upon us; maiden's hair waved light tresses; and other ferns in abundance rewarded our search, but a cry of delight proclaimed something new. Hidden in a cleft of the gray rock, a patch of silver-backs, (the first which our earnest search had ever found,) repaid for many a tumble. Covered with the brown fruit, or covered with only a snowy frosting; thick and white, or thin and silvery; we greedily gathered them. And I'm afraid we were doubly rejoiced to discover ourselves the only finders of the dainty treasure. Tired, but triumphant, we at length took our seats for further journeying. At a sudden turn of the road, a loud call startled us, and we discovered an ox-team; fortunately, we saw just ahead a chance to pass, but were not re-assured on learning that this was doubtless the fore-runner of a train of sixteen or more teams carrying grain or wool, from the Santa Ynez valley, to be shipped. There was added the new excitement of a constant lookout, lest we be caught where passing would be difficult; but fortunately, we had no trouble. I wish you might see the picture as it looked to us.

Before us and behind, and standing stately on each side, were the mountains, eternal sentinels, clothed in robes of vivid green or tender grey. Above us, arched the sky, "deeply, darkly, beautifully blue;" blue as the fairest June sky, which ever looked upon the world.

Below us rippled the arroyo, glancing and gleaming; and the golden sunlight, flecked the green carpet of the earth. A blue-jay screamed saucily in the tree above, or a black-bird whistled clear and shrill. The ox-bell tinkled musically as the great patient animals toiled past, with their loads drawn by great bands of leather or rope, bound round their horns. The mountains turned ever varying faces to our loving gaze, and it was with a start of wonder, at last, that we realized we were beyond the mountains. Only by looking back could we see their giant forms, and grass and live-oaks took the place of chapparel. We were in the Santa Ynez valley, and the road lay straight before us to San Francisco; but we thought only of lunch, and a shady place was soon found.

☞ The Woman's Journal claims that women are equal in endurance to men, but until a woman can work hard all day watching a game of base ball, and then sit up and play billiards till two o'clock in the morning, there doesn't seem to be much need of arguing the point.

☞ At a little gathering the other evening, a young man asked a lady whether, if his small brother was a lad, he was not a ladder, and she kindly said she thought he must be, she could see through him so easily. It is pleasant to be a young man.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

ACCIDENT. Quite a serious accident occurred on Tuesday afternoon last at the Reform Club Headquarters. As Mr. William Dickey, a carpenter employed in the erection of the building, and a coppersmith from Boston, (whose name we have been unable to obtain,) were at work on a staging, putting up gutters, a portion of the staging accidentally gave way and precipitated them to the ground, breaking Mr. Dickey's ankle in two places, and breaking the jaw, knocking out the teeth and badly injuring the cheek of the other. Mr. H. H. Faxon narrowly escaped the same fate, as providentially he had just stepped from that portion of the staging which fell, and was but a few feet from them when the accident took place.

Mr. Dickey was carried to his house in Braintree, and at last accounts was as comfortable as could be expected.—The wounds of the other man were dressed by Dr. Small.

DISTRICT COURT. Since our last issue the following cases have been passed upon by Judge Bumpus:—

Thomas P. Hayes was arrested by Sheriff French, for an assault on Ellen Galvin, and discharged.

Wm. Savage again appeared before his Honor. This time he was charged with an assault on J. Brosnan, but as the assault consisted merely of words he was also discharged.

George Steward of the Pine Point House was again fined $50 and cost. It was this time for exposing intoxicating liquors for sale, which Constables Garey and Holbrook wish to have known will not be allowed in the good old town of Weymouth this centennial year. Steward appealed and furnished Alexander Feltis and Edson Beckwith as sureties for his appearance at the Superior court, in the sum of $500.

Thomas Fraher, of Weymouth, on complaint of Constable Garey for sale of liquor to Thomas E. Burrill. Plead not guilty. Case continued to Tuesday next.

PRIVATE SALES. Howard Gannett sold to Annie I. Albee 11,250 feet of land on the northeast side of Winthrop avenue, for $2,547.44.

John D. Wells sold to Dora A. French and Josephine M. Wright 13,100 feet of land with school house thereon, on Greenleaf street, for $4150.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT. William Callihan, a lad about sixteen years old, son of Mr. John Callihan of West Quincy, met with a serious accident on Thursday last, at the stone works of Messrs. Hardwick & Co., where he was employed. He went into the engine house and while in there his fingers were accidentally caught in a large cog wheel which kept drawing his hand into the machinery and before the engine could be stopped it had almost taken his right arm off between the elbow and wrist.—The young fellow never cried nor said anything. He was taken to Dr. Gordon, who took the arm off and bandaged the limb as well as possible. At last accounts he was very comfortable, and doing as well as could be expected.

☞ The street lamps gave an unusual bright light on Thursday evening, having been lighted with gas for the first time for over two years.

☞ Rev. Samuel Kelley, leaves here for Philadelphia on Monday next, to attend a Convention of the Sons of Temperance, and will also visit the great Exposition.

John H. Veazie and John W. Hersey on Sunday morning.

STEAM WINS. The Jarrett and Palmer fast train arrived in San Francisco Sunday, June 4th, at 9.46 A. M. The whole distance is 3317 miles, and the time made was seven and a half hours ahead of the first schedule time proposed.

The following summary of the trip will be of interest:—New York to Pittsburg, over the Pennsylvania Railroad, with one engine and no stop, the train ran 444 miles in ten hours; fastest time, sixty-two miles in sixty minutes. Philadelphia Correspondence.

Your town has been so well represented at the big show the past week, that it may be almost useless to say one word. All the news may have been carried to your good readers in advance. Still I should like to say a few complimentary words duly merited by the Knight Templars; who, to a man, looked all that their most ardent admirers could wish. We hope they may come again, stay longer, and bring others with them.

Quincy, to-day, at the centennial, is the best known town, among strangers, of any in the Commonwealth; which may be a pride to your own people, as well as to the State she so fairly represents a part of.

This visit of your towns-people will, in more ways than one, influence the coming of others. For the perfect success must be acknowledged by those who have seen for themselves. Philadelphia represents a kindly people, an average of well-disposed citizens and absence of any kind, frauds or deceptions, will be found the rare exception, not the rule by any means. No candid person who has been among us can say to the contrary, I think.

At the very entrance to the grounds, 4246 Elm Avenue, is the Washington Hotel, at which meals are served to please even the Yankee,—who knows what good living is,—at Boston prices. And this is only one of many that could be pointed out. I mention it, that all may feel assured that there is plenty to feed on for all who may come, and still not drain the pocket. And as to lodgings they are to be found in all parts of this large city, which may readily be found by consulting the Public Ledger.

All lovers of music, must not fail to visit the Forest Mansion, Broad Street, a fine order of entertainment under the direction of the renowned Theodore Thomas. I will from time to time point out our best entertainments, then those who come may know in advance what to seek for.

CENTENNIAL LETTER, NO. 3.

In our last we gave the readers of the Patriot, a brief sketch of the Centennial grounds, buildings, &c., and stepped for a few moments into the small New England log house.

Now we will visit the Machinery Hall—the most attractive place to many on the grounds. In the centre of the building is the great Corliss engine, said to be the largest in the world, and capable of exerting a force equal to 2,500-horse power. The building of this engine fell to the lot of George H. Corliss, of Rhode Island,—the smallest State in the Union The work of this monster was commenced on the 14th of June last year, and completed a few days before the opening of the Exhibition. The price paid was $70,000, but it is said to have cost Mr. Corliss a much larger sum. The engine weighs 700 tons.

New England may well be proud that one of her group of States produced the man, whose mind conceived, invented and put into place and execution this masterpiece of mechanical skill. With this great power, the entire machinery of the Hall is worked; and so beautifully regulated is this volume of strength, that the hammer of forty tons deals its blow with no more accuracy or certainty, than the delicate die is made to puncture the eye of the cambric needle. How the soul is lifted up to the Higher as it sees and understands the capacity of the man which the Highest has created.

The visitor will here see the machinery of all nations in actual operation; the sample products of which can be purchased if desired. Among the articles manufactured are the Persian and Turkish mats; Brussels and woolen carpets; watches, cloths, pins, needles, rivets, hinges, confectionery, type, paper, envelopes, silk badges, barrels, &c., &c.

There is enough in this hall to busy one for many long days, if he takes delight in the manufacture of goods.—Some of the prettiest carpets we ever saw were being made. The fastest and handsomest presses manufactured are here in operation. Splendid fire engines, hook and ladder carriages, and locomotives are on exhibition. The variety and extent of the goods manufactured, it is impossible to numerate in one short letter. Let all who can, go and see for themselves.

The following stated displays will be held during the month, on the grounds, near the Agricultural Hall, as follows:—

Strawberries, June 7 to 15.

Early Grass butter and cheese, June 13 to 17.

Early Summer vegetables, June 20 to 24.

Honey, June 20 to 24.

More anon. P.

TEMPERANCE.

On Friday evening last, this town was the scene of a grand temperance demonstration, the occasion being the visit of James W. O'Brien, Esq., of New York, a well-known temperance advocate, and Secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America.

Societies from adjoining towns were invited to take part in the parade which was accepted and they turned out well.

The services of the Belknap Brass Band of West Quincy were secured, and about seven o'clock they started, having under escort the St. Mary's temperance society, and the West Quincy Cadets.—They marched to St. John's Church on School street, where they found the St. John's Club. The societies then marched down Hancock street, forming a line in front of the Town Hall, where they were reviewed by Messrs. James W. O'Brien, George Cahill, John H. Dee, and Thomas Driscoll. On the arrival of the Dorchester Cadets the procession moved in the following order:—

Belknap Brass Band.
Dorchester Temperance Cadets.
Quincy Temperance Society.
Quincy Cadets.
Barouche containing Messrs. O'Brien, Cahill, Dee, and Driscoll.
West Quincy Cadets.
West Quincy Temperance Society.

The procession passed through the following streets:—Washington, Elm, Quincy Avenue, Water, Franklin and School streets, to St. John's Church.

The St. Gregory's temperance society, which did not arrive until the procession had started, was delayed on account of an accident that happened to the team they were in; but they arrived in time to meet the procession on the corner of Elm street and Quincy Avenue, where they formed in and marched over the remainder of the route.

The church was soon filled to its utmost capacity, many were obliged to go away not being able to obtain standing room.

The Pastor, F. A. Friguglietti, then made a short address, after which he introduced James W. O'Brien, Esq., who spoke for about an hour and a half in favor of the cause of temperance, and whose address was listened to with marked attention. It was considered by good judges as one of the best lectures ever given in Quincy.

After Mr. O'Brien's address, the Rev. Mr. Kenaly made a few remarks, inviting all present to take the pledge, and about 420 followed his advice; the pledge being administered by the Pastor.

The Band then played some of their selections, after which some excellent singing by the choir was listened to by the audience. After the exercises in the church were over, the different organizations were invited to a collation furnished in the hall over Mr. Geo. Cahill's store.

This is the first time Mr. O'Brien has visited Quincy, in aid of the temperance cause, but we hope it will not be his last, for many a home has been made happy, which heretofore has been one of misery.

REPORTER.

ESCAPE OF FENIAN PRISONERS. Telegraphic advices from California, give late intelligence from Australia, from which it appears that a New Bedford whaler, on or about the 27th of April last, rescued a gang of Fenian prisoners, ten in number, and is now probably near the American coast.

For the Patriot.

Wollaston.

The ladies of the Methodist society held the last "Sociable" for the season on Wednesday evening, and, as usual, it was a very enjoyable occasion. A musical entertainment of exceptional excellence was given by the "Orphean Glee Club" of Neponset,—a choir of eight male voices. Conspicuously fine among the musical numbers were the duet from "Ruth," "My Spirit Faints," rendered by Mrs. H. S. Braden and Mr. J. N. Hayward, and the quartette "Marabel" from the German, "Sangerfest," sung by Messrs. Hayward, Harding, Horne and Richardson.

A unique and amusing feature of the entertainment was the introduction by Herr Van Amburg Preston, of his "Menagerie" of wild animals from the jungles of Neponset, who were received with immense enthusiasm. A very fine reading by Miss Edith Bicknell, and a "Good night" by the regular church choir closed the entertainment.

"Dare to do Right."

One of the most imposing rallies of Temperance Reform Clubs ever had in this vicinity occurred at Braintree on Tuesday last. Invitations were extended to all the clubs in the neighborhood by the Braintree Club, and special trains were run by the Old Colony road from South Abington, Cohasset and North Easton to accommodate clubs that wished to take part. The result was one of the largest gatherings known in that town. The order of the day included a procession, and mass meetings in the Town Hall and Methodist church. The procession began to form at half-past five near the station at Braintree, but it was six o'clock before all the clubs had arrived and were in line to march. At that time they took up their route in the following order:

Platoon of Police under Chief Horace Faxon.
Chief Marshal, J. H. Mellus, So. Braintree.
Braintree Brass Band.
Carriages containing Dr. Reynolds and others.
Carriages containing Stoughton Choir.
East Stoughton Reform Club.
Braintree Band of Hope.
Braintree Reform Club, J. E. Mellen, Marshal.
Rockland Band.
Rockland Club, J. P. Littlefield, Marshal.
Hingham Band
Hingham Club, C. T. Barrett, Marshal.
Randolph Band
Randolph Club Wm. Battels, Marshal.
Stoughton Club, George H. Goward, Marshal.
East Braintree Drum Corps.
East Braintree Club, Chas. Loud, Marshal.
South Weymouth Club, Wm. Read, Marshal.
Quincy Club, S. T. Allen, President.

The most noticeable of the many decorations along the line of march was the one at the residence of James Hill, Esq. An archway was erected with the words, "Dare to Do Right" in the foreground; under the arch were three little girls, one holding in her hand a glass of sparkling water, the others waving their flags. Displayed on the trees and fences were red ribbons in abundance.

The procession paraded the principal streets of South Braintree, and arrived at the Town Hall, where, after a collation had been served, the regular exercises of the evening were taken up. The meeting was called to order by the President of the evening, Samuel A. Dyer, Esq., and the exercises commenced by singing by the audience of "Coronation." Dr. Reynolds then read the 113th Psalm. Prayer was then offered by Rev. Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Dyer then made an address of welcome, and introduced Dr. Henry A. Reynolds, who spoke for nearly half an hour. The Stoughton Choir, then favored the audience with a pleasing selection, "Rouse Ye Freemen," accompanied by Hill's Orchestra, six pieces.

During the speaking, a display of fireworks, and music by the Hingham Band, furnished ample entertainment for the multitudes who could not obtain admission to either the hall or the Methodist Church. The Randolph Band then played the "Mocking Bird Polka," which won for them a hearty encore.—Further remarks were made by J. F. Lovell of Rockland, Calvin Howland of Stoughton, one of the most earnest temperance lecturers in the country, and Henry H. Faxon, Esq., of this town; also, singing by a select quartette. The meeting in the church, which was presided over by Deacon J. Ward Childs, was well attended, addresses being made by S. T. Allen of this town, Messrs. Howland of Stoughton, Bassett and Perkins of Hingham, Furnald of Braintree, Osborne of Hingham, Reed of So. Weymouth, Dr. Reynolds, Rev. Mr. Waldron of Boston, and others, interspersed with singing by Miss Howe of So. Boston, and excellent music by the Hingham Band.

The meetings did not break up until a late hour, and the enthusiasm displayed shows that Braintree "dares to do right."

Chesterfield, N. H., March 26, 1867.
Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Son:—

Gentlemen:—I feel in duty called upon voluntarily to give my testimony in favor of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I was taken sick last October with a lung complaint, accompanied with a very serious cough; and after having been treated a number of weeks by the best physicians, they gave me over as an incurable case of consumption, and for about six weeks my friends expected that I might die any day, having entirely despaired of my recovery. At this time I read the advertisements and certificates of the Wild Cherry Balsam, and was induced to try it myself. I have taken five bottles, and from the commencement I have been gradually recovering. My cough has now entirely ceased. I have regained my flesh and strength, and am feeling quite well. I attribute the cure to Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, as I have taken no other medicine since I commenced taking that. Very respectfully yours, Mrs. Mila S. Smith. Messrs. Fowle & Son:—

Gentlemen:—Mrs. Smith gives me the foregoing certificate of the efficacy of your medicine in her case. She is an acquaintance of mine, and took the Balsam on the strength of my certificate, which she saw in the papers. Her story is literally true. Yours truly,
W. H. Jones.

Base Ball.

An interesting game of base ball took place on Friday, 2d inst., in Quincy, between a nine selected from the Adams' Academy and a nine from Harvard.

The well-known reputation of the players attracted as might have been expected a large number of spectators whose comments, both discriminating and suggestive, indicated the deep interest evidently felt in the game.

Reporters who attended were given easy and commodious seats on the rails of a neighboring fence, or on the green turf, and with pencil and note-book were busily employed.

It is idle to attempt in the limited space at our disposal, to recite all the details of a game, which owing to the stubborn resolve of each side to conquer was unusually protracted, and which abounded in many instances of brilliant play. It is well-known by those who have attended the games of the professionals, that with them the score rarely rises to more than a few tallies, but in the present instance such was the extraordinary skill and power displayed at the bat by both nines, that the score rapidly mounted to the old time proportions.

When we see a bat shivered to pieces by the violence with which it was wielded by North, and observe the master "licks" of Gardiner, when he was so fortunate as to hit the ball, we can easily understand how it was that "three base hits" and "home-runs" became quite ordinary occurrences. The fielding too of both nines, deserves particular mention both for its accuracy, and for the somewhat novel features occasionally exhibited; thus a ball coming swiftly towards a player, he was observed to suddenly "right about face" and instead of receiving it in the customary way, to suffer it to bounce harmlessly up against the back of his head, after which of course, it was easily secured. But though the contest was long, it being a clear case of "Greek meeting Greek," where "groom fought like noble, squire like knight," the prize of victory finally rested with the home nine by a score of 28 to 20.

In conclusion it is pleasant to record that the best of good humor and kindly feeling prevailed throughout the game, so that nothing occurred to mitigate in the smallest degree the general amenities of the occasion.

Saturday, May 27th, the Actives defeated the Lightfoots of Randolph, by a score of 9 to 0.

A match game of base ball was played at Wollaston, Sat. May 27th, between the Atlantics and Washington School nines, in which the latter were victorious by a score of 7 to 4.

Saturday, June 2d, the Actives defeaten Whiton Bros.' nine of Boston, at Quincy Point, by the score below. The principle feature of the game was the heavy batting of the Actives. Whiton Bros.' nine left the ground before the Actives had finished their ninth innings.

The old Washington nine of Quincy Point, defeated a Picked Nine, composed of shoemakers from Messrs. Graham's and Whicher's shops, by a score of 19 to 3, in five innings, May 30th.

There will be a game played to-day, at the Point Holes, between the shoemakers of Graham's and Whicher's factories, at 2 o'clock prompt.

Personal. While in Philadelphia recently, we called on our friend and former townsman, Albert A. Merritt, now of the firm, Davis, Warner & Merritt of that city. We found him very busy on the wharf taking charge of the unloading of a cargo of pine apples. The firm imports fruit direct from West Indies and South America; and is doing an immense business. This month one of the busiest of the season, they are shipping weekly from 150,000 to 200,000 pine apples, besides one or two shiploads of bananas. In their warehouse are always to be found oranges, lemons, cocoanuts, almonds, walnuts, filberts, Brazil nuts, dates, figs, etc., in great profusion and of the finest qualities.

They own several fast sailing vessels, and among the number is the Addie R. Warner, built by the Messrs. Merritt Bros., of Duxbury; gentlemen well known in Quincy, having formerly resided here. This vessel is said to be one of the fastest afloat. The following paragraph we clip from a Philadelphia paper:—

"At three P. M., on the 6th the schooner "Addie R. Warner," of Philadelphia, Captain Lewis, passed the Breakwater, and arrived off Port Antonio, Jamaica, at midnight on the 12th, making the trip in six days and nine hours, which is the fastest time on record. The passage between Jamaica and New York is made by steamships in seven days."

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly,
L. McQuown.

"State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. Riley Hance."

"Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. Leon McQuown, Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"Jefferson, Mo., Nov. 19, 1873.

"Messrs. Rose & Co.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'Carthy, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

Hingham. There is trouble in Hingham. It appears that for several years the town treasurer has been in the habit of loaning money from the surplus funds in the treasury, with the consent of the selectmen, and has during his term of office, paid in to the treasury the sum of $1,444.87 as interest on money loaned. These loans were placed in what were considered sure hands, but in these times it is difficult to say who is sure. During the past year, the treasurer loaned to the Hingham Jute and Bagging Company, the sum of $5000 of the town funds.

The Company became bankrupt, and made a dividend of forty-five per cent on the dollar. The treasurer charged the loss to the town, which report was not accepted and now the point is, to decide who shall suffer the loss. There were no endorsers on the note, which the selectmen say was contrary to their instructions, as there should have been two. In fact, the whole affair shows a loose way of doing business, and should be a warning to other town officials.

The Evil Fruits of Weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopeia or out of it. A wineglassful of the Bitters should be taken before each meal. J3.4w

Poetry.

From Shore to Shore.

O give me back the happy days
That faded from me long ago;
The scenes on which t'were bliss to gaze,
The friends whose smiles had made them so.

The sunny hopes undimmed with fears,
The tender trust, the vows so true,
The love that all the past endears,
The perfect peace my bosom knew.

O give me back youth's glory fled,
It's fragrance and its melody.
And all the joys now cold and dead,
That once made life so sweet to me.

But sighing through the Realms of Space
Time passed upon his silent flight,
And left on every human face
An impress that foretold his might.

Alas, in age we backward gaze
Upon the Realms of Nevermore,
Still seen through memory's golden haze
While sailing on from shore to shore.

Agricultural, &c.

The Weeds.

Somebody has said that we are a weedy nation. It may have been some nice Flemish or Dutch cultivator who keeps his lands clean at home, and wonders why we cannot do as well here. If every weed were a clover plant or wheat they say it would amount to sixty millions of dollars a year, and this is probably altogether too low a figure. Still we think there is an improvement in this respect within a few years. Our lands are a little cleaner, no doubt than they used to be years ago, but with such weather as we have had this spring, it requires the hoe to be kept in very constant motion. The cultivator or the horse hoe ought to be kept busy. It is an amazing help at such a time as this. The more we can do with horse power or machinery, the greater saving of hand labor.

The true way to treat weeds is never to give them an opportunity to get a start. Once let them get to going and it becomes harder and harder to stop them. If taken when very small it is an easy matter to kill them, but if they get ahead it is very discouraging to try to catch up. The frequent rains we have had have been very favorable to vegetable growth and the weeds always come in for their share if you give them a chance.

To Destroy Squash Bugs.

The time for the annual visit of these garden pests approaches, and we find various remedies offered. The following seems certainly a very humane method of getting rid of them, worthy the leader of an association for prevention of cruelty to animals. To give opium or morphine, and allow them to pass to that bourne whence no traveller returns in the delightful and dreamy ecstacy thus produced, is worthy of the most advanced civilization of the age. If, however, this mode should not prove satisfactory, on account of any disrelish the bug might have for the drug, we would suggest the use of chloroform. A small boy, with sponge in hand, might be seated by the hill, and when the little insect came round for the morning repast, it would require only a dexterous turn of the wrist to surround him with an atmosphere that would at once allay all appetite for squash and such like earthly shrubs. Let this be repeated to all new comers.

This insect brings to grief many a fine bed of squash plants. The following remedy will prove effectual in destroying them. Take a quantity of poppy leaves, stalks, bulbs, etc., or any part of poppy, and steep in water either cold or hot, and if poppies are not to be had, take a small quantity of opium and dissolve it in water. This liquid applied with an exceeding fine sprinkle to the vines once or perhaps twice, will cause the bugs to leave the plants never to return. The same liquid applied with a squirt-gun to apple-trees, effectually prevents the ravage of the apple-tree. An ounce of opium would probably be sufficient for a large orchard.

Anecdotes.

"Did you ever see that picture, grandma?" asked a young lady, as they took a view of the family portrait gallery.

"See it! Why it's a portrait of myself when I was seventeen."

"I thought you had forgotten it, or you wouldn't always be lecturing us about modesty and dress."

Grandma looked over her spectacles and declared that girls nowadays were very impertinent to their elders.

"What are you bellowing about?" cried an irate mother at the foot of the stairs one evening, after her two boys had been put to bed.

"Please, mother," said bellowing Bill, "Jim wants half the bed."

"Well," said she, "let him have it, and you take the other half."

"Yes, mother," said Bill, "but he wants to have his half out of the middle, and make me sleep on both sides of him."

"Is Pat Flannigan on board this ship?" roared Nelson, during a lull in the firing at the battle of the Nile.

"I'm here, my Lord," said Erin's son, showing himself on deck.

"Then," said the gallant Nelson, looking satisfied, "let the battle proceed." That story is Pat's.

"Why is it, my dear sir," said Waffles's landlady to him the other day, "that you newspaper men never get rich?"

"I do not know," was his reply, "except it is that dollars and sense do not always travel together."

"Sah, did you take me for a sardine?" said a sable orator at an exciting political meeting.

"No," was the reply, "I's always 'garded you as a fresh-water minnow, dat wasn't wuf picklin'."

TOWN BY-LAWS.

The following By-Laws were passed by the town of Quincy, on the 20th of March last, the meeting being an adjournment of the annual March Meeting; and are now published according to Law, having been approved by the Superior Court, May 9th, 1876.

I. The financial year shall begin with the first day of February in each year, and end with the last day of January following.

II. There shall be chosen, at the annual meeting, three Auditors of Accounts, who shall audit the accounts of the Treasurer and Collector; and for this purpose they may have access to and examine all accounts kept by the Selectmen, School Committee, Surveyors of Highways, Engineers of the Fire Department, and all other town officers. They shall report in writing at least seven days before the annual March town meeting.

III. Pause, Stranger!

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. KING GEORGE sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "OLD CRADLE," in FANEUIL HALL, by her mother, living in the "OLD CORNER" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to UNION, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. The Sons of Liberty now flock in crowds to the same "OLD CORNER" HOUSE, where is found in endless variety

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence, and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1876.

The Hotel Business.

There are certain things that describe the situation just as accurately as if the whole story were told, item by item. In an excellent weekly paper we find a paragraph, stating that one of the Boston hotels has recently dropped its charges in the dining-room from ten to twenty-five per cent. That is a straw of much significance. We also find a statement in a New York journal that shows what have been the fortunes of the hotels of that city. Hotel-keepers have been giving up their houses by the dozen, and these include the most famous landlords and the very best hotels. Within four or five years, it is stated, thirty-five hotels have either failed or changed hands, and four are permanently closed. Among them are the best known establishments in New York, such as the Metropolitan, the Grand Union, the St. Denis, the Union Place, the St. Germain, and the New York Hotel.

The cause is ascribed to the high price of leases, hotel-keepers being ready and willing to recede in their charges to the public, but unable to do so in consequence of their high rents. Nor is the exhibit at the great summer watering-places, like Saratoga and Long Branch, any more favorable. The same thing is furthermore true of the public houses in all the large cities of the country. The business is shrinking under the pressure of enormous rents. Landlords, too, have to charge against one guest the extravagance and waste of another, or at least a share of it; an unjust proceeding, for which ought to be substituted the European rule that each guest shall pay only for what he consumes. This last consideration has got to be allowed wider play in the hotel of the future, if landlords expect to make their business of catering for the wants of the public a success. We must all come down to habits of greater simplicity, and dare to live as we see fit, rather than come under the tyranny of what we suppose to be the fashion.

REFINED HOMES. Refined homes are the end of civilization. All the work of the world—the railroading, navigating, digging, manufacturing, inventing, teaching, writing and fighting are done, first of all, to secure each family in the possession of its own hearth; and secondly, to surround as many hearths as possible with grace, and culture, and beauty.—The work of all races for five thousand years is represented in the difference between a wigwam and a lady's parlor. It has no better result to show.

☞ The Selectmen of Stoughton have decided to issue licenses, and have fixed the price at $200 each. The money thus received is to be spent in enforcing the regulations in regard to the sale. An officer is to be appointed at each village, and the violation, it is asserted, will result in the withdrawal of the license.

AN EXCEPTIONAL COUPLE. There is a man living in Wilson, N. C., 54 years of age, who never owed a cent to a living soul in his life, and as the records will show, was the first man for the past thirty years to pay his taxes to the sheriff. Though a blacksmith and plough-maker by trade, he cuts and makes his own clothing, and when engaged at this work if there is a call at the shop his wife goes to the anvil and will shoe a horse, brace a plough, upset an axe, or perform any other job in the line with as much skill as her husband.

☞ With the price of herrings at four for a penny, there are some people in Wareham who are just mean enough to steal them of their neighbors.

☞ A New Bedford lady, after living seventeen years with her husband, and during that time has moved thirty-two times, and raised up a family of ten children, has at last discovered that she wanted a divorce, and procured it.

☞ A novel locomotive has been made in California to run on the long flumes that are used to float lumber down from the mountains. The wheels fit on the edge of the sides of the flume, and at the ends of the car are paddle-wheels dipping into the water, and which are turned by the swift current. By a simple arrangement this power is made to propel the locomotive up the flume, and it runs back itself.

☞ Five miles of the first railway in China have been completed.

Summary of News.

☞ The apple and pear crop throughout Vermont promises to be very large this year.

☞ Six sons of the late Judge Stewart, a prominent citizen of Logansport, Ind., acted as pall bearers at their father's funeral last week.

☞ Under the direction of the Horticultural Society, New York is to have a grand flower show in June at the Hippodrome.

☞ The snow still lingers on the mountain tops in Vermont. It is a backward spring.

☞ Crowded quarters at Cincinnati will compel the Massachusetts delegation to sleep four or five in a room.

☞ Already there are counterfeits of silver coins in circulation.

☞ Farm laborers in Vermont are engaging themselves at $15 per month and board, where last year $25 was paid.

☞ The exports from New York for a year have been $79,000,000, which is a gain of nearly three millions over the corresponding period of 1875.

☞ This is the season when advertisements of refrigerators and ice-chests spread out in a newspaper like a mortgage on a small corner lot.

☞ The California professors are eccentric. A scientific man in San Francisco recently sent a petrified codfish to his niece as a wedding present.

☞ The daily expenses of the Centennial Exhibition Managers are about ten thousand dollars each day. The average number of visitors to make it pay daily expenses, leaving out of consideration any debt, must be twenty thousand.

☞ Eight hundred girls attend Baptist colleges in Georgia.

☞ About two weeks ago, Mr. Joseph Snavely, of Orrville, Pa., commenced building a house, and in forty-six hours work the house was finished, painted, papered, etc. The size of the house was twenty-eight feet square, containing four rooms on the first floor and four rooms on the second.

☞ It is just as well to know the facts and figures about ourselves. A French statistician says that an ordinary man, fifty years old, has slept 6,000 days, worked 6,500 days, walked 800 days, played 4,000 days, eaten 1,500, and been sick 500 days. He has eaten 17,000 pounds of bread, 16,000 of meat, 4,600 of vegetables, eggs, and fish, and drank 7,000 gallons of liquid.

☞ Independence day is to be celebrated in grand style in New Bedford. Four bands of music, a civic and military procession, oration, &c., are to be the order of the day, with a magnificent display of fire-works in the evening.

☞ The largest swamp in the United States is the Okefenoke, lying in the southeastern part of Georgia, but partly in North Florida. It is 30 miles long, 17 wide and 142 in circumference.

☞ It is found at the sub-treasury that counterfeit fractional currency, averages two pieces in every twenty-five dollars.

☞ The Marshfield Agricultural Society is making arrangements for a grand fair and celebration on July 4th and 5th. Hon. J. D. Long, of Hingham, will deliver an oration on the first day, followed by a poem by E. P. Dyer, Jr. Mrs. Mary Livermore will deliver an address on the second day.

☞ A singular affair has just come to light:—It appears that a sea-captain, residing in East Brooklyn, N. Y., has kept the body of a favorite child in his house for seven years. The child died at the age of two years, in South America, and the captain had its remains placed in a metallic coffin. When he came to Brooklyn he boxed it up and brought it with him, and has it in the house ever since. Being about to leave Brooklyn, and not wishing to take the remains with him, he confided it to his physician. The latter informed the Board of Health, and a burial permit will probably be granted.

☞ "Who in the mischief has ordered such boots as that?" casually asked a young man of his shoemaker, pointing to a colossal pair of No. 9 mud-smashers, with inch soles and toes rounded off like the bow of a Brooklyn ferryboat.

"Them? Oh, them's for Mr.——; he said as he expected to do some heavy kickin' in a day or two, he had 'em made a' purpose."

The young man turned pale as he recognized the name of his Dulincea's father, who peremtorily ordered him off the front steps a few nights before.

Who Pay the Postage.

Taking an average of the United States with the highest postal receipts, we find that the citizens pay an annual per capita of $2 01 for postage. Of these cities Boston pays the largest sum, amounting to $951,284 gross, or $3 80 per head. New York pays $3 16 and Chicago $3 03. Brooklyn's per capita is only forty-two cents. Making an average of the population and the postal receipts of Brooklyn and New York, and it appears that the per capita to $2 34 for the entire population. This is less than that of San Francisco, $2 84; Indianapolis, $2 81; and Pittsburgh, $2 52, but it is greater than the receipts at Albany, $1 91; Rochester, $1 90; Providence, $1 79; and Cincinnati, $1 85. Baltimore pays $1 28 per capita; Washington, $1 56; Louisville, $1 50; Philadelphia, $1 43; St. Louis, $1 43; Kansas City, $1 26, and New Orleans, $1 06, being the lowest average. The Detroit office receives $2 34 per capita; Cleveland, $2, and Milwaukee, $1 91.

The Necessity of Dress.

"Maria," said a lady to her colored maid, "that is the third silk dress you have worn since you came to my house; pray, how many do you own?" "Only seven, miss; but I'se savin' my wages to buy another." "Seven! Of what use are seven silk dresses to you? Why I don't own as many as that." "I 'specs not, miss," said the smiling darkey; "you doesn't need 'em as much as I does. You quality white folks everybody knows is quality; but we bettermost kind of colored pussons has to dress smart to distinguish ourselves from common folks."

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1876.

Couldn't get the Right Flop.

In the year 1843, during the Miller excitement in the usually quiet town of Durham, old Aunt Sally H——," who would "weigh nigh on to 200 pounds, got all ready to "go up," and one evening in meeting, in the midst of a warm season of exhortation, she arose and said, "O brethren and sisters, bless the Lord! I'll soon get away from this wicked world; I'm going to meet the Lord in a few days. My faith is powerful strong! O yes, powerful strong it is! So strong," continued the old lady, extending her arms and motioning them like a goose on the wing, "that it does seem as if I could fly right away now and meet the Lord in the air."

The minister, who was as great an enthusiast "on going up" as the old lady, encouraged her by exclaiming, "Try, sister, try! Perhaps you can fly, if your faith is only strong enough."

"Well, I can," she exclaimed, "I know I can, and I will!"

She was standing near a window which was raised because of the oppressive heat —for it was summer. With her handkerchief in one hand and her fan in the other, she mounted the seat, and thence to the top of the pew, and gave a leap into the air with a flying motion of her arms, expecting to ascend heavenward. But he law of gravitation was too much for both her faith and the gravity of the audience. Down she came with an enormous and no very angelic grunt, shaking the whole house with the concussion.

She arose, folded her wings, and with great meekness, sneaked back into her seat, and went to weaving back and forth, evidently disappointed. The next evening some of the young folks asked her:

"Aunt Sally, why didn't you fly last night, when you tried so hard?"

"I couldn't get the right flop on," was the meek and conclusive reply.

Memories.

We can draw the curtains of our room, stir the fire to send forth a genial blaze, and call for light to disperse the shadows of the gathering gloom, but we cannot lock the door of our hearts and bid Memory stay out in the cold. Would that we might, but she will press in, and very often prove a most unwelcome visitor. We may join in the gay jest and song, while Memory is casting dark shades of the past over the heart that would deceive others with its mirth, but "which only knoweth its own bitterness." Her voice, though very low, will be heard, and mocks our song. She paints most unpleasant pictures, and though the eye may sparkle in the glare of the festive scene, yet it may not turn from them. There is no forgetfulness this side the grave, and though remorse may have kept lonely vigil over the bitter buried past for years, yet will Memory resurrect it and bring it back to us. One of our daily petitions should be, to be kept from pride, (for it hardeneth the heart) and has the power to wreck our happiness for this life, and ruin it for the next. It will keep us from acknowledging a fault, from recalling the hasty word before it be too late. Pride must reap a bitter harvest, for Memory will neither sleep nor die.

As we stand over the grave of our buried hopes and happiness, Memory will rise to taunt us with the "might have been" and ring with a funeral knell those saddest of words, "Too late, too late.—S. E. D.

Ironing Without Heat.

I have read of machines for ironing clothes without heat. Having never seen one I cannot speak of its merits, but I have practiced in the following way. Try it, ye weary, heavy-laden, over-taxed housekeeper, and see if it does not lessen your labor very materially. Fold coarse sheets, towels, and linen table-cloths in just the shape you want them to put away; they will fold much easier if partially wrung first; then put them through the wringer as tight as possible, unfold and hang to dry where the wind does not blow very hard and they retain the folds and need little or no ironing. The table-cloths should be first dipped in old milk diluted with one-third water. This gives them a lustre and they need no starch.—Household.

☞ A sugar house and 2000 tons of sugar were burned at Greenock Scotland, on Sunday; loss $250,000.

How a Woman Buys Meat.

When a woman enters a butcher shop to select a piece of meat for dinner she has her mind made up to take mutton roast. Therefore, when the butcher rubs his hands and asks her what she will have, she promptly replies:—

"I'll take some of that mut—"

She stops there. Her eye has caught sight of a ham, and she suddenly decides to take ham.

"Is that nice ham?" she inquires.

"Best ham I ever saw, Madame. How much?"

"Well, you may give me three p——. Well I don't know either. My husband was saying he'd like some sausage.—Have you any real nice sausage?"

"Plenty, Madame. Now, then, how much sausage will you have?"

"It's pork sausage, is it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well I suppose a pound would be enough for our small family, but—but—

"Shall I weigh a pound, Madame?"

"I was just wondering if a veal pot-pie wouldn't suit him better," she answered. "You have veal, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes, Madame. Here's a splendid bit of veal—as good a piece as I ever saw."

"Yes, that does look like nice veal," she says, lifting it up.

"And you'll take it?"

"Let's see!" she muses. "Y—no, I guess not. I guess I'd better take pork chops."

"Nice chops—how much?" he asks.

"One of those slices will weigh a pound, I suppose?"

"About a pound, Madame."

"And it was a young hog?"

"Quite young, Madame."

"And you'll cut the rind off?"

"Yes, Madame."

"Well," she says, heaving a deep sigh, "I guess you may give me some beefsteak—some that's nice, and be sure to cut all the bone out!"

And she's only been half an hour coming to the point.—Detroit Free Press.

We All Have Faults.

He who boasts of being perfect is perfect in folly. I have been a good deal up and down in the world, and I never did see either a perfect horse or a perfect man, and I never shall until two Sundays come together. The old saying is "Lifeless, faultless." Of dead men we should say nothing but good, but as for the living, they are all tarred more or less with the black brush, and half an eye can see it. Every head has a soft place in it, and every heart has its black drop. Every rose has its prickles, and every day its night. Even the sun shows spots, and the skies are darkened with clouds. Nobody is so wise but he has folly enough to stock a stall at Vanity Fair. Where I could not see the fool's cap, I have, nevertheless, heard the bells jingle. As there is no sunshine without some shadow, so is all human good mixed up with more or less evil; even poor-law guardians have their little failings, and parish beadles are not wholly of heavenly nature. The best wine has its lees. All men's faults are not written on their foreheads, and it's quite as well they are not, or hats would need wide brims; yet as sure as eggs are eggs, faults of some sort nestle in every man's bosom. There's no telling when a man's sins may show themselves, for hares pop out of a ditch just when you are not looking for them. A horse that is weak in the legs may not stumble for a mile or two, but it's in him, and the rider had better hold him up well. The tabby-cat is not lapping milk just now, but leave the dairy door open, and we will see if she is not as bad a thief as the kitten.—There's fire in the flint, cool as it looks; wait till the steel gets a knock at it, and you will see. Everybody can read that riddle but it is not everybody that will remember to keep his gunpowder out of the way of the candle.—John Ploughman.

☞ When old Mrs. Maxwell, of Bethlehem, died, her family and friends gathered at her bedside in terrible anguish, weeping and moaning.

Her niece stood by her and held her hand, and, as the lamp flickered before it was finally extinguished, she said to her:—

"Is there anything that we can do to make your dying moments happier? Have you any unfulfilled wish, any cherished design, which we can carry out? Shall we do anything for you when you are gone?"

Mrs. Maxwell turned her face towards her niece, and, with a faltering voice, said:

"Mariar, don't give none of them preserved plums to John Henry; they always disagreed with his stomach."

Then her freed spirit took its eternal flight.

A Coffee Palace.

In London they have what they call a "Coffee Palace" for the working classes, an immense building, all brilliant with light in the evening. In the lecture room, you will find 300 persons listening to a miscellaneous entertainment. In another room men are smoking and talking, reading the newspapers and writing; in another playing billiards; still another, all sorts of games—draughts, cards, chess—whatever they please, for mere harmless amusement.

There are reading, conversation and music rooms for women, and on the main floor the great dining-hall. There can be got a cup of delicious, good milk and sugar for one penny, and a large dinner plate of beef or mutton off a joint, with potatoes and bread, for five cents! Music and laughter are heard in every part of the palace, and one feels that life is worth living when men and women, and girls and youths can come away from a hard day's work and meet thus for rest, refreshment and the education that such beneficial associations inevitably lead to.

JOHNSTON'S PATENT
Dry Sized Kalsomine
READY FOR USE.
MANUFACTURED AT
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK.

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale form the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Proposal.

BY FRED. C. BAKER.

They stood there alone in the moonlight,
Under the starlit sky,
And as he clasped her snow white hand,
He paused 'ere he said, good bye.

'Twas such an appropriate place,
For just such a scene as this;
With none but the moon and stars
To witness their joyous bliss.

Till now he had never spoken
Of the love that burned in his breast,
But now she should know it all
'Ere his head he'd lay down to rest.

He whispered the sacred words,
Heard only by God above;
She answered him, not with words,
But simply a look of love.

And oh, what a rush of joy,
As his prize to his bosom he clasps,
In a long and loving embrace,
The first—but not the last.

And now they unwillingly part,
From a scene of such earthly bliss;
But instead of the words, good bye,
The dismissal is, a kiss.

STRAWBERRY JELLY. Squeeze out the juice of the strawberries, and to each pint of juice add three quarters of a pound of lump sugar. Boil for twenty minutes; turn into cups which have been previously dipped in cold water, and set in the sun for a few hours.

INDIAN BREAKFAST CAKE. Two cups of sweet milk and one of sour; two cups of Indian meal; one cup of flour; one cup of molasses; one large teaspoonful of soda and a little salt. Bake in a quick oven.

STRAWBERRY CAKE. One quart of flour; three tablespoonfuls of butter; one large cupful of sour cream or very rich sour milk. One egg; one tablespoonful of white sugar; one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water, and one saltspoonful of salt. Chop up the shortening in the flour as for pastry; add the eggs and soda to the milk; put all together, handling as little as may be. Roll lightly and thickly into two sheets; lay one sheet of paste upon the other; bake until done. When warm, separate these, put on butter, strawberries and powdered sugar. Strawberry shortcake may also be made with baking powder and sweet milk, but the soda must be left out.

Miscellany.

"A BIT OF CHARITY."

"Jimmie, your mistress wants you in the east parlor," said a tidy servant girl to Jimmie Benton, Miss Hilton's man-of-all-work, who sat before a roaring fire in his comfortable room over the coach-house, polishing a bit of harness.

"Yes'm," never pausing to look up from his work, which, when finished to his satisfaction, was laid aside.

"What new whim's got her now?" soliloquized Jimmie, as he laid his steel-rimmed spectacles beside his Bible, on the little table at his elbow, and prepared to walk across a stormy lawn, knee-deep with snow. "For there's something odd afloat when I'm to go to the east parlor."

For no one knew better than Jimmie Benton, who had served the Hilton family going on forty years, how oddly whimsical the last of the race was, or how many strange schemes had been set in motion in the cranky old spinster's favorite room, or as Jimmie's fellow-servants were in the habit of saying, "Miss Clara moulded the balls there, and Jimmie shot them."

The wind whistled sharply around Jimmie's ears as he crossed the lawn, and his teeth chattered with cold as he entered Miss Hilton's room.

"Why, Jimmie, it must be dreadful cold; you're shivering," exclaimed that lady, as she drew a cozy chair to the fire, which Jimmie took with a grateful look at his mistress, who, in spite of her hardness to others, had always been kind to him.

"Ah!" was Jimmie's exclamation, as he rubbed his fat palms together, "the cold never reaches you here."

Jimmie glanced admiringly around the room, whose amber-tinted walls were decorated with portraits of the dead and gone Hiltons, and whose furniture was solid black walnut, cushioned with amber velvet. Flowers, vines, and ferns filled the long windows, through which the morning sunlight was streaming in golden floods, leaving shining tracks on the rich amber ground of the carpet, sprinkled with purple pansies, whose yellow hearts seemed to absorb the quivering light.

And Miss Hilton herself was like some antique piece of furniture, so stiff and prim was she in her rich, warm robe of purple cashmere, her silvery hair lying against her cheeks in stiff curls, which hardened the expression of her thin face, which, despite its waxen-like pallor and wrinkles, bore traces of former beauty. Indeed, Jimmie could remember a day when Miss Clara's face was faultless in his eyes, and the young girl a paragon of sweetness and goodness.

But the Miss Clara of to-day was quite another person. She was the faded, sour, old spinster, only known now for her church charities and her wealth, which seemed limitless. Some knotty problem in financial matters was evidently troubling her now, for Jimmie observed a pile of papers and several account books lying on the marble table at her side.

"Jimmie," observed his mistress, with a deep sigh, "money is very scarce."

"Very, ma'am," assented Jimmie.

"Still, I think my tenants take advantage of the hard times. They cannot always be hard up for money."

Jimmie shifted uneasily in his chair, for Miss Hilton's tenants had been her only cross for many years.

"The laboring classes have been heavy sufferers this winter, ma'am," mildly suggested Jimmie.

"I am aware of that," dryly responded Miss Hilton. "But Jimmie, I am not bound to keep open house for a score or two of families."

"Certainly not. But be as easy with them as possible, Miss Clara, for they were honest and prompt in their payments when times were good and work plenty."

"Doubtless. But Jimmie, I must have more money. If they won't pay the rent, they must leave the houses."

"Patience, patience!" cried Jimmie, who knew the unpleasant duty of turning them out would devolve upon him. "They will pay up arrears presently."

"My patience is exhausted, Jimmie," sighed Miss Hilton, who really thought she had the patience of Job. "If Mrs. Nye does not bring in her rent this morning, you must warn her out to-day."

"Mrs. Nye!" Jimmie looked the amazement he felt. "Why she is a widow, and one of the poorest of your tenants."

"What of that? I have given her every chance I could afford. I offered her some fine laundry work, and she sent back word she could not possibly do it, as her child was sick. As if a sick child ought to prevent anybody earning money to pay their rent."

Jimmie thoughtfully stroked his beardless chin. His mistress was in one of her hardest moods, and he alone knew how useless was either argument or persuasion. As a last resort, Jimmie thought he would appeal to Miss Hilton's religion, which she imagined was without a flaw.

"Miss Clara—" He hesitated a moment. "Surely a good Christian like yourself would not oppress the widowed and fatherless?"

"What do you call oppression?" sharply retorted Miss Hilton. "I'm sure I oppress nobody. I ask for my rights; that is all. Jimmie, I won't hear another word in favor of such a shiftless set. Go and collect the rents, and turn out whoever cannot pay up."

Jimmie Benton left the room after some papers and instructions had been put into his hands, and went thoughtfully back to the pleasant room above the coach-house.

"If I had half of Miss Hilton's income I wouldn't turn a dog out of doors such weather as this!" muttered Jimmie, looking out at the drifts of snow that lay between him and the poor people who had been battling with sickness and poverty for months back.

But the unpleasant orders of his mistress had to be obeyed. Jimmie thoughtfully examined the rent roll, and found, to his amazement, that only six tenants had failed to pay the last month's rent.

"Sixty dollars in all would cancel the debt." Jimmie thought, with a bitter smile, as he remembered the hard, money-loving woman seated in her luxurious rooms; brooding over imaginary evils.

Jimmie went to a chest in one corner of the room, and taking therefrom a large wallet, which contained the savings of many years, counted out a roll of notes and carefully put the wallet back into its hiding place.

"I'll never miss it," he said to himself, as he buttoned up his overcoat, "for I cannot bear the thoughts of a fellow-creature being turned out of house and home."

An hour later, found Jimmie in front of the tenement houses, whose inmates hailed his cheery face with delight. For Jimmie's humanity was well-known, and their landlady's rigorous rules had been often softened by Jimmie's wise counsel and sympathetic words.

"You bring comfort in your face, James," sighed one of the delinquent tenants—a man with an ailing wife and seven children.

"Aye, and help in my purse," smiled Jimmie.

"That would be welcome, James, for it's not a dollar I have to pay this month's rent," said the man, looking sorrowfully at his wife's pale face.

Then Jimmie modestly unfolded his plan—that of loaning each debtor enough money to pay their rent, and was overwhelmed with thanks and blessings.

This scene was but a type of many that followed; and by the time Jimmie reached the widow Nye's cottage he fancied he must be a model of generosity and unselfishness.

His plump face was rosy with blushes—for Jimmie was a bashful man—when he entered Mrs. Nye's presence.

"You've come for the rent," said the widow, who sat before a cradle, rocking it gently, her sad eyes filled with a sudden rush of tears.

"No—no, bless you, no," stammered Jimmie, dropping into a chair before the stove. "Why, your fire is out," he exclaimed in sheer amazement. "How do you stand the cold?"

"We are almost perishing," the poor woman replied, looking at a bed in one corner of the room, where two children lay under scanty covering. "I have kept Willie and Nannie in bed all day, for we had no fire, and I could not borrow fuel from my neighbors, who have little enough for themselves."

"Can you get no work?" inquired Jimmie.

"None sir. Your mistress gave me some work sometime ago, but it displeased her. The next she offered me I could not take, for this child was working in spasms at the time. It's a queer world, sir. Only the other day your mistress sent five hundred dollars to some foreign charity. Ah, how much good that would have done at home!"

Jimmie looked admiringly at the little woman in the faded black calico, who sat rocking her sick child. He had known her for years as the industrious wife of a poor mechanic, who had always found it diffcult to make both ends meet. But her face was round and rosy then, for she had peace, love and a contented spirit to uphold her; and Jimmie went off in a day dream, vaguely picturing the widow mistress of the little cottage Miss Hilton had offered him, wondering idly while he chafed his cold hands if love, care and kindness would not bring the bloom back to her thin cheeks.

"You have come for the rent?" went on Mrs. Nye, inquiringly.

"No," a burning blush crimsoned Jimmie's face, "I—I have come for you!"

"For me?" exclaimed Mrs. Nye.—"How does Miss Hilton expect me to leave the child?"

"It's not Miss Hilton that wants you, it's me," stammered Jimmie, very red in the face. "I have thought of taking a wife for sometime, and I think you would suit me better than anybody I know."

"Oh!" Mrs. Nye looked a little flurried and fell to rocking the cradle vigorously, while Jimmie mopped his face with a huge silk handkerchief.

"I hope you'll not refuse me," he said in a hurried way, "for I cannot bear to give up anything I've set my heart on."

"You're a good man, Jemmie—every body knows that," said Mrs. Nye, with a grateful look in her pretty eyes. "Your offer took me by suprise, but, Jimmie, I think I will take it."

"Aye, its better than starvation," said Jimmie with a nervous laugh.

"No, no," cried Mrs. Nye, hastily, "I do not mean that, for if I did not respect a man, I would starve before I would marry him.

In spite of the cold and discomfort, Jemmie found time to tell Mrs. Nye what had started him out that bitter cold day, and modestly related the story of his "bit of charity," as he phrased it, ending by laying a bank note in the widow's hand for present expenses.

"You are a real Christian Jimmie," was Mrs. Nye's comment, as she wiped her tearful eyes, "though, I'm sure, I don't want you to marry me out of charity."

"Charity!" scornfully cried Jimmie, boldly kissing the willing lips, "as if I don't know love from charity."

It is wonderful what a glow that morning's work brought into Jimmie Benton's heart. He felt twenty years younger as he waded home through the snow, and his cheeks were as flushed as a school-boy's when he entered Miss Hilton's morning room, whose amber-hued walls seemed ten degrees brighter than they did three hours ago.

"Well, Jimmie," Miss Hilton looked up from her book languidly, "How have you succeeded?"

For answer Jimmie laid a roll of bank-notes on the table at her side.

"There's your rents, ma'am. And will you grant me a favor?"

"A hundred if you like," cried his gratified mistress. "Why, Jimmie, you are the prince of collectors. I just needed this amount to fill out my subscription to the Ceylon mission."

"Charity begins at home," dryly commented Jimmie. "Will you give me the cottage at the foot of the hill next year, mistress?"

"You? why, Jimmie, what use will it be to you—a bachelor?"

"But I'm going to marry widow Nye, ma'am."

"Saints preserve us! Is the man out of his senses?" ejaculated Miss Hilton, who believed Jimmie to be obstinately opposed to matrimony.

"I cannot let her perish, ma'am," modestly replied Jimmie, backing out of the room, "that is, if you'll let me have the house."

"Take it, and welcome," said Miss Hilton, laughing softly as Jimmie closed the door. "Well—well—there is no fool like an old fool."

But Jimmie never regretted his "bit of charity," for when plenty again blessed Miss Hilton's tenants they did not forget the husband of blooming Mrs. Benton, whose smile, Jimmie said, was like a "ray of June sunshine."

Letter from California.

NUMBER FOUR.

Santa Barbara, May 15th, 1876.

Happy Jo! Lunch had no enticement strong enough to reach her. All day the quails had called and smaller birds had saucily sat and winked at us from the roadside, and as saucily had flown away, before she could punish them.

But here was a grand field for operations, for at every side, squirrels nodded and called. While Aunt Charity, dispensed sandwiches, and lemonade with a liberal hand, the sound of Jo's gun was heard in a rapid succession of shots, and she soon brought us ten of the little creatures. By that time she declared it was too easy work, and condescended to come to lunch. These are not the tree squirrels which we see most often at home, but one of the pests of California, a kind of ground squirrel. In uncultivated places the whole ground is intersected with their burrows, until sometimes it becomes a perfect honey-comb.

But a vision of the ox-teams which we might meet returning, and a memory of the many narrow places in the Pass, at length started us on our return. Not even the pleadings of Ray to linger longer "on that occasion," had power to turn Aunt Charity, and soon the mountains took us again in their embrace. We stopped at the little store for eggs, milk, or cheese, but like all country stores, they were just out. The miles homeward were quickly passed, and the white walls of our tent looked as welcome and as homelike as two days later, did our own homes; we should not have thought this little spot among the hills could have become so dear to us.

The wind had risen, as we were coming, and by the time supper was ready, we were glad to get within the tent.—This was heavily anchored with logs and stones, and braced from within. As Ray held the bracing, and Mr. B., came running up to help, they were greeted with the salutation:

> "Hold the tent for I am coming,
> Bishop calls out, still.
> Ring the answer down the canon,
> Ray says, 'That I will!'"

Supper indoors was voted a success, for once, and the spirit-stirring stories of life on the frontier and in California in early days, by Mr. B., who has been here for many years, and the college songs of the girls were finally put an end to by Jo and Ray, who tried a bout at making faces. As a last resort for amusement, we called it successful and unique, and at length we retired for the last night in Greenwell's. The wind howled and tore, until we fully expected to see the tent go aloft, bodily, and we wondered not that windy nights were called witches' own. But the stars had covered their faces and gone to sleep, above the wind, and we in it slept as soundly as if no thought of going above had entered our minds.

The next morning the fog rolled in, thick and heavy, but with our feet in the ashes and our heads in the clouds, we roasted potatoes and toasted our squirrels, while jokes flew as thick and fast as in the clearest sunshine.

Jo declared it was her turn to wash the dishes, and to prove our unbelief in her ability to be well founded, we agreed that she should. To our intense amazement, she proved a perfect adept at the business, and when nearly through, with a sudden rush went to scouring knives.—That was a refinement of civilization hitherto unreached by us; but she said, "what was the use of an old adobe ruin, if not for that? The aborigines had left that ruin, for that especial purpose."

By eleven o'clock, the last blanket was strapped to the wagon, the last farewell walk taken round the camp, and Mr. B called "all aboard."

We succeeded in getting a half dozen eggs at a little Spanish house by the way, and large plans were laid on the ways in which those eggs were to be cooked.—One was to be reserved for the next morning's coffee; two were to be boiled, and the other three were to be converted into a delicious French omelette, for as we were getting nearer the city, we thought it only proper to do some fancy cooking. For ten miles I carried those eggs gingerly in a paper bag, and kept them from all harm, and then Ray relieved me for five miles further; but our success had made us careless, and when I held them while Ray clambered into the wagon, the bag became discouraged lest we were never going to dismiss it, and one by one the eggs did fall.

We stood, a picture of Despair, until Aunt Charity's ringing laughter recalled us, and slowly and sadly we ascended to our seat. We decided to have the eggs dropped.

Gaviota is called forty miles from home, but we decided it must be fully a hundred; our "swindle-tree" cheated us of our time, and we certainly broke no ordinance against fast driving.

> "Hills may come, and hills may go,
> But I ride on forever," was our cry, but at length we stopped for our last camp, beside a sad little stream, which had lost its mother mountain, and ran sobbing to the sea.

Very beautiful looked the camp-fire as it lighted up the open tent, which had grown so familiar to us, as it streamed out over the grass and road with cheerful light; and as it reached loving hands of welcome to the gnarled old oaks, which Aunt Charity says look like brawny wrestlers who have doubled up their fists and gaze at each other, but which, to-night, spread kindly, protecting arms over the sleepers at their feet.

The eighteen miles between us and home were very quickly passed, though red-winged blackbirds came in flocks to challenge Jo, and impudent little owls nodded and blinked, until they succeeded in drawing us just close enough to think we had them, when they ducked again, and dropped into their holes.

At noon the photographers came out to a temporary camp, and pictures of camp-life are taken for souvenirs of a very pleasant trip. A genial home in Kentucky, and another in Pennsylvania will be enlivened in many winter nights by stories of camp-life, and "The Merry Quintette." Jo's bright ways and Ray's quick speeches, Aunt Charity's beneficent face, and Kate's thoughtful care will fill many a niche in the gallery of memory, and many an hour will be made pleasant by the thoughts of Gaviota.

Juvenile.

Children rarely comprehend the idea that Providence watches all they do, and seldom appreciate the fact so often taught them, in different ways, that what seems to them impossible is possible with the Great Disposer of all events.

An illustration of this came to our knowledge the other day, which we think is good enough to go into print.

A little boy about five years of age, was sent to the grocery store at the corner, on some trifling errand, and while there his bright eyes lighted upon a barrel of pippins exposed temptingly to view just outside the door. In going out it appears he took one, and returned to his mother munching it.

"Where did you get that nice apple, Willie?" inquired his mother.

"Dot it at the docery," replied Willie.

"Did the man give it to you?"

"No; I took it."

"Why, Willie, that was naughty!—You should not take apples or anything else without permission."

"But nobody saw me."

"O! yes, Willie—there was one who saw you!"

"Who?"

"Why, God saw you."

Willie stopped a moment to consider, and then, with a good deal of satisfaction expressed in his face, replied:

"No, he didn't ma. There was an awning over the store!"

☞ An ingenious Frenchman on Long Island claims to have discovered a sure means of destroying the potato bugs.—Mix one gallon of prussic acid with three ounces of rend rock, stir well, and administer a tablespoonful every hour and a half till the bug shows signs of weakening. Then stamp on him.

☞ One Ohio editor says of a contemporary who had assumed the part of a mummy in a dramatic performance:

"He was obliged to put a little animation into himself to come up with the character, and to wear more recent linen; but that was about all. Nature had admirably qualified him to act the part."

Constable Holbrook preferred a charge against John Flynn, of Weymouth, for keeping a female dog, without having procured the necessary papers from the town clerk. He plead not guilty, but after hearing the evidence the Judge thought otherwise, and pronounced him guilty; but in consideration of Flynn's having licensed the animal since the complaint was made, let him off by paying the costs.

Tuesday morning Constables Garey and Holbrook were again on hand. The former with Thomas Fraher whose case was continued from last week. The charge was for selling liquor to Thomas E. Burrill, who is a member of the Weymouth Reform Club. Burrill testified to procuring liquor of Fraher at his dwelling house, but did not pay for the same, consequently he was discharged. Adams Academy.

The exercises in reading and declamation at the Town Hall, on Saturday last, drew a large and appreciating audience. Prof. Dimmock called the assembly to order and made a few opening remarks. He said John Quincy Adams, Esq., desired the Academy should take high rank in elocution, and as an inducement had offered to the one who should do the best a gold medal. The scholars had had but a few months to prepare for this exercise and were not really able to show that skill and proficiency, that might be hoped or expected, on future occasions.

After some fine music the exercise in reading commenced as follows:—

Marie Antoinette at Versailles, J. H. Adams.	Burke.
Meditations on a Broomstick, A. E. Avery.	Swift.

That we should Rise with the Lark, G. A. Strong.	Lamb.
The Charge at Balaklava, E. D. Jordan, Jr.	Henry Kingsley.
Bob Sawyer's Ride, G. G. Sears.	Dickens.

The exercise in reading was followed by declamations in the following order:

Cataline's Defiance, G. A. Strong.	Croly.

Shylock to Antonio, F. A. Weber.	Shakspeare.

Maud Muller, T. H. Simmons.	Whittier.

At the close of the declamations the judges, appointed to award the prize, consisting of the following gentlemen, retired to the Lyceum Room:—Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Edwin P. Seaver, master of the Boston English High School, Professor William Everett of Harvard College, John C. Ropes, of Boston, Col. F. W. Parker, Superintendent of the Public Schools of Quincy, Robert Grant of Boston and Rev. Mr. Norton of Quincy.

While the Judges were out deciding who had won the medal, Prof. Dimmock announced that there had been other prizes offered and he would then announce who were to receive them at the close of the term. They were as follows:—

For a translation into Latin from Macaulay, to Josiah Quincy, Jr., of Quincy; for a translation into English from the Odyssey of Homer, to Charles G. R. Jennings of Bennington, Vt., and to Lawrence H. H. Johnson of Braintree; for a translation from Horace to Frank Headley Sprague of Quincy; for a translation from Virgil, to George Trambull Hartshorn of Taunton; a second, the same to Frank Headley Sprague of Quincy; for a translation from Nepos, to Walter Elijah Damon of South Hanson.

After a long and patient waiting, the audience was pleased to learn that the judges had come to a decision and were ready to announce the result of their labors. It appeared by there figuring that Josiah Quincy, Jr., of this town, stood in reading and declamation 218, which was the highest, and therefore, the medal was awarded to him. Prof. Everett of Harvard College, thought that George G. Sears of Boston, deserved a medal, he had done so nobly, and stood so high,—217, only one below Quincy; he accordingly awarded him a second prize on his own account.

Base Ball.

Base Ball is truly characteristic of the American people. It calls into action every energy, mental and physical; short, sharp and decisive are its governing rules, and in these particulars it demonstrates the Yankee temper.

Here in Quincy, base ball interest has appeared to be dead for the past few years, but this, our centennial year, promises to give us an exhibition on the ball field never before equalled in Quincy. Already some eight or ten clubs have entered the list to try their skill with the bat and ball. As yet we know not who reigns supreme and should fly the pennant over all the rest; we understand that the Actives of the centre, and the Pioneers of the west both claim the right of supremacy. Now why not give our national game a place in our celebration of the Fourth of July, and let these two clubs settle their claim to the championship of the town, and give a prize to the victor.

On Saturday last, the shoemakers from the shops of Graham and Drake, under Captains Avery and Maxim, crossed the ash in a friendly contest.—The game was decidedly interesting, chiefly from the errors, although not so many as might have been expected, considering that with many of the players it was the first game.

Of individual playing in the field, Maxim, Thayer, Pratt and Connell from Drake's, and Avery, Langford, McQuin and Florence Crowley from Graham's took the lead. The batting of both sides was quite heavy, Osborne winning first prize for largest number of base hits.

Capt. Avery on his way home, was stopped at the shop of Mr. Graham by his numerous friends and presented with a beautiful (leather) badge as a reminder of the game. The game was won by Drake's nine by the following score.

DRAKES.	O.	R.	GRAHAM'S.	O.	R.

Umpire, J. Keefe.

Scorer, Frank Flowers.

It is stated by good authority that George Henry has been engaged to teach the Hook and Ladder nine in the art of wielding the ash. Hose No. 1, spread your fielders as heavy batting is expected.

The girls of Fulton county (Ill.) had a sheep shearing match the other day, and the winner sheared thirteen sheep in two hours.

Probate Court.

At the last session of this Court in this town, held on Wednesday, an unusually large amount of business came before Judge White, as follows:—

Filth Diseases.

Owing to the increased prevalence of diptheria, there is an unusual degree of interest now felt in matters of sewerage, drainage and impure water supply. Not a few careful householders are, upon investigation, astonished to find that for years past they have been systematically reproducing atmospheric and liquid poisons into their houses;—vaults drain into wells, and defective sewers open into cellars. In Quincy this subject ought to receive a great deal more attention than it hitherto has. Our population is rapidly increasing; wells, cess-pools and outhouses are multiplied; the soil gets saturated with impurities which we have no system of sewerage to carry off, and, consequently, sickness must and will increase unless great precautions are taken. These facts make the report of the State Board of Health of this year, peculiarly interesting and valuable to the inhabitants of Quincy. It contains papers on the subjects of house drainage, water supply and sewerage, which anyone can understand, and which everyone who has a family ought to read.

Several copies of the report have been placed in the Public Library, and can be borrowed from it like other books. Read in connection with Col. Waring's excellent papers on the sanitary drainage of houses and towns, in the Atlantic Monthly for 1875, the Board of Health report gives all the information on the causes of what are called "filth diseases" which it is essential to have. Col. Waring's papers are in the 36th bound volume of the Atlantic; the Board of Health report is a volume by itself, and is illustrated with maps and wood-cuts. We wish we could induce many householders of Quincy to attentively read one or both.

West Quincy Items.

Mr. John D. Nutting and a son of Mr. O. E. Sheldon of East Milton, started on Monday last for a visit to the Centennial.

A very valuable horse belonging to Mr. Peter J. Donahue died on Friday morning of last week. The animal had worked the day before and seemed remarkably smart.

The young man, Mr. William Callahan, who was so severely injured at the engine house of Messrs. Hardwick & Co., last week, is rapidly improving.

Five extra trains were added to the time table of the Granite Branch railroad, on Monday last.

Would it not be pleasant to have a late train from Boston to West Quincy, at least once a week?

Preparations are being made by some of the young men, to represent this part of the town in the procession on the morning of the 4th.

Why is it that the Band in our own town, was not engaged to escort the coming 4th of July procession. J.

☞ A horse belonging to George Crane which he left standing in front of his store, ranaway and damaged the wagon to which he was attached on Saturday afternoon. Not content with Saturday's sport he tried the same trick on Monday, upsetting and damaging the wagon as before. These little freaks will grow expensive, George.

Oily Substances always aggravate Skin Diseases. Ointments are therefore rather hurtful than beneficial. Glenn's Sulphur Soap, which opens, instead of clogging the pores with grease, has, as might have been expected widely superseded oleaginous compounds as a remedy for scorbutic affections.

Tainted Blood! Many wretched mortals are this moment down at the bottom of Despair with the horrible prospect of a lingering Death from Consumption, who might very soon be thoroughly Cured by using Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

☞ Our friend Richards at the "Old Corner" Clothing Store, 25 Dock Square, Boston, not only goes upon the principal that "Honesty is the best policy," but that it is right, and bound to succeed in the end. An examination of his immense stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing at his Hard Pan Prices, will convince the most incredulous that he means business, and business conducted upon honorable and straight forward principles.

Quincy, June 17. 1w

Floral Sunday. Very interesting exercises were held in the Universalist Church last Sunday. The school children and teachers had gathered a great variety of flowers which were arranged into wreaths, boquets, &c., and in front of the pulpit was a beautiful arch of flowers. Previous to the address by the pastor, which was excellent, four children were brought forward and baptized, as follows:—

Susie Saville and Stillman Kittredge, children of Mr. and Mrs. Urbane Cudworth, Jr.; Emma A., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Turner; Kate Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Simmons.

Braintree.

On Friday night of last week, a valuable horse belonging to W. A. Ross, firm of Ross & French, got loose in the stable and eat so abundantly of grain, that notwithstanding all efforts to the contrary, death was the result.

Base Ball. A picked nine from East Braintree, played a game on Saturday last with the Modocs of South Braintree. Umpire, J. E. Mellen. Result, So. Braintree 19; East Braintree 13.

☞ Open air temperance meeting at East Braintree on Sunday afternoon. A good gathering.

Runaway. On Tuesday afternoon a horse attached to a carriage in which were seated Mrs. Houghton of East Somerville and Miss Lizzie Thompson of So. Braintree, who were waiting for Mr. W. Houghton (who was to accompany them,) to be seated, started from the residence of Miss Thompson, ran down Washington street, turned at the Square, where Miss Thompson threw herself from the carriage, breaking an ankle bone, and it is feared seriously injured herself inwardly. The horse then continued on, and turned a short corner into the premises of Mr. Hosea Waite, throwing Mrs. Houghton out, slightly injuring her, and overturning and smashing the carriage.

☞ Wednesday evening the singers of Braintree met at the Town Hall, for a rehearsal preparatory for July 4th.—Braintree appreciates Home Talent. The Braintree singers will do the singing.—The Braintree Brass Band will furnish music, and F. A. Hobart of Braintree will be orator of the day.

☞ Thursday evening the Methodist Society met a goodly number of friends and well-wishers at the Town Hall, and entertained them with singing, recitations, strawberries, ice cream and refreshments. The verdict was from all a good time. This is the second strawberry festival of the season. The Orthodox society held theirs on Friday of last week. D.

Pure Groceries. We would advise those of our citizens who visit Boston to purchase goods to call at Messrs. Cobb, Bates and Yerxa's, at No. 686 Washington street. It is one of the most reliable places to buy groceries to be found in Boston. Their large trade keeps their stock fresh and good, and for prices you have only to examine their price list in our columns to-day.

The Evil Fruits of Weak Digestion. There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopœia or out of it. A wineglassful of the Bitters should be taken before each meal. J3.4w

Poetry.

You Can't Most Always Sometimes Tell.

BY B. P. SHILLABER.

Was it the voice of a bell or bird
Which careless I, half-hearing heard?
It bubbled forth with a laugh intent
And a girlish scream of merriment,
And these the words on my ear that fell,
"You can't most always sometimes tell."

I marveled much such words to hear,
But smiled at their conjunction queer,
For in them was a pregnant thought,
To be in many a judgment wrought,
For what is ill or what is well,
We can't most always sometimes tell.

The outside glitter of worldly show
Obscures the meanings that lurk below;
We gaze and wonder and think we see
But our eyes are blurred by the glamoury;
We check our verdict, saying, "Well,
We can't most always sometimes tell."

Superlatives in dress and air
May take the careless by their glare,
And simulated virtues shine
As bright as jewels from the mine;
We judge the kernel from the shell,
But can't most always sometimes tell.

The smiling look may haply hide
The covert where the gloom abide;
The dullest tone in law or love
May treacherous and wicked prove;
The smooth mien hide a purpose fell—
We can't most always sometimes tell.

But if 'tis thus, reflection saith,
We lose in men all living faith;
The people moving round about
And seen through clouds of fear and doubt,
And they may say to us as well,
We can't most always sometimes tell.

Agricultural, &c.

Improve the Pasture.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

While looking over the Agicultural Report of Massachusetts, my attention was arrested by the statement of Prof. C. S. Sargent, in regard to forest trees.—He thinks the cultivation of forest trees would be profitable for farmers on their rough and poor lands. If so, would it not be advantageous to the town of Quincy to plant some of the town's land with trees instead of keeping it for a brush pasture,—occupied with a little of every thing that is useless, and but little that is useful.

I examined, recently, a piece of land, which I believe belongs to the town, near the residence of the late William Newcomb, and found growing upon it the following trees and shrubs:—Oak, hickory, white pine, pitch pine, willow, red cedar, huckleberry, bramble, blueberry, English cherry, dogwood, bayberry rosebush, elder, buttonwood, wild cherry, and apple. The last two furnishing pasturage for canker worms and tent caterpillars. I think that less than half the ground furnished any grass.

Now, I am not aware that any person or persons have authority to expend the town's money for the improvement of these lands, but I think it would be well for the town to authorize an individual or committee, to improve these lands, as by so doing it would greatly enhance their value in a few years.

There is a large number of oak bushes, which, if properly trimmed up to one sprout each, and dug around a little, would in few years make good sized trees.

I have an oak, which, fourteen years ago was of this description. If much of this land was planted with ash, and European larch next spring, it would increase four fold in twenty years, and add much to the beauty and honor of the town. At least, it seems as if the town might clean up and improve the roadside in that vicinity. J. H.

The Potato Bug.

The Colorado Beetle has made its appearance in Hull, and much excitement exists among the farmers in that locality in consequence. On Saturday, Mr. Martin Knight, of that town, picked a lot of these insects from his potato patch; and placing them in a glass bottle, conveyed them to Boston, for the inspection of the press. They are a repulsive looking insect, about the size of the common black beetle, their backs being covered with alternate stripes of green and yellow. They are said to be very tenacious of life, are blessed with voracious appetites, and will clear a potato patch of everything green in less time than a "cat will lick her ear." How they came to make their debut in Hull is a wonderment to everybody, as we learn that no new seed potatoes have been planted there this year. We hope they will confine their depredations to the peninsula, however, and not carry out the saying of the politicians—"as goes Hull so goes the State."—Hingham Journal.

To Kill Burdocks.

Mr. Joshua H. Spear, of this town, informs us, that at this season of the year, it is the time to kill the burdock and other noxious plants, about the door yards, and road sides. Cut them below the surface of the ground every time they make their appearance, for four or five weeks, and the work is well done.—They will not trouble you afterwards.

Anecdotes.

Dignity.—"Did I see you turn your nose up at me?"

Impudence.—"Don't know, I'm sure."

Dignity.—"Did you turn it up?"

Impudence.—"Well, I tried, and you make me think I succeeded."

Servant.—"I'll go and get Tom some medicine, and he'll take it like a little man."

Little chunk of Wisdom (in corner.)—"I know what that means. I'll have to take half to show Tom what a man is like. I guess I'll leave the room."

"An' how far might a square be?" said a patriot stranger to a patriot driver on a Market Street car.

"Sure an' if ye was a Philaydelphian like meself, ye would know it was to the next corner."

"An' is it, thin," said the patriot stranger, "fwhat we New Yarkers call a block?"

"An' it is."

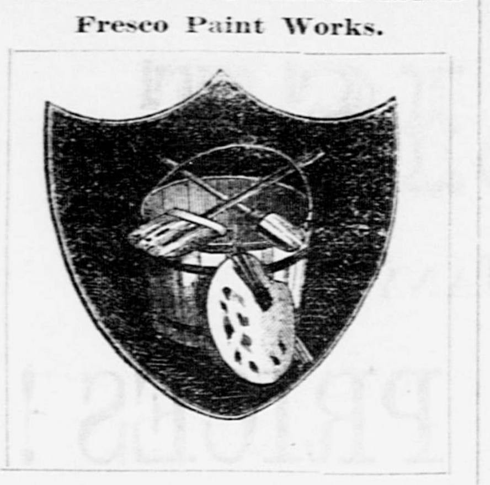
JOHNSTON'S PATENT

Dry Sized Kalsomine

READY FOR USE.
MANUFACTURED AT
DRY KALSOMINE AND
Fresco Paint Works.



The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale form the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

And listen a moment. One hundred years ago a little daughter was born to Uncle Sam, and christened Liberty. She was a lovely child, but bad men sought her life. KING GEORGE sent armies and navies to destroy her. But brave men flocked to her defence, and thousands came across the seas to protect her. She was rocked in the "OLD CRADLE," in FANEUIL HALL, by her mother, living in the "OLD CORNER" House hard by. In due time she was wedded to UNION, and their children have multiplied exceedingly. Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For the relief and cure of all derangements in the stomach, liver, and bowels. They are a mild aperient, and an excellent purgative. Being purely vegetable, they contain no mercury or mineral whatever. Much serious sickness and suffering is prevented by their timely use; and every family should have them on hand for their protection and relief, when required. Long experience has proved them to be the safest, surest, and best of all the Pills with which the market abounds. By their occasional use, the blood is purified, the corruptions of the system expelled, obstructions removed, and the whole machinery of life restored to its healthy activity. Internal organs which become clogged and sluggish are cleansed by Ayer's Pills, and stimulated into action. Thus incipient disease is changed into health, the value of which change, when reckoned on the vast multitudes who enjoy it, can hardly be computed. Their sugar coating makes them pleasant to take, and preserves their virtues unimpaired for any length of time, so that they are ever fresh, and perfectly reliable. Although searching, they are mild, and operate without disturbance to the constitution, or diet, or occupation.

Full directions are given on the wrapper to each box, how to use them as a Family Physic, and for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1876.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We.

A Kentucky Landlord.

A traveller from Virginia, as his blooded horse, plethoric saddle bags, and haughty insouciance indicated, stopped at a comfortable wayside inn in Kentucky, one night, many years ago. The landlord was a jovial, whole souled fellow, as landlords were in those days, and gave the stranger the best entertainments his table and bar would afford, as well as his own merry company to make him glad. Early in the morning the stranger was up and looking around, when he espied a rich bed of mint in the garden. He straightway found Boniface, and, indignant at what he supposed his inhospitality in setting plain whiskey before him when the means of brewing nectar were so easy of access, he dragged him forth to the spot, and, pointing his finger at the mint, he exclaimed:

"I say, landlord, will you be good enough to say what that is?"

"A bed of mint," said the somewhat astonished landlord.

"And will you please tell me what is the use of it?"

"Well, don't exactly know, 'cept the old woman dries it sometimes with the other 'yarbs.'"

The Virginian almost turned pale at the enormity of the assertion.

"And do you mean to tell me you don't know what a mint julip is?"

"Not 'cept it's something like sage tea, stranger."

"Sage tea! Go right along to the house, get a bucket of ice, loaf sugar, and your best liquor."

The landlord obeyed, and the stranger soon made his appearance with a handful of the fragrant, dewy mint, and then they brewed and drank again.

Breakfast was over, and the stranger's horse was brought out only to be ordered back again. Through the livelong day they brewed and drank; one or two neighbors dropped in, who were partakers, and late in the night were their orgies kept up. Ere they made it bedtime the landlord and his Virginia friend who had initiated him into the pleasant mysteries of mint julip, were sworn brothers, and when the latter departed next morning, Boniface exacted a pledge that he should stop on his return, and stay as long as he pleased free of cost.

The stranger's business, however, detained him longer than he expected, and it was the next summer before he came back. Riding up late in the evening he gave his horse to an old negro who was at the gate, and at the same time inquired: "Well, Sam, how is your master?"

"Yonder him come," said the negro, pointing to a youth who was approaching.

"I mean your old master, fool."

"Old Massa! Him done dead dis tree month."

"Dead! What was the matter with him? He was in fine health when I left him."

"Yes, but see, Massa Stranger, one of dem Virginia gemmens come along here last year and showed him how to eat greens in his liquor. He liked it so well he done stuck to it till it kill him," said the old darkey shaking his head.

The stranger passed a less jovial night than on his previous visit, and was off by daybreak the next morning. He quieted his conscience, however, in the end with the reflection that "good things are sometimes misused."

☞ The camphor tree, which is a stupendous laurel, grows in the provinces of Kiang-si and Canton, in China, to a great height, with a diameter of five or six feet. The wood is dry, of light color, easily worked, and durable. Gum camphor is obtained from the branches by steeping them, while fresh cut, in water for two or three days, and then boiling them till the gum, in the form of a white jelly, adheres to a stick which is used in constantly stirring the branches. The fluid is then poured into a glazed vessel where it concretes in a few hours. To purify it, the Chinese put alternate layers of finely powdered earth and of crude gum in a copper basin, with mint as an upper layer, lute an inverted basin on the top of that, and then put the retort in a fire. The gum sublimates and adheres to the top in crystals. Camphor wood is largely used in making furniture.

☞ A Nantucket man drank over 73 barrels of liquor in a period of 34 years.

A Pretty Ornament.

The Fruit Recorder gives a few hints for making a very handsome ornament for the wall. Obtain a neat pasteboard box about one and a half inches deep, twelve inches long and nine wide, line neatly with tinted paper, lavender or straw color. Make a cross of thin strips of wood, let the proportions be about two-thirds the recess case, with arms one-third less than the body; cover with candle-wick, and lay on a saturated solution of alum until crystalized on the four end edges, but leaving the back clear, otherwise it would not adhere to the paper; make a number of autumn leaves of the tinted wax (sold in sheets for such work,) crimson, scarlet, yellow and brown, in many shades of each color. Do not use molds of large size, the smaller sizes of maple, sumac, willow, oak and holly are best. With a vine of minature Virginia creeper (made on small sumach moulds, arranged like the Virginia creeper,) fasten the cross against the back of the case with glue, then arrange a group of leaves around the base and the vine climbing up the body, over the arms and head. Cover with a glass in any suitable frame, and you will have a lovely ornament.

Peculiarities of Speech.

It is very easy to acquire, but very difficult to loose a peculiar trick of speech or manner; and nothing is more universal. If we look round among our friends and acquaintances, we shall find scarcely one who has not his favorite word, his perpetual formula, his automatic action, his unmeaning gesture—all tricks caught when young, and, by not being corrected then, next to impossible to abolish.—Who does not know the familiar "I say" as the preface to every remark? and the still more familiar "You know," as the middle term of every sentence? Who, too, in these latter times has not suffered from the infliction of "awful" and "jolly?"—milestones in the path of speech, interspersed with even uglier and more obstrusive signs of folly and corrupt diction — milestones that are forever turning up showing the successive distances to which good taste and true refinement have receded in this hideous race after slang to which our youth is given.

Then there are people who perpetrate ejaculations, who say "Goodness!" as a mark of surprise, and "Good gracious!" when surprise is a little mixed with reprobation; lower in the social scale it is "Did you ever!" and indifferently to all stations, "You don't say so!" or in a voice of depreciation. "No!" and "Surely not!" To judge by voice and word, these ejaculatory people are always in a state of surprise. They go through the world in unending astonishment, and their appeals to their goodness and that indeterminate quantity called good gracious are incessant.

In the generation that died with the Fourth George the favorite ejaculations were "By Jove!" and "By George!" with excursions into the regions of "Gad!" and "By Jingo!" Before then we had the bluff and lusty squires who rejoiced in "Odsbodikins!" and "Swounds!" with other and uncouth oaths, that were not meant to offend the hearers, but were simply tricks of speech caught by speakers. So, indeed, is the habit of swearing and using bad words generally. It is emphatically a habit, a trick of speech, meaning for the most part no more than the "Goodness!" and "Good gracious!" of the milder folly.

The Pure Heart.

The springs of everlasting life are within. They are clear streams gushing up from the depths of souls, and flowing out to enliven the sphere of outward existence. But like the waters of Shiloh, they "go swiftly." You must listen to catch the silvery tones of the little rill as it glides from its mountain home; you did not witness its silent march through the green vale, but its course will be seen in fresh verdure and upon flowers; its presence will be known by the forms of life and beauty which gather around it. It is ever thus with the pure. You may not hear the "still small voice," or heed the silent aspiration, but there is a moral influence and a holy power which you will feel. The wilderness is made to smile, flowers of new life and beauty spring up and flourish, while an invisible presence breathes immortal fragrance through the atmosphere.

☞ A man in Nantucket has made during the winter 40,000 linen coats, employing 75 sewing machines.

☞ Gen. Tom Thumb and family have arrived at their home in Middleboro' and intend spending the summer.

☞ A Scotch laddie delivering milk for a dairy in the suburbs was stopped the other day in his round of calls by two detective officers, who asked him for whom he delivered the milk. The boy, on telling them, was asked if his employers put anything in the milk. "Ou, ay," was the innocent answer; and the officers, thinking they had a clear case, each offered the boy a penny if he would tell them what was put in it. "Ah," said the boy with a grin, "ye wadna gie's the penny though I tell't ye!" "Oh, yes, we will," returned the officers. "Gies't then," said the little fellow, doubtfully. The pence was then handed over, with the question, "Now, what do you put in the milk?" "Why," said the boy, with a cunning look, "I pit the measure in every time I tak' ony oot!"

VIII. Whenever it shall be necessary to execute any deed conveying land or any other instrument, required to carry into effect any vote of the town, the same shall be executed by the Selectmen, or a majority thereof, in behalf of the town unless the town shall otherwise vote in any special case.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1876.

A Legion of Relatives.

Judge Hilton and Mrs. A. T. Stewart have been pestered since the death of the great merchant by letters coming by scores in every mail almost, many of them claiming to be related in various degrees to the late Mr. Stewart, and submitting their claims to pecuniary recognition. Judge Hilton has just published a few samples, and they reflect curiously upon the possibilities of human nature. Many of them submit proof that they have some kind of reason for believing themselves to be related to the deceased, and a number of them furnish certificates of good character from merchants, clergymen, lawyers and others. The letters, diverse in character and yet having certain lines of similarity which can easily be imagined, come from Ireland, New York, Missouri and other States, and some of them intimate that if no money can be furnished, old clothes will be acceptable. It is not to be supposed that all the letters are genuine, the bogus character of some of them being very evident. But it is no less evident that there is a legion of harpies in the world who are ready at any opportunity to pounce upon what they never had any claim to, and what they have not the faculty of acquiring in industrious and creditable ways. Two facts in connection with this matter, prominent above other facts, are that an advertisement in a Belfast (Ireland) paper calling upon relatives of Mr. Stewart to forward proofs of their relationship shows that there are parties in Ireland who intend to make a move against the will, and that the claim of the Baileys, of this country, is disturbed by the statement of Mr. James Begley of Ballycarrickmaddy, Ireland, who claims that Mr. Stewart's mother was a Begley, and that Mr. Stewart recognized the relationship of that family by paying the funeral expenses of one of its members. As opposed to the claims of all the horde of would-be relatives it is known that while Mr. Stewart occupied much time in Ireland seeking out those of his own blood he was of the belief that he was the last of his race.

What the Hens Do.

By careful computation the number of eggs sold in Quincy Market, Boston, alone, on an average of each week in the year, is 40,000 dozen, or 480,000 eggs. This equals 24,960,000 eggs a year, enough to set all the hens in Hull. And this is for Quincy Market alone. Why Boston Common can be paved and repaved with the eggs sold in the city during a year so that not a spot of ground shall be visible. The eggs thus sold are from nearly every State in the Union, and from all parts of the British Provinces. Upon the breaking up of the ice last year, the first steamer from Prince Edward Island came up loaded with eggs, which had been accumulated during the winter. There were 700,000 dozen.—They had been gathered in all sorts of weather, and sich a cargo was never before received in Boston.

OVER EIGHTEEN. A runaway couple went to Eugene City, Oregon, to get married. The clergyman and clerk both wanted proof that the young lady was of proper age. Strategy, which has proved so efficient in other scenes, was resorted to. The figure 18 were placed in the bottom of the shoes of the maiden, and one who was in the secret affirmed that she was over eighteen. This brought the license and the clergyman—they were made happy.

☞ The height of the tallest buildings in New York is as follows: Trinity Church, 284 feet; Union Telegraph building, 226; Brooklyn bridge tower, 222; Tribune building, 221; shot tower, near Beekman street, 221; St. Paul's Church, 203; Post office, dome and observatory, 195; Equitable Life Insurance building, 175.

BAD DREAMS. A young lady in a Pennsylvania town put a piece of wedding cake under her pillow, and went to bed with the happy belief that she would dream of seeing her future husband. That evening, however, she had eaten two plates of ice cream, about a pint of strawberries, several sweet cakes, and two large pickles, and she now says she would rather remain single all her life than marry the man she saw in her dreams.

☞ The Old Colony railroad company have presented their employees with uniform summer hats.

Summary of News.

☞ The Patent Office contains many a sad proof of half a life wasted by men in devising what had been accomplished before they began.

☞ The new Court House building has cost New York city so far between $14,000,000 and $15,000,000, and is still in an incompleted state.

☞ The highest number of convicts ever reached in the Ohio penitentiary was attained in March, when the records showed 1386 in confinement.

☞ The town of Plymouth has bought a stump-puller.

☞ A base ball game in Plymouth one day recently, resulted in the astonishing score of 70 to 22.

☞ Forty years ago the Abington Artillery Company paraded with sixty-five enrolled members, and of that number forty-seven hale and hearty old men are living to-day.

☞ Much regret is expressed by the people of Hingham that the statue of Gov. Andrew, recently erected in the cemetery in that town, is not located over his grave.

☞ It is certain that upwards of one million of postal cards were used by the public last year. Their entire cost is $1.39 7-8 per thousand, and they are sold at one cent each.

☞ A committee of ladies and gentlemen have been chosen, in So. Abington to visit the liquor saloons in that town and inform them of the purpose of the people to have the traffic stopped.

☞ The 59th anniversary of the Sunday school connected with Dr. Storrs' church, in Braintree, was observed by appropriate services on the 21st ult. A sketch of the history of the school during the past half century, was given by one of the ex-superintendents. The present membership of the school is 240.

☞ In excavating a gravel bed in Hingham last week, the workmen came across a number of specimens of pottery and pewter ware, and also remains of bones some six or eight feet below the surface of the ground, under what appeared to be an arch of clay.

☞ The Old Colony Memorial says:—"The Colorado potato bug is appearing in this section of the state the present season. Farmers should keep an eye out for him."

☞ E. E. Partridge of Athol has a shovel which, it is said, was used in throwing up intrenchments on Bunker Hill previous to the battle.

☞ Thrifty rural youth about Springfield are securing money for the Fourth of July by gathering potato bugs at the rate of 10 cents a quart.

☞ The Old Colony Railroad Company has adopted the plan of "duplex tickets" on their road, by which passengers paying ten cents extra for not having a ticket previously bought get that sum refunded.

☞ A down east editor says:—"The ladies' spring hats are pretty, and worn on the upper edge of the left ear, which makes one look arch and piquant, like a chicken looking through a crack in a fence."

☞ "Mus' brace up," said Sozzle, as he stood on the doorstep at 1 P. M.; "'ill never do let ol' lady 'spect anythin'" and, as Mrs. S. descending the stairs, clad in her robe de nuit. Sozzles braced up, knocking the ashes off his cigar, and as the door opened, said cheerily, "Hullo, M'ria (hic) up yet? Got a match in yer pocket?" Of course she did not suspect anything.

☞ She sailed gracefully into a Metropolitan car, a few days ago, and stood in the middle of the vehicle. The polite conductor at the door said, "There's a seat at the further end." She moved not. Soon he repeated the remark, but she remained motionless. Thinking she was deaf, he pitched his voice on a higher key, and said in louder tones, "I said there was a seat at the other end of the car ma'am." She turned quietly round, and with a smile that was childlike and bland she made answer, "I know it, and I'll take it when you get off from my dress." He lifted his feet, and from her position six feet ahead of him, she silently glided to the seat.

☞ A gentleman at Troy recently attended the funeral of a deceased relative. Just as the coffin was about to be lowered in the grave he stepped out from the crowd of mourners, deliberately opened a pen-knife, chipped a splinter from the rough pine box in which the coffin was encased, and coolly proceeded to whittle out a toothpick.

She Paddled Her Own Boat.

The train was approaching Atlanta, and the obliging conductor went up to the homely old lady who was evidently travelling alone, and said:—

"Madam, have you a companion?"

"O, yes, sir; Martha Ann made me fetch along her black ridikule that she calls a kumpanyun!"

"No! no! I mean an escort!"

"A what, sir?" and she looked at him hard enough to break her spectacles.

"A fellow traveller with you?" explained the conductor, desperately.

She rose. Her uplifted hand looked deadly in its black mitten garnature.

"You good-for-nothing scamp; no, sir! The idea of me, a lone woman, with no natural protector but a sheepskin-kivered New Testament, having a feller travellin' with me! Your mother ought to weep over your imperdence, young man, and I'll have ye to know that I kin git along in this world about as well as any sixty-year-old widow that you ever struck agin!"

By this time the conductor was out on the platform wiping the perspiration from his face, and vowing that the old lady might "go it alone" to her heart's content.

Poetry.

Just Stop and Think Awhile.

When forth upon the tide of life,
You go in manhood's prime,
To battle with its care and strife,
Its error and its crime,
Full many a traitor voice will call,
Full many a syren smile;
Yet ere thou yield thee to their thrall,
Just stop and think awhile.

Should e'er the tempter bid you speed,
Where wine and revel flow,
That fire the brain to many a deed
Of dark and lasting woe—
Ere you have stained your heart, your soul,
Or mingled with the vile—
Beyond all hope—beyond control—
Just stop and think awhile.

Let not the scoffer shake thy trust,
In aught that is Divine;
Why should a feeble worm of dust,
Dash out that hope of thine,
Who knows not e'en himself and is
Deceived with his own guile?
Before thou lean on arm like his,
Just stop and think awhile.

Before you do one single act,
Contemptible or mean,
Which will, in after years, detract
From your fair fame we ween—
Before you speak one word, or write
One line, which may defile
The heart, and turn it from the right—
Just stop and think awhile.

How much of good might here be done,
If we would only try;
How many erring might be won,
Whom we pass saintly by!
How might the waves of light be blest
With many a sunny isle,
By our kind care and culture dressed—
Just stop, and think awhile

COTTAGE PUDDING. One teacupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter, creamed together; yelks of three eggs, and white of one, after they have been beaten; a cupful of milk (reserving out enough to dissolve half a teaspoonful of soda:) one pint of sifted flour, with a teaspoonful of cream tartar mixed through it. At the last moment add the soda, thoroughly dissolved. Bake in a buttered cake-pan. Make a frosting with the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth, with half a large cupful of sugar stirred in. As soon as it is baked, spread the frosting on. Set it on the ice, then serve with sauce; made with two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of butter and two eggs. Beat all together very light. Let it steam, not boil, (put it into a tin pail, and place it in a vessel of boiling water.) stirring all the time until it scalds and thickens. Put a teaspoonful of vanilla into the sauce-bowl, and pour the sauce over it.

NICE COOKIES. One cup of cream; one-half cup of butter; two eggs; one and one-half cups of sugar; one teaspoon of soda; flour to knead.

AUNT ELIZA'S STORY.

The clock had struck eleven. We were still sitting on the hearthrug, over the remains of the wood fire that had sparkled and crackled in the huge old fireplace, filling the room with its light and warmth, now reduced to a few bright coals, casting occasional glimmerings of fitful light over the low ceiling of the spacious room. We had begun our "ante-bed" talk, under the influence of the bright fire, and it had been gay and frolicksome, so, under the influence of the dying fire, our conversation became more subdued and sober.

There was a slight tap at the door, which startled us, and Aunt Eliza's bright face peeped in.

"Why, girls, not in bed yet?"

"Oh, Aunt Eliza," we exclaimed, "come in and tell us a ghost story."

She came in and took her seat on the rug in our midst.

"I can't tell a ghost story," she said, "but I will tell you what happened to me once, and you can call it what you please—but it is true, perfectly true."

We all knew Aunt Eliza; no truer woman, in every sense of the word, lived than her, and we know hers to be an "o'er true tale," if she says so.

"Well," she began boldly at first, but with an earnest tremulousness in her voice as she progressed that showed time had not obliterated traces of the excitement her experience must have produced in her at the moment, "some twelve years ago, your uncle had a little controversy about some land, in a certain country on the Mississippi river, which, after much delay, it was agreed by the parties, should be settled by arbitration. The case compelled your uncle to spend some weeks in G——, the country seat of the county where the land lay. Ever since our marriage I had kept your uncle's papers and accounts for him, for he was a most careless man in his business. So he insisted I could be of service to him in G——, in preparing and classifying his memoranda for the hands of the umpire.

"Well, to make my story short, I went with him, leaving the house and the children and the servants to take care of themselves and each other. The day before I left I rode into town to see Mrs. D——, an intimate friend, to tell her of my going, and to ask her to ride over to the plantation once in a while, and 'have an eye to things' there, which she readily promised to do.

"I staid a whole week in G——, in a miserable, dirty tavern, making memoranda and copying testimony, and helping all I could to 'get order out of the chaos' of an old, unsettled, badly managed partnership. Saturday night, I lay me down on the hard, tavern bed, pretty well worn out with the kind of work, distasteful to most women, and, just then, doubly so to me.

"Early Sunday morning — it was scarcely light that short December day—I woke with an undefinable longing to go home right away on the first boat. I could listen to no persuasions from your uncle. I felt like something was going on amiss at home.

"So, about ten o'clock, a large boat stopped at G—— on her downward trip. The clerk, a hunchback, came ashore to receive some freight. Your uncle put me under his charge, and we were soon off. There were few passengers, and I sat alone all day; so, as night drew near, I felt exceedingly nervous and anxious. One by one the passengers dropped off, until I was left sole occupant of the long, dreary-looking saloon. A cabin boy passed along, silently extinguishing all the lights except one burner in each chandelier. I knew I would reach home about midnight, so there was no use in going to bed, even if I could have slept. On one table was a Bible; I opened it, and vainly tried to read. The light was dim, and, besides, I could not concentrate my thoughts.

"I closed the book and looked up and down. There was not a soul visible in the long cabin of that boat, which seemed to me then, and seems to me still, the longest boat I ever was on. At the extreme bow end was a piano between the two doors that opened upon the guards, or a back way, I never knew which. There was a Frank Leslie, or something of that sort, a pictorial, lying upon the sofa. I tried to look at the pictures, and I mechanically turned the leaves, but I literally saw nothing.

"At last, as a last resort—I couldn't sit still, I couldn't read, I couldn't sleep—I got up and walked the cabin some distance up and down, and up again, when, behold! standing in the doorway, on the left of the piano, was Mrs. D——, the same light dress upon her she wore the day we parted, the same sweetly sad smile upon her face, and, with extended hand, as though to greet me. I was perhaps twenty feet off, but my eyes were riveted upon her. I quickened my step, my eye brightened, my lips were forming words of affection. I put forth my hand—touched her. A thrill went through me like what would have been imparted by sudden contact with cold, burnished brass. My hand had touched the bolt of the door—the door was close shut—the cabin was empty!

"I heard my own heart beat like a drum, as I sank, appalled, upon a sofa. A voice roused me:—

"'Is anything the matter with you, madam?'

"It was the voice of the hunchback clerk.

"'I have been watching you some minutes from my office window; you seem painfully nervous.'

"I could only answer I was nervous. So he sat by me, trying to interest me—talking, talking; I never had the remotest idea what the poor man was saying. His voice was still droning in my ears, when the sudden whistle of the boat announced my proximity to home. The whistle and the bell made a fearful din. It was past two o'clock, that witching hour, when the boat landed in front of our home. The carriage driver, John, was seen coming rapidly down from the house with a lantern.

"I could not wait for the boat to be made secure, or the plank run out, or hardly for John to get within reach of my voice.

"'All well at home, John?'

"'All well, missus,' rung out the negro's cheery voice, as we walked up to the house, John and I, all alone.

"'And the children, John?'

"'All well, missus.'

"'And Mrs. D——, John?' I found courage to say.

"'Oh, Lord! missus, Mrs. D—— died yesterday morning, afore day.'

"'Oh, John!' I cried.

"'Yes, missus; it was awful sudden like; she was tuck with a apoplexy at the dinner-table Saturday, and she never knowed nothing afterwards—she died, peaceful like, afore day, Sunday.'"

Aunt Eliza rose with the words of the faithful negro upon her lips, kissed us all silently, and vanished from the room. The last glimmering of light had disappeared from the coals and from the hearth full of ashes, and so we girls crept silently to bed.

The New Baby.

A Boy's Soliloquy. Yes, there's another of 'em up stairs now! I knowed it, 'cause pa told me I must be quiet and sit down in the corner with my books, and musn't play ball nor ask Willie Smart to come in and help me put my new puzzle together. Then there's a cross nurse that's always scolding me for getting in her way, no matter where I get. Besides, Miss Gadall was here to-day, and she took me on her knee, patted me on the back just like cook does when I'm choking, and said my nose was another degree out of joint; but I knew better, for this is the third time she has told me so, and it is no more out of joint than it ever was. She's a hateful, goggle-eyed old maid—that's what she is.

I saw it, too. It's got a little, round, red head without any hair, with great, deep wrinkles instead of eyes, and when it cries it opens its mouth as wide as though it meant to swallow itself. Pa helped me up on the side of the bed, and told me to kiss my dear, pretty little sister; and when I wouldn't, and called it a horrid, ugly little thing, he said I was a naughty boy, and then nurse shook me, and said I ought to be ashamed. I didn't get to kiss ma at all. I knew better than to try it, for once when another baby came, I climbed up on the bed and, putting my arms around her neck, hugged and kissed her, but all the time I had my knee right on the baby's head, so I was whipped and put in my crib without any supper because I didn't know it was there.

Little Annie thinks it's nice to have a new sister, but she was the baby before, and don't know anything about it. I can remember long, long ago, ma used to call me her "sweet little darling," and pa dandled me on his foot and said I was a "fine fellow," and Aunt Julia declared that I was a "perfect little angel;" but then Tom came, and all my pretty toys were given to him 'cause he was the baby, and I was cuffed and scolded by everybody 'cept grandma, and she's good to me yet, though there's been two other new ones since.

I wonder where all the babies come from? Ma says the Lord sends them. I wish he wouldn't send any more to our house; we've got more'n enough now. It might be nice for them if they could stay little always, but they have to grow big after awhile, and they ain't no better off than the rest of folks. I rather think if I was a baby I'd ask the Lord to send me where I'd not grow any bigger, and then I'd have nothing to do but to lie on my back and chew my toes, and have folks say I was the "darlingest, cunningest, little creature they ever laid eyes on."

Rewards of Fidelity.

Never forsake a friend. When enemies gather around, when sickness falls on the heart, when the world is dark and cheerless, is the time to try true friendship. They who turn from the scene of distress betray their hypocrisy, and prove that interest only moves them. If you have a friend who loves you, who has studied your interest and happiness, be sure to sustain him in adversity. Let him feel that his former kindness was appreciated, and that his love was not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare, but it exists—in the heart. They only deny its worth and power who never loved a friend, or labored to make a friend happy.

Sketches of North Quincy,—No. 15

If we seek Squantum on a warm day of summer, the thermometer among the nineties to inhale the pure and invigorating breezes of the ocean, we pass, soon after entering upon the causeway on the easterly side, a little prominence of upland, called time out of mind, the Massachusetts Hummock; not exceeding in area,—one acre. On which is scattered at random, the red cedar; also found so abundantly in the northern section of Quincy. Not to be sure the cedar of Lebanon, which attains the great age of 800 years, but very near akin to it, as to species. In appearance, how insignificant this small elevation, roughly circumscribed by the marshes. The State of Massachusetts takes its name from this hillock. How much is associated with it, and its surroundings historically!

Ages before the European trod the soil of the Old Bay State, another race, the aborigines, lived and loved here, and the Indian swain wooed and won his dusky mate. It was the Council ground of Chickataubot, the chief and foremost personage of an Indian tribe. We follow the crooked passage north-easterly to the bluffy and rocky summit of Squantum; encountering the waters of Dorchester bay, which at the swelling tides, quite reach the footsteps of the traveller. Their undulatory movements now grandly approaching the shores and inlets, and anon merrily receding beyond the channel line of Boston and Quincy, far away. From the highest elevation of Squantum, (99 feet,) the view is indeed charming and picturesque. Boston harbor, its many islands, and the surrounding inland of world celebrity are all in view. Here or wherever we gaze upon nature's panorama, the Majesty of Jehovah is manifest,—we have "sermons in brooks and stones, and good in every thing." We can say but a word or two as to some of these Islands. The ancient Light House at a distance of eight miles, built on the great Brewster in 1715, plainly meets the sight; that faithful sentinel of the night, with its revolving apparatus of bright illumination; anxious to tell the mariner the safe pathway of his narrow entrance to the haven of safety. Nearer we see the old "Castle Fort," now Fort Independence, erected as far back as 1634, or but fourteen brief years from the Pilgrim landing at Plymouth. Both localities, as also Long Island have won celebrity in the early days of our Colonial history, and in the times of the American Revolution, by events which transpired upon them. And again, here is Thomson's Island, separated northerly by a narrow but swift channel of water from the rocky prominences of—and within speaking distance from—Squantum. "A silvery gem set in the sea." Now we have something interesting to say about Thomson's Island. Shall we pluck any laurels of the Puritan fathers, as to priority of date, in landing on the Plymouth Rock, when as a matter of history, Thomson's Island was visited before the year 1620 by the European? It is written that an expedition under Captain J. Smith, the celebrated navigator of the seventeenth century, visited the shores of Massachusetts, in 1614, penetrated to the mouth of Neponset river, and landed on Thomson's Island before 1619. This is in accordance to the testimony of William Trevour, William Blaxten, Miles Standish, and the Sagamore of Agawam; that David Thomson himself was on this island, that now bears his name as early as 1619, and took possession as the first white settler of the same, but returned and claimed it, with Squantum, as his permanent residence, in 1626. The easy access to the sea, fine anchorage and proximity to the Neponset Indians, a friendly tribe, were among the inducements of Thomson to settle here.

Capt. Smith, who surveyed this region, had some grand ideas of the future, concerning Squantum and its inland surroundings. Believing the Massachusetts Fields, in the North part of what is now called Billings' Plain, in Quincy, was destined to become the emporium of Massachusetts, as he exhibited by making drawings to the land Company, on his return to London. The Plain was used by the Indians for the cultivation of corn, and probably was never covered with forest trees. After David Thomson left his Island, the town of Dorchester, claimed, took possession of the territory, and yearly rented the same, as shown in the records of the history of Dorchester. But after twenty years, the son of Mr. Thomson claimed the ownership of the Island by right of inheritance. A smart law suit followed, but the town lost the case, and the right of domain was established to Mr. Thomson, by the highest legal authorities of those days, the General Court.

Solemn conferences between the Massachusetts tribe of Indians, and the early white settlers, were often held in this neighborhood, resulting in the peaceful purchase of all the Indian titles to Dorchester and Wollaston, afterwards Braintree. Among the names who appear as grantees of Dorchester lands, comprising the first settlers in 1636, was "Goodman Jno. Pope," whom we learn was the progenitor of the families of that name, some of whom still residing on Squantum, are his lineal descendants. It is well known to the older portion of this community, that yearly, in the month of August, an association journeyed from Boston to Squantum, to go through the form of "burying the hatchet," and to partake convivially of the dainties of the sea, as an emblem of olden times, by their fathers, of reconciliation with the aborigines, after severe feuds of long standing. In connection with this subject, we quote the following from the history of Dorchester, published in 1859, by a Committee of the Dorchester Antiquarian and Historical Society.

"The Neponset tribe of Indians, inhabiting the Dorchester territory, may probably be regarded as the residuary legatees of a much larger and more important Indian nation, viz: the Massachusetts Indians, said to have occupied formerly the circle which now makes Boston Harbor, extending from Malden, round to Cohasset, which Smith calls the paradise of these parts, and to which was appropriately given the name of Massachusetts. At the time of the arrival of the Dorchester settlers, (1630, Chickataubot was the chief of this tribe, whom Dudley, writing in March, 1631, represents as living near to the Massachusetts Fields, (Squantum Farms,) and the same place is fixed by Wood, drawn on his map, in 1633."

The statement made by our highly esteemed townsman, at the last Fourth of July Celebration at Wollaston Heights, that the early events at Squantum, and its surroundings, should be treasured up as a part of the Colonial history of Massachusetts, we have endeavored to verify in this long article.

WM. B. DUGGAN.

To the People of New England.

At a town meeting of the people of Boston, held on Wednesday, the 14th of June, in the Old South Meeting-house, Boston, it was voted that an appeal be made to the people of New England for money to redeem the Old South Meeting-house forever, and that it may be held as a memorial of the past, for patriotic assemblages, and other appropriate purposes not connected with trade. A committee of one hundred persons has been appointed, who have already received large subscriptions. The committee now requests the men, women and children of New England to contribute for this purpose; announcing that if one hundred and fifty thousand be subscribed before the end of one week this purpose can probably be accomplished. It is proposed that the property, when purchased, be placed in the hands of the Massachusetts Historical Society, who have consented to serve as trustees, under proper conditions or of a board of trustees, to be chosen by the subscribers. Immediate action is necessary.—Books for subscription have been prepared, and may be found at the office of the treasurer, Moses H. Sargent, corner Someset and Beacon streets. All journals through the country which communicate with the natives of New England are requested to act as agents of the committee, to acknowledge daily through their columns the contributions made by their readers and to remit to our treasurer. The journals which represent the different branches of trade and manufacture are requested to call on the workingmen of different vocations to join practically in an enterprise which looks to the benefit of all the people. All organizations of whatever purpose, and in particular the religious societies of New England, are requested to appoint collectors without delay, and to send them with proper authentication to take and hold our books of subscription. A subscription paper will be found at the Old South Church, which will be open daily for this purpose. Mr. Sargent, the treasurer, will receive contributions or subscriptions from five cents upward, by mail or otherwise. No subscriptions are to be paid to collectors other than Mr. Sargent or his deputy, at the Old South Church, until the sum of $150,000 be secured.

(Signed) Alexander H. Rice, Edward E. Hale, Geo. F. Pentecost.

Employer and Employed.

It is very common for young men now-a-days to study how little they can make suffice in the way of the labor they perform for their employers, rather than how much they can possibly do to render themselves useful. We say this is common now, and we suppose it always has been common. But we think it will be found on examination never to have been the course pursued by men who in after-life became distinguished for their success. Such men worked for their employers as afterwards, when they got into business on their own account, they worked for themselves.

The Keys.

Father O'Leary and Curran were cracking their jokes at a dinner party one evening, as was their wont, when the celebrated advocate turned abruptly to the good father, saying:

"I wish, O'Leary, that you had the keys of heaven."

"Why, Curran?" asked the divine.

"Because you could then let me in," said the facetious counsellor.

"It would be better for you, Curran, that I had the keys to the other place; because I could then let you out," replied O'Leary.

Baby Show and Tea Party.

Quincy may well be proud, of her noble looking men, handsome women and lovely babies; which, added to its pleasant attractions makes it the banner town of the State.

Last Thursday, according to an invitation issued, some forty or more babies assembled at the Town Hall, thirty of whom were to compete for prizes, to be awarded to the prettiest, fattest, smartest and to the one dressed in the most ancient costume. The task for the judges, was certainly a difficult one. It was an easy matter to decide in two cases, but between the smartest and prettiest it was hard to make a choice. The decision of the judges was as follows:—

A silver mug to the child dressed in the most ancient costume, was awarded to Hannah E. Litchfield, who was arrayed in costume of over one hundred years old.

The second prize, to the prettiest, a knife, fork and spoon, which was awarded to Alice Cleverly.

The third prize a silver napkin ring to the smartest child, was given to Walter E. Loud.

The fourth prize was given to the fattest child, Bernhard Kobel.

The following are the names of the little ones who competed for the prizes. They were all well behaved, and a happier looking lot of mothers and grandmothers would be hard to find.

Jesse Ira, and Jennie Inez, twins, children of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Litchfield.

Hannah E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Litchfield.

Sadie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Jones.

At the close of the baby show, an old fashioned supper was provided for all who wished. Baked beans, Indian and Plum puddings, doughnuts and a bountiful supply of other good things were spread on the tables, and the lady waiters were kept busy filling the orders of the hungry ones.

The entertainment concluded with an old folks' concert many of the singers being dressed in "ye ancient" costume. The singing was excellent, and with the fine music was highly appreciated by the audience.

The regatta will be open to all yachts owned in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham and Hull, and to those from other places, which are regularly enrolled in the Quincy Yacht Club.

SAILING REGULATIONS.

RULE 1. Yachts will be divided into three classes. The first class will include those measuring over 23 feet; the second class, those over 18 and not over 23 feet; the third class, those over 12 and not over 18 feet. Any yacht under 12 feet may enter, but her measurement will be taken as 12 feet.

RULE 2. The measurement shall be the length upon the water-line, and one-third of the over-hang of the stern.—Time shall be allowed for difference of measurement, according to the table of allowance in use by the Quincy Yacht Club.

RULE 3. There shall be no restrictions as to sails.

RULE 4. No ballast shall be thrown overboard from the time of starting.

RULE 5. When two yachts (by the wind) are approaching each other on different tacks, and it is necessary that one of them should give way, the yacht on the starboard tack holds her wind in all cases. Yachts going free must invariably give way for those by the wind on either tack.

RULE 6. Any yacht bearing away or altering her course to leeward, and thereby compelling another yacht to bear away to avoid a collision, shall forfeit all claim to the prize; unless when two yachts are approaching the windward shore, a buoy, or stakeboat, together, with a free wind, and so close to each other that the weathermost cannot bear away clear of the leewardmost, and by standing farther on would be in danger of running on shore, or touching a buoy or stakeboat, then such leewardmost yacht on being requested to bear away, is immediately to comply; and will forfeit all claim to the prize for not doing so. The weathermost yacht must, however, bear away as soon as the one she hails, if she can do so without coming into contact.

RULE 7. When two yachts (by the wind) are approaching the shore, a buoy, or stakeboat, together, and so close to each other that the leewardmost cannot tack clear of the weathermost, and by standing father on would be in danger of running on shore, or touching a buoy, or stakeboat, such weathermost yacht, on being requested to put about, is immediately to comply, and will forfeit all claim to the prize by not doing so. The leewardmost yacht must, however, tack at the same time as the one she hails, if she can do so without coming into contact.

RULE 8. A yacht touching any mark, boat, or buoy, used to mark out the course, shall forfeit all claim to the prize, unless as in case specified in Rule 10.

RULE 9. When rounding a mark, boat, or buoy, the yacht nearest thereto is to be considered the headmost yacht; and should any other yacht in the race compel the yacht which is nearest to any mark, boat, or buoy, to touch said mark, boat, or buoy, the yacht so compelling her shall forfeit all claim to the prize; and the yacht so compelled to touch shall not suffer any penalty for such contact.

RULE 10. Yachts when running before the wind, and within one-eighth of a mile of each other, must not cover the head yacht to take the wind from her sails;—by so doing they forfeit all claim to a prize.

RULE 11. No means except sails shall be used to propel yachts.

RULE 12. The Judges shall have full power to decide all questions that may arise in the sailing of the regatta, and also to exclude all yachts, which by their decision, have violated any rule. There shall be no appeal from their decision.

If any owner or captain of a yacht has any complaint to make, he must return the same to the Judges within fifteen minutes after returning.

COURSES.

For First and Second Classes.

From the Judges' Yacht off Quincy Point, to Buoy on Jacknife Ledge, leaving it on the port, thence to Flagboat in Rock Island Cove, leaving it on the port, thence to Buoy on Bass Point, leaving it on the starboard, thence round the Flagboat moored off the Judges' Yacht, thence over the same course a second time, coming in on the return between the Judges' Yacht and the Flagboat.

For Third Class.

From the Judges' Yacht off Quincy Point to Buoy on Channel Rock, leaving it on the port, thence to Flagboat near Cat Island, leaving it on the port, thence to Flagboat off Hunt's Hill, leaving on the starboard, thence to Flagboat near Cat Island, leaving it on the port, thence to Judges' Yacht, leaving it on the starboard, and passing between it and a Flagboat.

Entries must be made at the store of Mr. E. B. Souther, in Quincy, before the evening of July 3. No Yachts will be allowed to compete for a prize unless properly entered.

JUDGES:—Joseph M. Glover, Chas. H. Porter, Edward B. Souther, James T. Penniman, John O. Holden.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENTS.

There will be two free entertainments for children given at the Town Hall,—one at ten A. M., the other at half past three, P. M. These entertainments will consist of feats of legerdemain by Prof. Wilbur, comic acts by Leopold & Monroe, character songs and dances by Harry Foster, &c. The doors will be opened half an hour previous to each performance. These entertainments are especially designed for the benefit of the children; and while adults will be admitted, and welcomed, the committee desire it plainly understood that they will not be permitted to occupy the seats to the exclusion of the children, or to crowd the hall to their discomfort. Mr. Albert G. Doliver will act as Stage Manager, and have general charge of these entertainments.

Owning to the nature of the programme to be performed, the committee were unable to find suitable places for the entertainments in the Point and West districts, and have concluded in lieu thereof, to give two performances in the Town Hall, as above.

BASE BALL MATCH.

There will be a match game of Base Ball between the "Actives" and the "New Local Nine," on the ball grounds at Quincy Point; the time for which will be announced hereafter.

EXERCISES IN THE TENT.

At two o'clock exercises to consist of Reading of the Declaration of Independence, Vocal and Instrumental Music, will take place in a large tent to be erected on the land belonging to Mr. Charles Crane, on Coddington street, adjoining the residence of John W. Hersey, Esq.

The instrumental music will be furnished by the Weymouth Band, and the vocal music, to comprise Whittier's Centennial Ode, Keller's American Hymn, and other patriotic selections, by a choir of over one hundred voices, under the leadership of Mr. John Farley. The Declaration of Independence will be read by six young ladies, selected from the Grammar schools. The opening and closing paragraphs will be read in concert, and the specifications of the grievances of the Colonists by each reader in turn; careful rehearsals have been had under the direction of the Superintendent of Schools, and it is expected that this feature will be one of the most pleasing of the celebration.

The addresses will be historical in character, and, so far as practicable on such an occasion, will cover the history of the town from its earliest days to the present time; it being the intention of the committee that this part of the celebration shall follow, as far as possible, the suggestions made in the resolution of Congress, and the proclamation of the President, that towns take advantage of the present general investigation of historical matters to gather together and put in shape to be perpetuated, the facts connected with their local history.

In accordance with this plan, addresses, each covering some branch of the local history of the town, will be made, in the order of the events described, by the following gentlemen:

- CHAS. F. ADAMS, JR., ESQ.
- EDWIN W. MARSH, ESQ.,
- COL. FRANCIS W. PARKER,
- REV. REGINALD H. HOWE,
- WM. R. DIMMOCK; ESQ., L. L. D.,
- REV. GEO. W. WHITNEY,
- HON. JOSIAH QUINCY,
- REV. EDWARD NORTON.
- REV. CHARLES H. ROWE,
- CHAS. H. PORTER, ESQ.,
- REV. MARK TRAFTON.

With the exception of Mr. Adams, who may speak half an hour, the addresses will not exceed ten to fifteen minutes in length, and will be interspersed with music from the band and choir.

The tent will be furnished by Mr. A. Errickson, and will be used for the first time on this occasion. It is 115 feet in length, by 85 in width, and will comfortably seat one thousand persons. The arrangement of the tent and the seating of the audience, will be in charge of Mr. Albert Keating, assisted by a large corps of ushers. The audience will be admitted to the tent at 1.30 P. M.

BAND CONCERT.

At sunset the Band will be stationed near the Fire-works Grounds, South Quincy, in the rear of the Railroad depot and perform at intervals during the evening.

FIREWORKS.

The celebration will conclude with a display of Fireworks from the well-known Labratory of Mr. C. E. Marsten, under the general direction of Mr. C. Philip Tirrell. At eight o'clock the display will begin with a discharge of heavy shells, rockets, mines, Chinese and Indian White Fires. Exhibition pieces will follow in rapid succession; the whole arranged in fitting commemoration of this great occasion and forming a proper termination to the day's festivities.

In presenting this programme, the committee earnestly ask the hearty co-operation of the townspeople in making this celebration a grand success. The various features have been carefully arranged with a view to furnishing entertainment to the people generally, and with the hope of securing their presence and attention. The committee especially urge that residents of the different sections of the town do not confine their interest to those festivities which take place in their several localities; but, so far as possible, avail themselves of the entire programme as above presented.

And to the end that the celebration may be hearty and cordial, and that the citizens may unite with full hearts, as brethren and not as strangers, in this jubilee, residents of the town especially along the line of the procession, on the road to the Point, to the Fireworks, and to the Tent, are requested to decorate and illuminate their houses; to welcome and extend to their townspeople from other sections, facilities for observation, refreshment and rest; and in all possible ways, to contribute to the general enjoyment. So shall the celebration of the Nation's Centennial Birthday not only rekindle the fires of patriotism in our hearts, but unite us still closer in friendly and brotherly ties as citizens of the time-honored and beloved town of whose history and name we are so justly proud.

CHAMPION KNIGHTS OF THE TRIGGER. As we go to press we learn that on Thursday last the Tremont Club gold medals for the championship, were awarded to two of our Quincy disciples of Bogardus. The first to Mr. Franklin Curtis, the second to Mr. Thomas Curtis. We are in hopes to give the particulars in our next.

WILLARD SCHOOL. The following are the names of the teachers of the Willard School, at West Quincy, which is considered one of the best in town:—

A and B Grammar, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Woodman.
C Grammar, Mrs. Seth Dewing.
D Grammar, Miss Cora F. Nichols.
A Primary, Miss Mary Pierce.
B Primary, Miss E. A. Newcomb.
C Primary, Miss Nellie Fegan.
D Primary, Miss M. A. Spear.

These teachers who are all experienced hands, have done nobly the past year to have their scholars rank as high as any other school in town, and their efforts have been crowned with success, as the regular monthly report furnished by the Superintendent shows.

THE COLORADO BEETLE. We are sorry to chronicle the arrival of this pestilent insect in our midst. In many of our farms and gardens all that is green on the potato patches is rapidly disappearing. For the benefit of those afflicted, we copy the following:

"An enterprising farmer in Springfield has been studying the potato bug considerably, and has found that carbolic disinfecting powders are very obnoxious to it and harmless to the plants. He put the powder on the hills of potatoes infested with the bugs, and they immediately leave for a more congenial clime.

☞ The Unitarian Sunday School will have a "basket gathering," or pic-nic, at Mears', this afternoon. Carriages leave the Church from 12 to 1 o'clock. Fare 25 cents down and back, or 15 cents each way.

☞ Our well-known vocalist, Mr. Galen Bowditch, Jr., left Boston last night with the Boston Light Infantry, of which he is a member. The corps expect to reach Charleston, S. C., in time to take part in the Moultrie parade which takes place on the 28th inst.

☞ A precedent for our town fathers: The selectmen of Dedham have voted to allow the use of fire-crackers on the Fourth of July upon the owner's premises, but not upon public thoroughfares.

☞ A nice line of Tooth, Nail, Flesh and Hair Brushes, at A. G. Durgin & Co.'s Drug store, Sea street.

☞ Miss Henrietta Spear wore a dress at the Centennial Tea Party and Baby Show, on Thursday, which was worn by Governor Sullivan's wife on her marriage, in 1776.

☞ The graduating exercises of the High School will take place at the Town Hall, next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

☞ The Democrats hold their caucus at the Town Hall this evening.

☞ John Q. A. Wild and wife returned from the Centennial Exhibition, on Wednesday last, much delighted with their trip.

☞ There will be a friendly game of ball this afternoon at 2 o'clock, between the Tigers and Vultures. A fine game is expected.

Bunker Hill Anniversary.

The 17th of June, which was one of the loveliest days that Nature affords us, was ushered in at sunrise by the ringing of bells, which was repeated at noon and sunset.

Barnum's "greatest show on earth" passed through the principal streets, between 9 and 10 o'clock, attracting large crowds on every corner.

The several base ball clubs played match games through the day.

A review of the boats belonging to the Yacht Club, by the Commodore, took place at 9 A. M., after which the fleet consisting of twenty-three yachts, sailed down the river to Grape Island, presenting a beautiful scene to those assembled to witness it from the shores. Shortly after their arrival, about one hundred of the yachtsmen and their friends, witnessed an interesting game of base ball, and then partook of chowder, both fish and clam, with many other fixings which refreshed the hungry man. Everything passed off pleasantly, and all enjoyed the trip. The larger portion of the yachts returned to the Point about 3 P. M.

The feature of the afternoon was the base ball match between the Hose and Hook and Ladder companies which attracted a large crowd.

In the evening Barnum furnished amusement for thousands. Taken as a whole, our staid old town enjoyed herself well enough for a good-sized Fourth of July.

FIRE. About eleven o'clock on Friday night of last week, as Mr. Garrity, who is employed by private subscription, by a few of our citizens, was on his beat he discovered the beginning of what would probably have made a large and destructive conflagration. Fire had by some means been communicated to some charcoal, in the cellar under the block, formerly known as Mariposa Hall, on Hancock street, which is now owned by Henry H. Faxon, Esq., and is occupied by several parties, for business purposes. The cellar where the fire originated was occupied by Wm. B. Ryan, Plumber; the next story by Charles F. Pierce, manufacturer and dealer in tin and iron ware, and John H Veazie, Apothecary. On the first flight is the East Norfolk District Court room, Miss C. Milton, Milliner shop, and Mr. Phillips, Barber. The next flight is occupied by our photographic artist, E. A. Bass.

Mr. Garrity quickly gave the alarm and by the prompt and efficient services of the Fire Department, the losses were small. Damages have been awarded by the Insurance Companies, as follows:—W. B. Ryan, $125; Chas. F. Pierce, $200; John H. Veazie, $80; Henry H. Faxon, $200 on building.

A PLEASANT GATHERING. A grand affair took place in Jamaica Plain, at the house of Mr. Jacob Fottler, on Thursday evening of last week, the occasion being a grand party given by the sons and friends of this gentlemen as a surprise for him. The Belknap Brass Band was engaged for the occasion, and on arriving at Jamaica Plain they marched to the residence of Mr. Fottler, where they discoursed some fine music. They were then invited to partake of an excellent collation prepared for the party, consisting of strawberries, cakes, pies, meats, &c.

After supper was over, a few of the party examined the house, which is an ancient one; there is paper on the walls of one room which has been there for over ninety years, and it looks as good as new.

Mr. Fottler has occupied this house about forty years. The late Francis Williams of this town, was born in this house and was a brother of Mr. Fottler's wife.

The band then played a few more selections, and then bid them all good-night, taking with them the good wishes of all the participants.

☞ The promptness displayed by those in charge of the steam-pump, and the rapid manner in which Capt. Maxim's boys laid eleven hundred feet of hose and put two powerful streams of water upon the fire at W. B. Ryan's, elicited many encomiums from those who have heretofore considered both pieces of apparatus, the pump and Hose carriage, as mere playthings. Their work on this occasion reflects great credit upon Engineers Spear and Hall, under whose immediate direction they are kept.

☞ Carriage, Bathing and Shoemakers Sponges. Also, Chamois Skins, at A. G. Durgin & Co.'s, Drug store, Sea street.

West Quincy Items.

There will be a grand open air concert given by the Belknap Band at West Quincy, this evening.

Mr. Herbert Doble, of the firm of E. H. Doble & Co., started on Tuesday last for a visit to the Centennial Exhibition.

Quite a small party assembled at the depot, on Thursday morning, to attend the excursion of the Catholics of the Quincy parish to Nantasket beach.

The Hydrant Engine Company of East Milton have sent an invitation to the Granite Engine Company, to furnish them with water next Saturday evening, when they are to try their strength in throwing a stream over the new liberty pole recently erected, which is about 105 feet high.

A horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Michael Carey was stolen on Saturday evening last, while he was attending Barnum's circus. He hitched his horse to a fence opposite the tent before going in, and when he came out it was gone. The horse was found on Thursday last among a gang of thieves on Fleet street in Boston.

Miss Maria Connor a highly esteemed young lady was united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Thursday morning, to Michael Moynihan of Richmond, Va., by the Rev. F. A. Friguglietti. The presents they received were numerous and valuable, which shows that their friends kindly remembered them. After the ceremony the couple returned to the bride's home, where friends assembled to bid an affectionate adieu, and to wish them much happiness and joy in the future. In the afternoon they left for Philadelphia, where they are to spend a few weeks, thence to Richmond, where their home is for the future. J.

East Norfolk District Court.

BEFORE JUDGE BUMPUS. Patrick Flanigan was the first on the stand on Monday morning, and testified that Mrs. Ann Downes of Braintree, in consideration of the sum of "40 cints," paid to her by the said Patrick, sold and delivered him the money's worth of whiskey. Ann denied the charge. The Judge thought Sir Patrick had the right of the story, and brought poor Ann to grief, by ordering her to pay a fine of $50 and costs. At this she became dissatisfied and appealed, and James Downes and Michael McDermott came forward and became sureties in the sum of $500, for her appearance at Dedham in September, when we shall probably hear what she knows about Patrick.

No one appearing to show cause why the liquors seized by Constable Garey, at the Pine Point house, on the 1st inst, should not be forfeited for violation of the laws of the Commonwealth, they were accordingly ordered to be forfeited.

Timothy Lyons appeared in court by a polite invitation of Officer French, on Tuesday, and plead not guilty to the charge of exposing intoxicating liquors for sale; and also to a charge of selling liquor to James Sproule. Both cases were continued to Wednesday, when he was adjudged guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs, on each complaint.

J. Brosnan charged with larceny of a pair of shafts, &c., was discharged.

Ann Connors and Catherine Sullivan, both of Weymouth, for sale of intoxicating liquors, were each fined on Thursday $50 and costs. They appealed and gave the required bonds for their appearance at the Superior Court.

John Coffee again appeared, and on one complaint for selling liquor was discharged. Another case against him was called and continued to Friday, when he was again discharged.

The case of Timothy Lyons, reported yesterday was called for the purpose of recognizing the bonds; the bondsmen not being present Lyons was committed. Lyons was also ordered and committed to Dedham Jail for fifteen days for contempt of Court.

James O'Hearn of Braintree, on Friday, for a brutal assault on his mother-in-law Bridget McGinness was sentenced to the House of Correction for three months.

The Evil Fruits of Weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopœia or out of it. A wineglassful of the Bitters should be taken before each meal. J3.4w

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. The Sabbath School connected with this society, held their floral concert at their church last Sunday evening. The exercises consisted of recitations by the children and singing and speaking. As the children concluded the recitation of the verses assigned them each one stepped forward and placed a card, with a letter printed on it, on a handsome cross, made of flowers, and as the last letter was put in its place "The Rose of Sharon," stood out from its floral surroundings in all its beauty.

Messrs. Wasson, King and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Norton, made short but instructive addresses, on the beauties of the rose. The church was quite full and all seemed pleased with the entertainment.

PERSONAL. Capt. Charles F. Pierce and family, left us on Thursday last, for a week's sojourn at Martha's Vineyard. Epsom, N. H., May 3, 1870.

Dear Sir:—Having received great benefit from the use of PERUVIAN SYRUP, I am willing to add my testimony to the thousands of others constantly sounding its praise. During the late war I was in the army, and had the misfortune to be taken prisoner, and was confined in Salisbury and other Southern prisons several months, and became so much reduced in health and strength as to be a mere skeleton of my former self. On being released, I was a fit subject for a Northern hospital, where I remained some two months and then came home. My physician recommended and procured for me several bottles of PERUVIAN SYRUP, which I continued to use for several weeks, and found my health restored and my weight increased from ninety pounds to one hundred and fifty, my usual weight, and I have been in my usual good health ever since; and I can cheerfully recommend it in all cases of weakness and debility of the system, whether arising from an impure state of the blood, dyspepsia, or almost any other cause, believing it will in most cases give entire satisfaction.

Yours truly,
GEO. S. BIXBY.

Centaur Liniments. There is no pain which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true.—They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, pavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began.

WEST WINDSOR, Mich., Dec. 10, 1874.

"Mr. Riley Hance, of this place, an aged man, has had a wonderful cure by your Liniment, and he wants it made known for the benefit of mankind.—The following is his affidavit. Yours, truly, L. McQUOWN.

State of Michigan, County of Eaton, ss.

"Riley Hance, on his oath says: That for the last ten years he has been very severely afflicted with the Rheumatism, and has been for the last six years entirely helpless, insomuch that he could hardly move, and had given up all hopes of ever being helped.—And deponent further says, that about five months ago, I commenced the using of Centaur Liniment, and it has produced wonderful results, and now I feel almost as well as ever. RILEY HANCE."

"Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 10th day of Dec., 1874. } LEON McQUOWN. Jus of the peace."

Henry Black, of Ada, Hardin Co., Ohio, says:—"My wife has had the rheumatism for five years—no rest, no sleep—could scarcely walk across the floor. She is now completely cured by the use of Centaur Liniment. We all feel thankful to you, and recommend your wonderful medicine to all our friends."

"JEFFERSON, Mo., Nov. 10, 1873.

"MESSRS. ROSE & CO.:—Some time ago I was shipping horses to St. Louis. I got one badly crippled in the car. With great difficulty I got him to the stable on Fourth avenue. The stable-keeper gave me a bottle of your Centaur Liniment, which I used on my horse with such success that in two days it was as active and as well as any horse I had. I have been a veterinary surgeon for thirty years, but your Liniment heads everything I ever used. A. J. M'CARTHY, Veterinary Surgeon."

T. G. Burnham, P. M., Little Lake, Wis., writes: "Last summer I was induced to try a bottle of your Centaur Liniment on a bruised leg, and it gave instant relief. Since then I have used it in five cases, and it has not failed once."

Base Ball.

The game which attracted the most attention on the 17th, was that played at the Point between the Hose and Hook and Ladder nines. Considering that most of the players on both sides were in the field for the first time, it was a well-played game. The appearance and greenness of some of the players added much to the interest of the game.—Among the side-scenes to be remembered was the double somersault performance at the 1st base by Frank Packard and W. Stanley, and the comical appearance of the janitor as he dusted between the bases in his striped stockings. The only accident that occurred was caused by the surgeon attempting to stop one of Totman's pass balls with his nose, a performance never attempted by any professional that we have read of.

The game was called at 2 o'clock, and lasted two hours and forty minutes.

Umpire, Mr. Herbert E. Clapp. Scorer, Capt. J. M. Glover.

The people of Quincy have begun to take an interest in base ball; scarcely a week goes by but what four or five games are played. No one however takes a deeper interest than our shoemakers, who have some smart nines in the field. On Monday last, two nines from Mr. Graham's shop played a match game. The game was a fine one, and was noticeable for the small number of errors. Mr. James Collins sprained his arm while running to 1st base. Following is the score.

Poetry.

Wait and See.

When my boy with eager questions,
  Asking how, and where, and when,
Taxes all my store of wisdom,
  Asking o'er and o'er again
Questions oft to which the answers,
  Give to others still the key,
I have said, to teach him patience,
  "Wait, my little boy, and see."

And the words I taught my darling,
  Taught to me a lesson sweet;
Once when all the world seemed darkened
  And the storms about me beat,
In the "children's room" I heard him,
  With a child's sweet mimicry,
To the baby brother's questions
  Saying wisely, "Wait and see."

Like an angel's tender chiding,
  Came the darling's words to me,
Though my Father's ways are hidden,
  Bidding me to wait and see,
What are we but restless children,
  Ever asking what shall be?
And the Father, in his wisdom,
  Gently bids us, "Wait and see."

Agricultural, &c.

Thinning Corn.

Professor Roberts of the Cornell University made some experiments in growing corn upon the college farm last season, the results of which are valuable.—He planted three plots of three-sixteenths of an acre each with corn, and thinned the hills in one lot to three stalks, another to four stalks to a hill; the third was not thinned. The first plot yielded at the rate of 160 bushels, the second 125 bushels, and the third 106 bushels (of ears) to the acre.

Mr. Roberts states as the result of many experiments prior to these, at the Iowa Agricultural College, that the heaviest crops of corn were made by growing three stalks to a hill, and that two stalks to a hill will produce more corn than five stalks. If every stalk produces an ear, and corn is planted three feet apart each way, there will be nearly 100 bushels of shelled grain per acre. To grow maximum crops of corn then it is only necessary to grow one ear upon a stalk, and ears of such a size that a hundred of them make a bushel of grain. In view of this it is strange that with so prolific a grain as corn, a yield of 100 bushels per acre should be considered as something almost impossible to be obtained.

Water as Food.

Alexander Hyde says:—"Next in importance to the air we breathe comes water, for the sustentation of animal life, and yet how few farmers appreciate the full value either of air or water for their households or barnholds! Much has been said about the value of air, and the community are pretty generally impressed with the idea that pure air is essential to the health of both man and beast; we wish we could impress the idea also that pure water is the next essential constituent of health. We have this week seen the father of a family carried to his grave, while the mother and son are prostrate with that terrible scourge, typhoid fever, all apparently the result of drinking impure water."

Poultry in Large Numbers.

About 100 hens are as many as a farmer can keep profitably, unless he gives special attention to the business; and then it is a very unsafe business, owing to the liability of the fowls to become diseased. In no case has any person either in the United States, or in England or France, ever kept 1,000 fowls successfully in one yard, or forage range; but it has been done by keeping them in lots of 100 to 150 in separate places, extending over a number of acres of land, each lot having a separate roosting house 20 to 30 rods apart. No man should attempt the keeping of over 100 or 200 fowls, until he is thoroughly informed in regard to all the difficulties in the business, as he would be sure to lose the most of the money invested in it.

Anecdotes.

A little four-year old remarked to her mamma, on going to bed: "I am not afraid of the dark."

"No, of course you are not," replied her mamma, "for it can't hurt you."

"But, mamma, I was a little afraid once when I went into the pantry in the dark to get a cookie."

"What were you afraid of?" asked her mamma.

"I was afraid I couldn't find the cookies."

"Harry, give me a bite of your apple," said one little fellow to another.

"No," refused Harry, eating away rapidly. "You wouldn't like this; it is a cooking apple—and I never give a fellow a bite of a cooking apple."

Young Mr. Heavyswell, just arrived from London, went to one of the largest hotels in Philadelphia to inquire about rooms.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk, "we can accommodate you, and would be pleased to have you patronize us." Handing a key to a brother clerk, he said, "Mr. Smith, show the gentleman 504."

"'Pon me soul, you know," exclaimed Mr. Heavyswell, "I really haven't time to look at so many, you know; suppose you show me a specimen."

A man coming home one night rather late, a little more than "half-seas-over," feeling thirsty, procured a glass of water and drank it. In doing so he swallowed a small ball of silk that lay in the bottom of the tumbler, the end of the thread catching in his teeth. Feeling something in his mouth, and not knowing what it was, he began to pull at the end; and the little ball unwinding, he soon had several yards of thread in his hand, and still no end, apparently. Terrified, he shouted at the top of his voice. "Wife! wife! I say, wife, come here! I am all unraveling."

Young Swell—"I should like to have my moustache dyed."
Polite Barber—"Certainly. Did you bring it with you?"

JOHNSTON'S PATENT

Dry Sized Kalsomine

READY FOR USE.

MANUFACTURED AT

DRY KALSOMINE AND

Fresco Paint Works.

TRADE MARK

The highest testimonials and medals awarded for two years, by the American Institute, New York.

WE invite your attention to our PATENT DRY SIZED KALSOMINE and FRESCO PAINTS, for Whitening, Tinting and Decorating walls and ceilings, knowing that they meet the wants of Painters, Housekeepers and others throughout the country.

They are carefully prepared from the finest selected raw materials; all of the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and they are offered for sale in a finely pulverized condition, simply requiring to be mixed with water, to fit them for use.

They are made of the Purest White, and in gradations of all the leading and fashionable Tints, Shades and Colors; thus adapting them to all tastes and uses.

They are sold from sample card, and all the tints, shades and colors are warranted. The advantages of our preparations are manifold.

FIRST.—Their cheapness.

SECOND.—They are ready for immediate use, requiring no experiment whatever, as the color and quality are determined before they go into the hands of the consumer.

THIRD.—They possess strong disinfecting properties, and can be effectually used in cleansing and rendering healthful, apartments, the walls of which are impregnated with the germs of disease.

FOURTH.—They can be mixed and used by any one.

FIFTH.—They can be applied with the greatest ease and facility, and when dry will present a smooth, rich and even surface, which will not rub or scale form the wall.

SIXTH.—If used according to directions, they will work well upon an absorbent surface; hence the necessity as heretofore, of preparing walls to stop their suction, (except in extreme cases) is overcome.

SEVENTH.—They will save the waste of materials and loss of time common with the old mode of mixing to produce desirable tints, etc.

EIGHTH.—They will keep for years without change in color or quality.

They are packed for sale in strong manilla paper packages, of box form, holding (6) pounds, with full directions for use. They are also packed in bulk, in barrels of about (250) pounds, and in half-barrels of about (125) pounds, and being in a dry condition, they can be transported cheaply.

They are the only cheap and reliable preparations for the purpose, ever offered to the public. A pail of this Kalsomine can be mixed in five minutes. A 6 pound package will make a gallon of fluid Kalsomine, which will cover a surface of over 400 square feet, on a hard finished wall, with one coat.

Painters and Decorators who will give these goods an impartial trial, will find their interest best served by using them. Store-keepers will find these goods to meet with ready sale and universal approval.

We keep on hand 3 sizes of cases for sample orders, in which case we pack 4, 8 & 12 six pound packages. We will send either of the foregoing sized cases by Express (C. O. D.) to parties who may wish to give the goods a trial before ordering largely.

Any further information that may be desired, will be promptly furnished by

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1876.

☞ Last week Mrs. Stewart donated to fifty different benevolent societies and institutions in New York city, sums varying from $500 to $2500 each, aggregating $74,500.

☞ About twenty-five old English coins, the oldest bearing the dates of 1697 and 1700, were recently found by workmen while digging for the widening of the street in front of the residence of Elias Ames, Esq., in Canton.

☞ An exchange remarks that the average age of a farmer is sixty-five years, and a printer only thirty-three; the former should pay the latter promptly.

☞ Charleston, S. C., has been paying $52,000 a year for having her streets lighted, but a company has secured a contract to give her better light at $10,000.

☞ Crusty says that the list of marriages in the newspapers ought to be put under the head of "Ring Frauds."

Mrs. Ira Mead, of Greenwich, who is one hundred and six years old, says:—"Few people die after they get to be a hundred."

☞ Colonel M. E. Thornton, an Atlanta, Ga., journalist and politician, has won a two hundred dollar bet by eating a quail a day for thirty successive days. He experienced nausea with the eleventh bird, and thereafter only accomplished his task with great difficulty.

☞ Two gentlemen reside in South Abington who are graduates of Brown University, and are over ninety years of age. They were born in that town, are members of the same church, were partners in practicing law, served together as Representatives in the Legislature, and are connected by family ties.

☞ The will of the late Wm. B. Astor has been proved in England, where the personal estate is sworn under £400.000, which appears to have been invested in British consols.

☞ The hennery of B. E. Wright, of Plympton, was invaded by foxes on Thursday night, and thirty-eight young turkeys, twenty-one well grown chickens and one hen were killed by them.

☞ The "heathen Chinee" has introduced a new industry in San Francisco—the manufacture of the fire-crackers. Two factories, with a capital of $15,000 invested, turned out last year the value of $30,000, using $7500 worth of raw material and paying out $5000 for labor.

☞ An old lady at Attica, Ind., just to show what she could do, filled a goblet with rich cream, and with a teaspoon churned butter enough for breakfast for a family of six.

☞ The disproportion between the weight of a small boy and the noise of his boot-heels as he walks out of church at the quietest moment is a curious problem in dynamics.

☞ That was a smart boy who, when asked by his teacher to give an instance of inverse ratio, replied, "In proportion as the sun goes up this morning, so does your collar go down."

☞ A young woman of Cleveland, Ohio, objects to the new silver coins because the Goddess of Liberty is dressed just as she was fifteen years ago, and "that's so horribly old-fashioned."

Hadn't Time.

A citizen of Vicksburg, Miss., who wanted a few hours work done about his yard the other day, accosted a working man and inquired if he would like the job.

"I'd like to do it, but I haven't time," was the answer.

"Why, you don't seem to be doing anything.'

"I don't, eh! Well, now, I'm going a-fishin, to-day. To-morrow I'm going over the river. Next day I'm going a-huntin'. Next day I've got to get my boots fixed. Next day I'm going to mend the table, and I don't know how I'm going to get through the week unless I hire a man to help me?"

Mr. Blackboard has been arrested in North Carolina for not paying his debts. Why don't his creditors take some chalk and draw on him?

How a Girl did Sums.

Jennie Lawson is a member of the second class in the 18th street female grammar school. Recently a number of arithmetical examples were given out for solution, but three of them, in percentage, requiring long processes of division, resisted all Jennie's efforts to secure the correct answer. This circumstance seemed to distress the child, and after working through them again and again without success she went home determined by persistent effort to find out where her error was, and she continued to strive until long after the rest of the family had retired. Toward midnight, her mother, who slept in an adjoining room, called to her daughter that she had better go to bed, lest she should be late in rising next day. The girl at once retired, and in a few moments was fast asleep. About an hour afterward, Mrs. Lawson was again awakened by a sudden noise in her daughter's bedchamber which was then in entire darkness. She called, but receiving no answer, arose to see what was the matter. Jennie was sitting at her desk, and had apparently just completed some work on her slate, the noise having been made by the falling of a ruler from the table to the floor. The girl was fast asleep. Mrs. Lawson did not wake her at that time, and on the following day it was after noon before the girl could be roused from the deep sleep in which she seemed to be. Upon awakening, Jennie spoke of the problems, and expressed her intention of making a further trial at their solution. Upon getting the slate she found them completely solved in her own hand, each line neatly ruled, and the figuring without the slightest error. At this she was greatly surprised. Her last knowledge of the puzzling examples was of leaving them unsolved on the night before. Of her performances in her sleep she knew when awake absolutely nothing, and her mother not having mention the incident, left her the more bewildered. Afterwards the girl brought the work to school and related the incident attending it to her teacher. The room was entirely dark, the girl soundly asleep during the working out of the text examples. She had never before shown any symptoms of sleep-working, nor have any of her relatives been so affected.—New York World.

As You Sow so Will You Reap.

The man who undertakes to live two lives will find that he is living but one, and that one is a life of deception. Causes will be true to their effects. That which you sow you will reap. If you live to the flesh, to the passions, to the corrupt inclinations, you may depend upon it that the fruit which is in store for you will be that which belongs to these things. There can be no doubt as to what the harvest will be. If you think that after your day's business is done you can shut the blinds and carry on your orgies in secret with evil companions; if you think that you can serve the devil by night and then go forth and look like a sweet and virtuous young man, that goes in the best society, that does not drink, nor gamble, nor commit any vice, then the devil has his halter about your neck, and leads you the stupidest fool in all the crowd. You deceive nobody but yourself. There is an expression in your eyes that tells stories. Passions stain clear through. A man might as well expect to take nitrate of silver—whose nature is to turn him to a lead color—and not have the doctor know it, as to expect that he can form evil habits and pursue mischievous courses and not have it known. It does not need a sheriff to search out and reveal the kind of life that you are living. Every law of God in nature is an officer after you. It does not require a court, judge or jury, to try and condemn you. All nature is a court room, and every principle thereof is a part of that court which tries and condemns you. Do not think that there can be such a monstrous misadjustment of affairs as that you can do the work of the devil and have the renumeration of an angel—H. W. Beecher.

A Bothered Darkey.

In a Detroit barber's shop the other day, a purblind negro arose from his seat to take one of the barber's chairs, when, looking at one of the pier glasses, he saw, as he supposed, another gentleman about to take the chair. The old darkey at once apologized for rising out of his turn, and was about to sit down, when he noticed his image about to do the same. He again rose, and the mysterious stranger followed. This was repeated two or three times, much to the darkey's disgust, and he finally yelled out: "If it's your turn, why don't you sit down?" amidst shouts of laughter from the rest of the customers.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1876.

A Belligerent Quaker.

In Columbia county, Ohio, resides an old fellow renowned for his belligerent disposition, who is known as Friend Shavey. Born and bred a Quaker,he was long since read out of meeting on account of his quarrelsome propensities; but he still pertinaciously clings to the plain clothes and plain language of his early days, possibly as a protection against the wrath he was continually provoking by his overbearing and irritating demeanor. He is always the owner of the crossest dog in the neighborhood, the most troublesome, breachy steers, etc., and is continually in hot water with some of his neighbors in consequence of the depredations committed by his unruly stock.

A short time since, Van Amburg's menagerie, traveling through Columbia, was obliged to pass his residence. A little before daylight, Nash, the keeper of the elephant, Tippo Saib, as he was passing over the road with his elephant, discovered this pseudo Quaker, seated upon a fence by the roadside, watching a bull which he had turned upon the road, and which was pawing and bellowing, and throwing up dust generally. In fact, from the fury of the animal's demonstrations, one would really have taken him for one of the identical breed that butted a locomotive off a bridge.

"Take that bull out of the way," shouted Nash, as he approached.

"Proceed with thy elephant," was the reply.

"If you don't take that bull out of the way he'll get hurt," continued Nash, approaching, while the bull redoubled his belligerent demonstrations.

"Don't trouble thyself about the bull, but proceed with thy elephant," retorted friend Savery, rubbing his hands with delight at the prospect of a scrimmage—the old fellow having great confidence in the invincibility of his bull, which was really the terror of the whole country around.

Tippo Saib came on with his uncouth, shambling gait; the bull lowered his head and made a charge directly at the elephant. Old Tippo, without even pausing in his march, gave his cow-catcher a sweep, catching the bull on the side, crushing in his ribs with his enormous tusks, and then raised him about thirty feet in the air, the bull striking upon his head as he came down, breaking his neck, and killing him instantly.

"I'm afraid your bull has bent his neck a little," shouted Nash, as he passed on.

"Bent the devil!" shouted old Shavey, with a troubled look at his defunct bull. "Thy elephant is too heavy for my beast, but thee will not make so much out of the operation as thee supposes. I was going to take my family to thy show, but I will see thee and thy show blowed to blazes before I will go one step; and now thee may proceed with thy elephant and be d—d, please,"—the "please" being added as Shavey took a second look at the proportions of the stalwart elephant keeper.

A School Girl's Composition.

In a dingy room sat an old man writing with a Roman nose and a tall hat.—Not far from him a broken-backed chair supported his daughter with rickety legs, and cracked rings. In the same room was an old woman blowing the fire with a lean cat under an old stove, being the wife of the old man writing with the Roman nose. In a corner might be seen a hungry boy eating onions with bow legs and red hair from a table which he swallowed without chewing. The whole scene was overlooked by an old clock, ornamented with Pocahontas saving John Smith, three legs covered with cobwebs and wound up every eight days by the man with a brass key. Ever and anon the door was rattled by a cold dog without any hinges or knob. Through a broken window may be seen a woman cutting cabbage with a baby in her arm, through the shattered panes of which daylight feebly shone. Another window looked out upon the street where stood a little man wiping the sweat from his face with a hand-organ carrying a monkey on top, by grinding which he had thought, in vain, to get a few cents from the old man writing with a tall hat. Such were the lodgings of the miser, being the old man with the Roman nose so squalid and miserable that it looked as if no thrifty broom had ever entered there.

The ladies of Rockland have fitted up a reading room for the free use of the Temperance Reform Club in that town.

The Yorkshire Boy and the Archbishop.

The Mirror tells the following story about the Archbishop of York and a smart little Yorkshire urchin. His Grace distributed the prize, at a Leeds Ragged School, and subsequently, when riding in the vicinity, he came across a youngster collecting road dirt whom he thought he recognized. Thereupon the following conversation ensued:

Archbishop,—"Boy, I know your face; you were at the Leeds Ragged School, and obtained a prize for drawing?"

Urchin,—"Y'a, mon, I were"

Archbishop,—"I hope you still keep up your studies in that art?"

Urchin,—"Y'a, mon, I do; look you yeere"—(pointing to a model made of the material he was collecting.)

Archbishop, —(with astonishment.) "What do you call that?"

Urchin,—"Ah, mon, that's a model of a church; and them's the pews, and there's the vestry—and that's the poolpit."

Archbishop, (smiling)—"Very clever, I declare; but where is the parson?"

Urchin.—"A'ye, mon, it takes a deal o' muck to make a pa'son." His Grace rode on.

The Number Three.

When the world was created, we find land, water and sky; sun, moon, and stars. Noah had but three sons; Jonah was three days in the whale's belly; our Saviour was three days in the tomb; Peter denied his Saviour thrice. There were three patriarchs—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Abraham entertained three angels. Samuel was called three times. "Simon, lovest thou me?" was repeated three times. Daniel was thrown into a den with three lions, for praying three times a day. Shadrach, Meshech and Abednego were rescued from the flames of the oven. The Ten Commandments were delivered on the third day. Job had three friends. St. Paul speaks of faith hope, and charity, these three.—Those famous dreams of the baker and butler were to come to pass in three days; and Elijah prostrated himself three times on the body of the dead child. Samson deceived Delilah three times before she discovered the source of his strength.—The sacred letters of the cross are I. H. S.; so also the Roman motto was composed of three words, "In hoc Signo."—There are three conditions for man: the earth, heaven and hell; there is also the Holy Trinity. In mythology there were three Oracles, Cerberus, with his three heads; Neptune, holding his three-toothed staff; the Oracle of Delphia cherished with veneration the Tripod; and the nine Muses sprang from three. In nature we have male, female and offspring; morning, noon, and night. Trees group their leaves in threes; there is three-leaved clover. We have fish, flesh and fowl. What could be done in mathematics without the aid of the triangle? Witness the power of the wedge. In logic three premises are indispensable.—It is a common phrase that "three is a lucky number."

Long Credit.

A party of wits once stopped at a tavern. When the feast was over, one of the number called in the hostess. "Angelique," he said, "I am going to give you a lesson in Astronomy. Have you not heard of the great Platonic year, when everything shall return to its first condition? Know, then, that in sixteen thousand years, we shall be here again, on the same day, and at the same hour. Will you give us credit till then?" The hostess, however, had her reply. "I am perfectly willing," she replied, "but it is just sixteen thousand years since you was here before, and you left without paying! Settle the old score, and I will trust you on the new!"

Scraps.

The best education one can obtain is the education experience gives. In passing through life learn everything you can. It will all come in play. Don't be frightened away from any pursuit because you have only little time to devote to it. If you can't have any more, a smattering is infinitely better than nothing. Even a slight knowledge of the arts, sciences, and languages, opens up a whole world of thought. A little systematic endeavor—one hour, or even half an hour a day—and a man may be considered learned before he dies. Learn thoroughly what you do learn, be it ever so little, and you may speak of it with confidence. A few clearly defined facts and ideas are worth a whole library of uncertain knowledge.

It is said that there are 10,000 men out of work in Boston.

Ike Partington Bets.

"Where did you get so much money, Isaac?" said Mrs. Partington, as he shook a handful of copper coins before her, grinning all the time like a rogue as he is. "Have you found the cornucopia, or has anybody given you a request?" She was a little anxious.

"I got it from bets," said he, chucking the coin in the air and allowing half to clatter on the floor.

"Got them from Bets, did you?" said the old lady. "And who is Bets, that she should give you money? She must be some low creature, or you would not speak of her so disrespectfully. I hope you will not be led away by any desolate companions, Isaac, and become an unworthy member of society."
